California and Ohio Vote Awaited.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 2.—[Special.]—The race for the Republican nomination for President may be decided by the outcome of the California primary next Tuesday.

At all events the California primary and the Ohio primary a week later are likely to influence profoundly what the Republicans say and do in their national convention at Cleveland next month.

Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas is forging closer and closer to the nomination. He now leads the entire field of contenders for the honor of leading the fight against the reëlection of President Roosevelt.

Politicians to Scan Returns.

He has gained the extraordinary advantage without competing formally in any primary election. The California primary will be the first one in which his name appears as a candidate for the Republican nomination. Hence the politicians will be eagerly scanning the returns from California next Tuesday to get some notion of the popularity of Gov. Landon and of the probable effect upon his political fortunes.

If he should win the primary the friends of Landon would have good reason to feel that it is all over but the shouting. There would be 44 delegates to add to the approximately 200 the Kansas governor already has chalked up to his credit. But more important than that would be the psychological effect of a victory in an important state, coming on top of recent demonstrations of the great popularity of Mr. Landon in Massachusetts and other parts of the country. His candidacy would acquire an increased momentum that would be exceedingly difficult for his rivals to arrest.

Loss by No Means Fatal.

If the governor should lose the primary the effect upon his candidacy would be unfavorable, but by no means fatal. It would be a serious blow to be rejected by the party electorate in the first primary in which his name was formally submitted to the voters.

The political situation that has been produced in the California primary, however, is so complicated that, while a Landon victory would be clear cut and unmistakable, an apparent defeat of the governor would be considerably qualified and might turn out to be not much of a reverse after all.

Landon is a candidate on a slate of delegates instructed to vote for him at Cleveland till the cows come home. This slate of instructed Landon delegates was put into the field by W. R. Hearst and Gov. Frank F. Merriam. Gov. Landon at first said he would not enter the California primary because he did not want to place himself in the position of being an active seeker of the nomination. He did not repudiate the Hearst-Merriam move, however, and thereby gave it tacit consent.

Two Opposing Slates.

Opposing the Landon slate is a slate of uninstructed delegates which is being supported by former President Hoover and other elements of the regular Republican organization. Numerous members of this slate, however, have stated that they are favorable to Landon. Thus it falls out that if the instructed slate wins Landon will get all the delegates; if the uninstructed slate wins, Landon will get some of them.

Overshadowing the entire contest is a battle of newspapers. Battling for the instructed slate is the Hearst press, a mighty power in the state of its origin. Fighting for the uninstructed slate are the Los Angeles Times, San Francisco Chronicle, and almost all the other important non-Hearst papers. They are fighting the attempt of Hearst, who is or was a Democrat, to dominate the Republican party in California. They expressly abjure any antagonism to Landon and emphasize that many of the prospective delegates of the uninstructed slate are partial to the governor.

Interpretations Might Vary.

Because of this aspect of the situation the defeat of the instructed slate would be widely construed, and with

WINS KENTUCKY DERBY BY HEAD FROM BREVITY

Indian Broom Third; Suspend 3 Jockies.

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Louisville, Ky., May 2.—"Bold Venture! Why it's Bold Venture, Bold Venture!" swelled in unison a chorus of 60,000 voices at Churchill Downs this afternoon.

"Bold Venture by a head, Brevity by six lengths, Indian Broom by three lengths over Coldstream," droned the businesslike voice of the official chartmaker in the press coop atop the clubhouse to his assistant taking the call.

Such was the sixty-second Kentucky Derby of fourteen starters, marked by mishap at the start, punctuated by more than the usual run of racing luck and interference along its route, and climaxed by a thrilling finish in which Bold Venture, a long shot paying $43 in the mutuels, held on long enough to outfinish the odds-on choice, Brevity, which made up many lengths and which was considered by most critics the best colt in the race.

The huge crowd bet $472,750 on the Derby and a total of $1,269,880 for all the day's races. This was the largest mutuel handle on Derby day in the last six years.

Racing Luck Counts.

It was a Derby which in after years' discussion will rank with that of 1933 in which Don Meade on Brokers Tip and H. L. Fisher on Head Play fought each other to the very wire. It was not that kind of rough finish, however. Breaks of racing luck, which proved such vital factors in the result, took place at the start and again shortly after the field had passed the stand for the first time.

Despite several fractious post actors, the field was dispatched in short order. Immediately a groan arose from the crowd. There was bumping, marked bumping. Granville of the Belair stud emerged without his rider and cantered after his field. Brevity went nearly to his knees and was ninth after a quarter mile had been traversed.

Brevity in Jam.

From the press stand, it appeared as if Indian Broom bore out and Coldstream bore in, catching Granville and Brevity and two others in the jam. This viewpoint was borne out by later action of the stewards, who suspended for 15 days for rough riding Jocky George Burns on Indian Broom and Jocky Nick Wall on Coldstream. Ira Hanford, pilot of the winner, was included in the 15 day suspensions. His specific offense was said to have been cutting off Bien Joli on the far turn.

Not only was the race a freak Derby of racing luck, it was a freak Derby of mutuel prices. Bold Venture paid $43, $11.80, and $6.60 across the board. This is the highest priced winner since Exterminator returned $59.20 for $2 in 1918.

Brevity, at equivalent odds of 80 to 100, was the shortest priced favorite within recent memory. Yet Brevity paid $5 for place and $4 to show, both prices better than he would have paid to win.

Indian Broom's Price Drops.

Indian Broom was $3.80 to show. He was the surprise of the betting at equivalent odds of 5 to 1, whereas his opening price was 15 to 1.

Brevity came from tenth place at

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

MOSCOW, May 2.—Soviet Russia gave itself up to pleasure today by dancing in the streets, visiting friends or picknicking in the country. For this post-May day holiday is one day in the year on which the ordinary citizen can forget industry and politics and simply enjoy himself.

Moscow is like one great country fair. The streets are thronged with men, women and children in their best clothes. Loudspeakers on every corner blare jazz or weird native music from some far away province. Gayety and good living have been chosen as the theme of this year's celebration by the communist party.

No doubt with the idea of impressing foreign visitors as well as soviet citizens that this is now a land of plenty gayly decorated booths stocked with foodstuffs and toys have been opened. The authorities also have put "auto stores" in operation. These are cars with a rear end like the observation platform of an American train. There clerks stand between the show windows displaying tempting food and delicacies. But attempts to buy a can of salmon, ice cream and cookies failed. The clerks whispered the salmon cans were empty and that there was no ice cream. Toys, such as one buys for a few cents in the United States, are so expensive workers are unable to purchase them.

MRS. ROOSEVELT TELLS SCOUTS OF BATHING BABIES

Washington, D. C., May 2.—(AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today swapped housekeeping experiences with Girl Scouts celebrating "better homes" week at their "little house."

"I learned to cook on an old-fashioned coal stove, much more complicated than this," Mrs. Roosevelt told Scouts Anne Betts and Laverne Kleinwachter, who were baking a big pan of "four hour rolls."

"Did you ever bathe a baby?" the Scouts asked Mrs. Roosevelt.

"I've had six children—I couldn't get through that without bathing one," was her answer.

Mayor Floors Editor, Critic of Roosevelt

Delegates led Bettwy from the stage. Mathews regained his feet and attempted to continue his attack on the administration, but his remarks were drowned out by booing and shouting. Later, due to a factional fight over choice for national committeeman, police were called to maintain order.

Returns to Apologize.

The fiery Nogales mayor, twice candidate for governor of Arizona, returned to the platform a few minutes later and apologized for "losing my temper."

"It would not be a Democratic convention without a fight," he said. "I am sorry I had to be the first to start something."

Mathews refused to file charges.

The publisher, a Pima county delegate, had announced before the convention opened that he would address the delegates in opposition to ratifying the administration and sending a Roosevelt instructed delegation to the national convention.

Refuses to Hear Speech.

"I realize that you don't want to hear what I am going to say," he began. "I know it will not change a single vote, yet I am glad that Democrats still recognize a man's right to express his opinion."

The crowd soon set up a deafening din.

"Sit down. Shut up," they yelled.

"The bare fact that you people here are showing this attitude toward my efforts to make this speech shows how the influence of this administration is crushing expression of opinion," he said.

Bettwy leaped to the platform and hit the publisher.

THREE WOMEN ARE BURNED TO DEATH IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Fort Wayne, Ind., May 2.—[Special.]—A mother and her two daughters were burned to death here this afternoon when the automobile in which they were riding was overturned and caught fire.

The women had stopped to pick up a hitch hiker when a car driven by Alvin Thomas of Waterville, O., rammed into the rear of their machine. The impact overturned their machine causing the gasoline tank to explode.

The women were identified as Mrs. John Swisher, 55 years old, of Antwerp, O., and her two daughters, Dorothy, 14 years old, and Vesta, 30 years old.

Occupants of passing cars attempted to rescue them, but were driven back by the flames. Fire trucks arrived too late to be of any aid. The women were burned beyond recognition.

SHIPS HIT IN FOG; FEAR ONE SINKS; CREW IS RESCUED

New York, May 3 [Sunday].—(AP)—The freighter City of Auckland reported early today she had been in collision with the steamer Canadian Planter in Nantucket sound, and had taken off her crew of 40.

The Auckland first reported to the coast guard she had sunk the Planter, but sent a subsequent message indicating that because of the fog it was not definite that the vessel sank.

The Auckland radioed she was anchored near Cross Rip light vessel awaiting fair weather, and said the assistance of the coast guard cutter Mojave, which had been sent to her aid, "was not needed at present."

The City of Auckland said she was taking no water. The Planter was bound from New York to Boston from Australian ports with a cargo of wool and coffee. She was in command of Capt. B. W. C. Manning and carried a crew of about 40 men, her agents here said. The City of Auckland sailed from Halifax, N. S., for Boston and New York April 27.

Scared Karpis Held in Cell at St. Paul

St. Paul, Minn., May 2.—(AP)—Alvin Karpis, long hunted as leader of a gang charged with carrying out two of the nation's major kidnapings was returned today to the scene of those crimes after being seized last night in a bloodless department of justice coup in New Orleans.

Karpis, the nation's most widely sought criminal, had boasted he "wouldn't be taken alive," but J. Edgar Hoover, head of the federal bureau of investigation, who led the capture and immediately after escorted the prisoner here by airplane, said Karpis was "so damned scared he couldn't talk."

Not a shot was fired by the heavily armed agents who ended a three year search.

Delivered by Airplane.

Karpis was brought here by Hoover and eight federal agents on a 12 hour sleepless airplane trip marked by detours and hazardous flying weather.

Shackled with heavy chains on the long ride, the prisoner often dubbed the latest public enemy No. 1, was rushed under heavy guard to the federal building upon arrival.

Hoover left early this afternoon by plane for New York. When his chartered ship paused briefly at Chicago, he announced, according to a wire from that city:

"Karpis' arrest was brought about entirely by department of justice agents. There were no tips from outsiders and no reward will be paid."

$7,000 Rewards Offered.

Rewards totaling $7,000 had been offered for the apprehension and conviction of the gang leader.

When he would be arraigned and whether he would be tried first for the $200,000 kidnaping of Banker Edward G. Bremer or the seizure of William Hamm Jr., brewing company head, who paid $100,000 for his freedom, District Attorney George F. Sullivan was unable to say. Hamm was kidnaped June 15, 1933, and Bremer, Jan. 17, 1934.

At any rate, authorities in Washington said the 26 year old ex-convict faces the prospect of spending the remainder of his life in Alcatraz Island prison, if convicted of either kidnaping.

Others Seek Custody.

At least two other demands for custody of Karpis were indicated. Hoover told newsmen Karpis was wanted for three kidnapings, including those of Bremer and Hamm, the slaying of a sherif, 16 bank robberies, three or four small holdups and complicity in the slaying of "three or four other fellows."

Postal authorities say they would like to try Karpis for the $46,000 mail train robbery at Garrettsville, O., last Nov. 7, if he did not receive a death sentence on some other charge. Fred Hunter, also wanted for the Garrettsville holdup, and a woman were captured with Karpis.

ROYAL FAMILY FLEES; RIOTERS BESIEGE ALIENS

U. S. Official's Home Is Pillaged.

DJIBOUTI, French Somaliland, May 3.—(Sunday.)—(AP)—Reports from Addis Ababa early today said Italian planes had dropped pamphlets announcing that a son of Lij Yasu, grandson of the great Ethiopian emperor Menelik, would be the "new" Ethiopian emperor. The proposed ruler to succeed the fleeing Emperor Haile Selassie was said to be living in Tajura, French Somaliland. Lij Yasu, who succeeded to the Ethiopian throne in 1913 after Menelik's death, was overthrown in 1916.

BULLETIN.

DJIBOUTI, French Somaliland, May 2.—(U. P.)—The imperial train bearing Emperor Haile Selassie's family to safety arrived tonight at Direwada, on the railway about halfway between Addis Ababa and the sea. It was reported here that the emperor was not aboard but had remained near Addis Ababa to arrange with his governmental advisers the final stages of the war.

Washington, D. C., May 2.—(AP)—Fire, pillage, and riot raged in Ethiopia's ancient capital of Addis Ababa tonight as, in the absence of government, bands of plunderers poured through the town.

CORNELIUS VAN H. ENGERT.
[Copyright: Harris & Ewing.]

The royal family had fled the city in anticipation of an attack by advancing Italian troops.

A report radioed to the state department by the American minister, Cornelius Van H. Engert, said the center of the city was burning fiercely; that three stray bullets had struck the American legation, but none of its occupants had been hurt.

Reports Fire Spreading.

In his latest message, at 11 p. m. Addis Ababa time [3 p. m. Chicago time], Engert said the fire was spreading, but that its direction was not toward the American legation.

He reported that a day-long stream of thousands of natives had evacuated the city.

Most of the damage in the capital appeared to have been done, he said, by a comparatively few rowdy elements who easily could have been checked by a small police force in the beginning.

Engert closed his 11 p. m. message with the information that he would send no further bulletins until tomorrow morning unless the American legation should be endangered.

Home of U. S. Consul Sacked.

In a message filed at 5 p. m. [Addis Ababa time] he reported the home of an American vice consul, W. M. Cramp of Philadelphia, had been sacked of all his possessions. The fate of the possessions of Vice Consul Robert L. Hunter of Milbank, S. D., was unknown.

The minister said Ben Ames, American correspondent for the United Press, reported to him that he and his interpreter received sword cuts while driving through the crowd in the flaming capital.

At 8 p. m. [Addis Ababa time] Engert reported that members of the Seventh Day Adventists and American missions had transmitted word to him two hours earlier that all was well and they apparently were in no imminent danger. Their report came from headquarters of these missions, where most of the missionaries remained.

53 Americans in Capital.

Engert said he had been unable to communicate with the Sudan interior mission, which is a long way from the city.

Engert said several bodies of Ethiopions had been seen in the streets, together with numerous wounded persons. But he said that so far he had heard of no victims among the several hundred foreigners in the capital. Among these foreigners are believed to be 53 American men, women and children.

Five Americans, Engert reported, had taken refuge in the British legation and three others were in the American legation.

In addition the American legation was giving temporary shelter to 30 Greeks and six Russians, men, women, and children. Engert's wife and two children were also in the legation.

Even before flames began sweeping the flimsy structures of Addis Ababa, Engert said that the situation rapidly was getting out of hand. Police protection had broken down, most of the shops had been looted, and there was firing on all sides.

Rioters Supplied with Guns.

Although he said there had been no specific anti-foreign demonstrations, movement about the streets was extremely hazardous. Apparently large quantities of rifles and ammunition abandoned by government and police officials were in the hands of the rioters.

Engert said no bullets had been fired directly into the American legation compounds, describing those which hit legation buildings as ricochets.

All local telephone communication was severed, but Engert said he was endeavoring to maintain contact by messengers with the other legations in Addis Ababa and with the headquarters of American missions.

Until today the government had been in communication with Addis Ababa only twice daily at short intervals through the naval communications system, but because of the present emergency it was endeavoring tonight to maintain continuous contact with the four American naval radio men in the legation's station.

Messages were being received in the most fragmentary form, due to unsatisfactory atmospheric conditions.

Destination of King Unknown.

Reporting the flight of the government last night from Addis Ababa, Engert said the destination of Emperor Haile Selassie was undetermined, but that the empress with her daughter and Prince Makonnen had left by train for Djibouti, French Somaliland, and were believed to be en route to Jerusalem.

As soon as news of the government's departure circulated, looting began in the town and not long afterward fire broke out.

Engert said the postoffice was burning and that firing was deafening. He reported much drunkenness as a result of looting of liquor supplies.

Declaring that all occupants of the American legation were keeping under cover as much as possible, Engert added:

Names of American Refugees.

Engert gave the names of the five Americans known to be in the British legation as follows:

Mrs. J. A. Cremer of Grand Rapids, Mich., member of the American mission of the United Presbyterian church. Mrs. Cremer is a former resident of Chicago.

Miss Ruby C. Beatty, Reedsville, Pa., of the same mission.

Miss Marjorie Faught, Philadelphia, of the same mission.

Miss Florence D. White, Cortland, Ind., of the same mission.

D. C. Henry, Goldfield, Ia., who was not further identified.

Those reported in the American legation were:

Miss D. A. Dommermuth, Avoca, Pa., of the Mary Hasties school.

Most of Foreigners Safe.

LONDON, May 2.—(AP)—The bulk of the foreign population of Addis Ababa were in guarded compounds tonight as Ethiopia's civil authority collapsed with the flight of Emperor Haile Selassie.

The British government was informed that armed bandits in the Ethiopian capital were burning, looting, and shooting.

Sir Sidney Barton, the British minister, in whose protective legation compound there were sheltered and cared for 3,000 foreigners, reported to the government early this evening that the situation in Addis Ababa was satisfactory so far as the life of foreigners was concerned.

Sir Sidney reported the emperor, with the empress, and Crown Prince Asfa Wosan were hurrying to French Somaliland.

No Report of Abdication.

It was stated officially that the British had received no report that the emperor was abdicating. Authoritative sources said they considered he remained legally the emperor until he formally renounced the title. Actually, however, these sources considered Ethiopia was without an emperor at present.

British officials said they could neither confirm nor deny a report that Haile Selassie would be taken to Palestine aboard a British ship.

The British legation, armed with machine guns and bombproof dugouts, is equipped to shelter Britons and foreigners "in any emergency," it was said. The legation is surrounded with barbed wire and 150 Sikhs [Indian soldiers] are on guard.

It is understood that some time ago British officials considered a plan to evacuate its nationals by airplane if need arose. The plan, however, was decided to be impracticable because of the number of British in Ethiopia and the fact that the rarefied air of Addis Ababa makes the takeoff of airplanes with heavy loads impossible.

Ethiopian Archives Removed.

PARIS, May 2.—(AP)—The French legation in Addis Ababa informed its government tonight that Emperor Haile Selassie's cabinet ministers were fleeing southwest from Addis Ababa by automobile.

The legation reported that the ministers were expected to go to Gorai, 60 miles southwest of Addis Ababa. [Gorai should not be confused with Gorrahei, the southern Ethiopia city near Dolo.]

The imperial archives of Ethiopia were loaded in automobiles accompanying the ministers.

The French government received official reports confirming British government advices that mobs in Addis Ababa were pillaging, looting and burning in the streets of the Ethiopian capital. The foreign office was advised the imperial palace had been looted.

French sources suggested that the emperor's sudden decision to quit Addis Ababa resulted from opposition he had encountered in recent conferences with his ministers, army chiefs, and feudal lords.

French Legation Guarded.

The French considered their nationals in Addis Ababa were safe under the protection of Askari troops armed with automatic rifles to defend the French legation.

The legation also is surrounded by several lines of barbed wire. Shelters had been prepared in the compound against air bombings.

The staf of the legation and employés on the French railroad running to Djibouti were reduced to a minimum 10 days ago.

Their families were sent to Diredawa, in Ethiopia half way to Djibouti, where they were placed under the protection of a company of Senegalese troops.

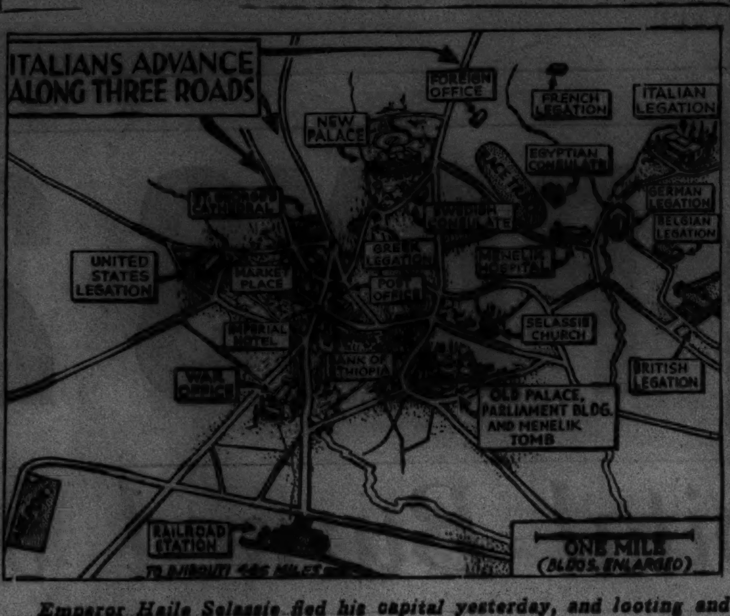
FOREIGNERS BESIEGED IN ADDIS ABABA



Emperor Haile Selassie fled his capital yesterday, and looting and burning immediately broke out. The imperial palace was pillaged. Foreigners took refuge in the American, British, and French legations.

DOCTORS HELPLESS AS STRANGE DISEASE ATTACKS MAN'S VEINS

Joplin, Mo., May 2.—[U. P.]—The slow disintegration of veins and arteries in Roy Daniels' arm and legs today baffled physicians.

Daniels lost a finger in his last operation. It left one finger on his hands. He now is minus both legs, severed above the knees.

In 1927 a foot became lifeless. Later he lost several fingers. Finally treatment stopped the strange encroachment for six months, but in 1929 the disease reappeared.

Physicians told Daniels he had suffered some time a shock which caused the collapse of the blood vessels of his extremities.

Haile Has Plenty of Cash Planted Abroad, Envoy Says

PARIS, May 2.—(AP)—Wolde Mariam, Ethiopian minister to France and a close friend of Emperor Haile Selassie, commenting on reports that the ruler had fled from Ethiopia, said the emperor would not be wanting for money, no matter where he might go. Mariam said the king of kings had deposited funds "in different parts of the world."

Celebrates Approach of Victory in Ethiopia.

ROME, May 2.—(AP)—The news that Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia had fled Addis Ababa threw Rome into an impromptu celebration tonight.

The sources for the news were the British and French governments, Italy remaining without direct information.

Newspapers printed extras. Crowds packed around news stands, snatching up the papers as fast as they were delivered for sale.

The joy of victory was expressed without the regimentation prepared by the government, which already had ordered the nation to prepare for a nation-wide "adunata"—a mobilization in honor of the Italian army's arrival in Addis Ababa.

Troops Near Addis Ababa.

Marshal Pietro Badoglio's forces already were close to Addis Ababa after working their way up the slide torn, tortuous road from Dessye.

The troops were not moving as fast as when they started their victorious upward climb. Heavy rains had set in, bogging the narrow highway, and landslides were frequent.

Badoglio's communique today did not state the exact position of the advancing column and consequently it was impossible for observers to determine just how quickly he could get his men into Addis Ababa to restore order.

[A United Press dispatch from Rome said the Italian advance guard was reported to be 15½ miles from Addis Ababa.]

Correspondents on the scene said a column of troops from Eritrea, moving down the old caravan trail, already had joined the motorized column of Italians and that the two forces were proceeding together to the city.

Duce Summons Naval Chiefs.

As a gesture expressing the solidarity of the Italian nation, the advance point of the motorized column, the unit which will make the triumphal entry, is composed of detachments of every Italian service participating in the war.

While the infantry and artillery moved into Ethiopia's heart, Premier Mussolini interested himself in naval matters. He conferred with his supreme naval commission over the situation in the Mediterranean, where Great Britain has massed a mighty fleet.

So intent is the citizenry on celebrating the expected fall of Addis Ababa that Venice had a premature adunata all its own today. Milan, Turin, and Genoa experienced the same accidental mobilization yesterday.

Sirens blew, bells rang, and citizens quit work and paraded with cheers of victory—until they found out it was all a mistake and returned to await the official call to celebrate.

Find Bodies of Two Flyers.

WITH THE SOUTHERN ITALIAN ARMY, GORRAHEI, Ethiopia, May 2.—(AP)—Native troops under the command of Gen. Rodolfo Graziani today found the decapitated body of Flight Lieutenant Minniti, who was forced down behind the Ethiopian lines in the early stages of the war. The Italians also recovered the body of Radio Sergeant Zannoni.

Their bodies were given military salutes and placed on an airplane which started for Mogadiscio, en route to Italy for burial.

OAK PARK WOMAN SERVES MISSION IN ETHIOPIAN CAPITAL

Miss Martha Elting, 32 years old, of Oak Park, who is in Addis Ababa, took a two year missionary training course at the Moody Bible institute before she was sent to the Sudan interior mission. She is a graduate of Wheaton college and had been active in the Moody church for several years. Her mother, Mrs. Louise Elting, lives at 903 North Harvey avenue, Oak Park. Miss Elting's father, Theodore, died the day after she sailed for her missionary assignment.

Mrs. John Alfred Cremer, a former resident of Chicago, was reported safe within the British legation in Addis Ababa last night. Mrs. Cremer's husband is the head of the United Presbyterian hospital in the Ethiopian capital. Mrs. Cremer is the former Madeline Vanden Akker. She was graduated in 1934 from the Presbyterian Hospital School of Nursing. Friends at the hospital yesterday received a letter from her in which she said life in Addis Ababa was not exciting in spite of the war. "We don't believe there is any danger," she wrote.

Princess Malaku Bayen, a former resident of Evanston, is also in Addis Ababa. She was formerly Dorothy Hadley and attended Northwestern university. While a student at Howard university in Washington, D. C., in 1931 she eloped with Prince Malaku Bayen, who is a nephew of Emperor Haile Selassie.

TWO KILLED IN MISSOURI CRASH.

Columbia, Mo., May 2.—(AP)—R. H. Granert, of Coal City, Ill., and Mrs. Grace Taylor, Council Grove, Mo., were killed and five other persons were injured in an automobile collision ten miles east of here last night.

FIRE POLICEMEN ON TRIAL FOR TAMPA FLOGGING

Tampa, Fla., May 2.—[U. P.]—While a vital issue in the Tampa lash trials was under advisement in the state Supreme court, Mayor R. E. L. Chancey, in a swift move, today discharged seven suspended city employés, six of whom are defendants in the case.

Mayor Chancey, brother-in-law of Pat Whitaker, chief defense attorney in the trials, said dismissal was for "conduct unbecoming city employés."

The seven city employés were suspended last December pending investigation. It was an outgrowth of lashings administered on the night of Nov. 30 to Joseph Shoemaker, Eugene F. Poulnot, and Sam Rogers by a masked mob. Shoemaker died.

Dismissed were Police Sergeant C. A. Brown, Patrolman John F. Bridges, F. W. Switzer, and Sam Crosby, Special Policeman C. W. Carlisle and Robert Chappel, who with former Police Chief R. G. Tittsworth now are on trial at Bartow, and City Fireman John A. McCaskill.

GERMANY PLANS FREE VACATIONS FOR 14 MILLION

BERLIN, May 2.—(AP)—Free summer vacations for all workers was the alluring prospect extended to members of the Nazi "Strength Through Joy" labor organization today.

Robert Ley, German trade union commissioner, presided at ceremonies at the laying of the cornerstone of a gigantic bathing establishment at Mukram on the Baltic island of Ruegen and the laying of the keel at Hamburg of the first of thirty holiday ships.

Officials estimated 14,000,000 workers are eligible to enjoy benefits of five planned summer resorts, including the one at Mukram. The cost of the Ruegen island establishment is estimated at 40,000,000 marks [$16,000,000]. The resort is expected to be opened fully in 1938.

POLITICAL TRUCE ON AS BRAZILIAN CONGRESS OPENS

RIO DE JANEIRO, May 2.—(AP)—Brazil's administration and combined opposition forces met today on the eve of the republic's congressional opening and agreed to a national truce in politics. Congress will convene tomorrow under a state of war which still has 47 days to run.

President Getulio Vargas is expected to send a message on the state of the union. It was reported he would explain the reasons for the state of war proclaimed suddenly March 23 for 90 days.

Before the month is out congress is required by the constitution to receive a budget message from the president. Well informed persons predicted Finance Minister Arthur de Souza Costa's estimates for 1936-'37 would enable the chief executive to make a bid for a balanced budget, a rarity in Brazilian history.

SEIZE 26 ARABS FOR PART IN RIOT AGAINST JEW

JERUSALEM, May 2.—(AP)—Twenty-six Arabs were arrested today on charges of participating in minor disorders during the third week of racial disturbances in Palestine. Two of the Arabs were charged with burning a warehouse at Hedera involving a loss of more than $22,000.

Bombs were exploded last night in Jaffa, but no damage was done. Arabs set fire to a settlement which Russian Zionists are beginning to build in the village of Hefer, but which is not yet inhabited.

A large crowd of Arabs attended the funeral of a youth who died as a result of injuries received during a clash with police at Haifa.

BRITAIN ACCEPTS DEFEAT IN FIGHT TO STOP ITALIANS

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, May 2.—After a five hour conference of government leaders at the foreign office, which must have been one of the saddest of his career, Capt. Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, spoke to his constituents at Leamington tonight as if the seven months' conflict between Italy and the league of nations were already a matter of history.

Insisting that "We have nothing to reproach ourselves with and nothing to apologize for," Eden implied that the Ethiopian situation had better be regarded as a closed chapter and that Great Britain and the other league powers should make a new start.

"Whatever the lessons of the past seven months," he said, "we must be prepared to learn them and profit by them in the spirit of realism, keeping steadily before us what remains the constant purpose of British foreign policy—maintenance of peace."

Eden Appears Chastened.

The young foreign secretary spoke with great poise and restraint, considering the stunning blow which his policy had just received. He had been the driving spirit behind sanctions and his government had declared again and again it would consent to no settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian war except one "within the framework of the league."

Relying on the assurances of its own advisers in Ethiopia, the British government had convinced itself Emperor Haile Selassie was capable of resistance, at least until the end of the rainy season, despite the shattering military successes of Italy in recent weeks. Now that hope appears to have been blasted.

The Ethiopian government apparently no longer exists and Eden and his colleagues are preparing to face the new situation before the league council meeting on May 11. Officials see no way of forcing a settlement now "within the framework of the league," and it is believed sanctions against Italy will be lifted soon to clear the way for a sweeping settlement of the Anglo-Italian differences.

Eden Defends Arms Program.

Eden in his speech indulged in no recrimination. He echoed his chief, Prime Minister Baldwin, however, in defending British rearmament and complaining of the league's weakened authority.

"I tell you frankly, I do not like spending money on armaments," Eden said. "I do not think a panoply of armaments is alluring. I believe there are more attractive ways of spending money. Yet, I yield to nobody today in my conviction that the rapid reëquipment of our three fighting services is absolutely imperative.

"In a world in which all nations have been rearming, in which the authority of the league is neither universal nor unchallenged, it is not an aid to peace for this country to be unduly weak, and it may even become an incentive to strife.

"While, therefore, we must and shall seek every opportunity to welcome disarmament by international agreement, it is impossible to ignore events passing in other lands. To do so would indeed be to invite disaster."

Refers to Ethiopia.

Then, very guardedly, Eden referred to the day's events in Ethiopia:

"Many of you tonight, like myself, have your thoughts in Africa," he said. "I have only one observation to make about the events of the last seven months in connection with that dispute.

"We had an obligation—a signed covenant obligation—to play a part. We have sought to play that part to the full, and as far as we have done this we have nothing to reproach ourselves with and nothing to apologize for. We have played our part, not on behalf of any imperial interests nor for any selfish motives but because, as members of the league and signatories of the covenant, we had an obligation which we shared with all other members of the league."

At this point, Eden spoke of learning lessons "in the spirit of realism," which many of his hearers thought meant the end of this chapter in British diplomacy.

DEBATE FATE OF HAILE

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 2.—Diplomats said tonight Great Britain is preoccupied with what to do with the fleeing emperor of Ethiopia—whether to find a home for him in Egypt, Palestine, or India.

The possibility of his settling down on the French Riviera, where he has spent time formerly, was considered out of the question, especially in view of the widely held Italian feeling that the French Riviera is partly Italian by rights.

Haile Selassie owns a big villa on the seashore at Djibouti, French Somaliland, but it is considered unlikely that France will allow him to remain there long. The right wing press even suggested he ought to be considered a prisoner of war and interned when and if he reaches Djibouti.

Britain Blamed for Defeat.

The sudden collapse of Ethiopia was attributed in certain diplomatic circles here to Great Britain's failure to provide ammunition to Ethiopian warriors. They pointed out that only 30,000 or 40,000 of the half million mobilized men had been killed, and hence there was no lack of man power.

But it is said here they have completely run through their munitions and also that seeding time has worked against the emperor, his soldiers having deserted in masses to sow their grain.

It was considered here that Britain is faced with one of two alternatives. Either it can make war on Italy, or else invoke the treaty of 1906 among Great Britain, France, and Italy, which settled their spheres of influence in Ethiopia. But to invoke that treaty would be difficult for Britain because of the league of nations' unwillingness to recognize it.

It was learned tonight that the French government considers a tripatite conference among France, Great Britain, and Italy for producing a new interpretation of the treaty of 1906 would be the best solution of the complicated problem.

The winning team accumulated 24 points, followed by Moseley school with 19 points, Avondale third with 18, and Swift fourth with 15. Awards were made to the first four schools by Herman J. Fischer, director of the board's bureau of recreation. Nearly 800 boys took part in the events.

YOUTHFUL AUTO THIEVES LEARN GAS IS ESSENTIAL

Joseph Landergott, 16 years old, and Carl Tordenshield, 17 years old, two tired boys from Milwaukee, Wis., rested yesterday in the Du Page county jail at Wheaton, awaiting a return home.

Thursday night they stole an automobile in Milwaukee. Between Elmhurst and Hinsdale on Quarry road, the car ran out of gas, so they stole another car in Hinsdale, drove to Aurora, abandoned it, and drove away in a third stolen car.

Early yesterday they went to sleep in the car in Wheaton and were picked up by the police a block from the station, their machine again out of gasoline.

GORMAN MOVED TO SAFETY COURT IN JUDGES' SHIFT

Judge Gibson E. Gorman of the Municipal court, who has been sitting in the South State street court, will move to the Safety court tomorrow as the result of a general transfer order issued yesterday by Chief Justice John J. Sonsteby.

Judge Gorman will succeed Judge Eugene L. McGarry, who is to preside over the police courts in the Shakespeare avenue, Fillmore and Des Plaines street districts. Judge Gorman said he would continue Judge McGarry's campaign against reckless and drunken motorists. "Something must be done to end murder on the streets," he said.

SPANISH POLICE JAIL 8 IN PLOT TO KILL PREMIER

MADRID, May 2.—(AP)—Eight alleged conspirators in a plot to assassinate Premier Manuel Azana were held incommunicado tonight while police investigated possible ramifications. Strict silence was maintained as to details of a "confession" police said was made by one man. Three of the men held were implicated in the confession as the instigators of the plot.

Police said Emiliano Carmelo Ruano, a former member of the Spanish legion, who made the purported confession, said the plot was hatched several months ago when Azana was organizing the left parties into the "popular front," which later swept the elections. Ruano said that Eduardo Pardo Reina, criminal attorney who defended Capt. Rojas, sentenced to life imprisonment for the killing of 13 anarchists in 1933, approached him with the plot. Rojas claimed Azana authorized the killings, but the court rejected the evidence.

Meanwhile, three political outbreaks resulted in one death. In the town of Alomarde, province of Granada, an extremist was killed and several others were wounded during a gunfight with civil guards who were trying to prevent the destruction of a church.

Extremists burned a church and destroyed statues and paintings in the town of Asquerosa, also in the province of Granada.

COMMITTEE O.K. PUT ON SENATE FLOOD MEASURE

Washington, D. C., May 2.—(AP)—The house flood control committee today approved the senate approved Overton Mississippi river flood control bill. The vote was announced as 9 to 4.

The measure authorizes appropriations of $275,000,000 for completion of protection works on the Mississippi south of Memphis. Advocates seek early house action.

The committee rejected all proposed amendments. The most important of these was an effort by Representatives Miller and Terry, Democrats of Arkansas, to include 26 reservoirs on the Arkansas and White rivers to cost about $225,000,000.

Others Injured in Crash.

The others injured are William H. Clift, 31 years old, Bickford's roommate, and Roy Ratliff, 33 years old, 1076 West Harrison street. Their automobile, after sidewiping a truck crashed headon into a car driven by Herbert Meranda, sherif of Scott county, Ind.

They are Joseph Prehar, 9 years old; his brother, Robert, 8, and William Winuk, 36, of 5233 South Troy street, all of whom were slightly injured. Guminski was arrested.

Up to 2 p. m. yesterday 321 persons had been killed in automobile accidents in Cook county since Jan. 1. In the same period 255 were killed and 5,057 injured in Chicago.

KARPIS IS FLOWN TO ST. PAUL FOR KIDNAPING TRIAL

Facial Operation Fails to Hide Identity.

Threlkeld of Howell county said he had asked that Karpis be brought there for trial for the slaying of Sherif Roy C. Kelley in Dec., 1931. Threlkeld said his county has a hanging case against Karpis.

Hoover said agents had been trailing Karpis for two or three days before his capture last night. When definite information was obtained they surrounded the apartment in which he lived with the woman and Hunter, planning to raid it. But before they could enter, the three emerged.

"We nabbed them after they had entered their car," Hoover said. "There was a rifle in the back seat but neither had a chance to reach for it. Neither carried pistols."

"The capture," he continued, "rings down the curtain on all the principals in the Barker-Karpis mob," charged by the government with perpetrating the Hamm and Bremer abductions.

Karpis Face Lifted, Too.

Karpis had undergone plastic surgery but was easily recognizable from photographs, Hoover said. He also had had his finger tips treated in an effort to disguise his finger prints.

A sidelight on the capture was the statement in Port Clinton, O., of John Zetser, 35, who said he believed he had unwittingly aided Karpis and two companions by flying them to Hot Springs, Ark., and Tulsa, Okla., a few weeks after the Garrettsville holdup.

Karpis' seizure followed by only a few days his indictment for the Hamm kidnaping, and capture of three others as plotters in the crime.

The only member of the gang still at large is Harry Campbell, long an associate of Karpis.

Indicted here several days ago for the Hamm kidnaping along with Karpis and his former partner, Arthur [Doc] Barker, now serving a life term in Alcatraz for the Bremer abduction were:

Bryan [Byron] Bolton, in jail here awaiting sentence on his guilty plea in the Bremer case; Elmer Farmer, serving a jail term for the Bremer abduction; John Peifer, St. Paul night club operator; Charles Fitzgerald, Los Angeles, and Edmund C. Bartholmey, former Bensenville, Ill., postmaster.

The latter three were arrested in the latest roundup of Hamm suspects, which the department of justice termed solution of the case.

Woman Is Unidentified.

New Orleans, La., May 2.—(AP)—The identity of the attractive red haired woman who posed as the wife of Alvin Karpis before his capture here, was a guarded secret tonight of federal agents—if they knew themselves.

The woman, in her early 20's, and Fred Hunter, wanted in the $46,000 Garrettsville, O., mail robbery, were held in locked offices of David W. Magee, inspector in charge of the federal bureau of investigation here, who said a search of Karpis' apartment yielded "plenty." He declined to elaborate.

Mrs. J. S. Meyer, owner and manager of the apartment, expressed surprise over the raid. She described Karpis as "not much more than a boy, so small and delicate looking" and so kind to his wife under the alias of Mr. and Mrs. Edward O'Hara that she "just could not believe" it was Karpis to whom she had rented the apartment.

Magee said the woman would not talk and that her finger prints had been sent to Washington for identification.

HOOVER IN CHICAGO.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the department of justice agents, stopped briefly at the Chicago airport yesterday afternoon, while a specially chartered TWA plane dropped two Chicago agents who had taken part in the capture of Karpis. There were six agents in the Hoover party. The plane then continued on to Cleveland and New York.

Hoover discussed the capture of the notorious gangster and the long investigation which eventually brought the government agents to his hideout in New Orleans. He declared that so far as his department is concerned, there is no public enemy No. 1.

"Our biggest public enemy is politics," Hoover declared. "We have more trouble guarding against the political sniping than catching gangsters."

Hoover commended Police Commissioner James P. Allman as "one of the most intelligent and resourceful police officials in the United States."

Hoover posed willingly for photographers, but only at a distance of ten feet. He refused to allow any "closeups," apparently to prevent his features from becoming too well recognized by the criminals he hunts.

SEIZE BROTHER OF MARY KINDER, EX-GANG GIRL

Indianapolis, Ind., May 2.—[Special.]—Charles Northern, paroled convict and brother of Mary Kinder, former Dillinger gang girl, was arrested here today for questioning in connection with activities of a gang headed by Alfred Brady.

Brady, who attempted to emulate John Dillinger's criminal career, was arrested Thursday in Chicago and has been charged with the murder of Police Sergeant Richard Rivers of Indianapolis in a holdup here last Monday. Northern was held in $20,000 bond on a charge of vagrancy.

Urban Pope, former rum runner and hijacker, was seized with Northern and is held as an accessory to the murder of Rivers. In 1929 Northern was sentenced to ten years in the Indiana state prison on a charge of robbing a filling station. He was paroled last Nov. 27.

REFUSE TO FREE ACCUSED PAL OF 'NEW DILLINGER'

Attorneys failed yesterday in an attempt to obtain the release of William Geftman, suspected of being a fence for the gang headed by Alfred Brady, Indiana desperado who confessed he had tried to be a "second Dillinger." Hearing on a writ of habeas corpus for Geftman was continued until tomorrow by Acting Chief Justice John C. Lewe in the Criminal court.

Geftman, who is 26 years old and lives at 3603 Wilson avenue, was arrested with Jack Becker, 4942 North Kedzie avenue, when, according to police, they attempted to dispose of loot taken by the Brady gang in Ohio holdups. Police said 1,320 diamond rings valued at $100,000 have been recovered. Brady has been taken to Indianapolis to be tried for the murder of a policeman there.

Storms Ruin 140 Miles of California Highway

Los Angeles, Cal., May 2.—[Special.]—Storms of the last winter damaged or destroyed 10 per cent or 1,400 miles of California's state highway system, W. A. Smith, assistant maintenance engineer of the division of highways said here today. He said it was a record amount of damage.

KARPIS' PARENTS PLAN TO TAKE HIS BABY TO SEE HIM

Bandit's Son, Born in Jail, to Visit St. Paul.

John Karpavicz and his wife, Anna, parents of Alvin Karpis, remained secluded yesterday in their basement apartment at 2842 North Francisco avenue. The white haired mother of the nation's public enemy No. 1 refused to leave the apartment, while her husband, who is janitor for the apartment building, asserted that he "had nothing to say."

Members of the family gathered around to comfort the mother and protect her from interviewers. "I am happy that my son was captured without being wounded or killed," she told friends. "It is also a relief to know that no one else was injured in the arrest."

Plan to Visit Prisoner.

Mrs. Karpis expressed a desire to see her son, and, when notified that he was in custody in St. Paul, said she and her husband would visit the prisoner within a few days. When asked whether she had any message to send her son she said: "Tell him we will bring his son Raymond along for him to see. He is getting to be a big boy and one to be proud of."

Karpis' son, Raymond, was born to Miss Dolores Delaney, his sweetheart, Feb. 2, 1935, while she was a prisoner in Miami. Miss Delaney was abandoned in an Atlantic City hotel several weeks previous when the desperado escaped in a revolver battle after federal agents had set a trap for him. Miss Delaney is now serving a sentence of five years imprisonment at the Milan, Mich., prison for harboring the bandit.

Never Has Seen Baby.

Following her sentence of imprisonment at Miami, a year ago, the baby was turned over to Karpis' parents. He has never seen the child.

"Tell my son that Dolores was here to visit the boy on his first birthday —she thinks that he is quite a bouncer," Mrs. Karpavicz added. This visit, it was learned, came when Miss Delaney was being transferred to the Milan pentitentiary.

Walter Johnson, chief postoffice inspector here, said yesterday that the federal authorities had no definite information of any crime that the notorious bandit had committed here. Johnson said, however, that Karpis had been suspected of participating in the robbery of a federal reserve messenger Sept. 22, 1933, at Jackson boulevard and Clark street. Two policemen were wounded, one fatally, by the bandits while they were making their escape.

Sought for Postoffice Robbery.

The postoffice inspector said Karpis, Fred Hunter and Harry Campbell had been sought for the $34,000 postoffice robbery at Garrettsville, O., Nov. 7, 1935. It was the belief of local agents that Karpis' hideout had been located during the search for Hunter and others who participated in the Ohio robbery.

Significance was attached to the announcement by Attorney General Cummings in Washington a week ago that $5,000 would be paid for "information leading to the arrest of Karpis." It is believed that the bandit's associates may have been dickering with the federal officials and refused to turn over Karpis until a promise of reward was made definite.

THREE PUBLIC ENEMIES AT LARGE

France Sentences Surgeon on Sterilization Charge

BORDEAUX, France, May 2.—(AP)—Dr. Norbert Barthozek, Austrian surgeon, was sentenced to three years in prison today after being convicted of "simple assault" in connection with sterilization operations which he admitted performing. He was accused of performing operations on males who desired to have no more children.

SHERIF SEIZES ZIONCHECK, BUT IT'S ALL IN VAIN

Fine Paid, Court No Longer Wants Him.

Shallotte, N. C., May 2.—(AP)—A North Carolina sherif who heard, by radio, that Representative Zioncheck [Dem., Wash.] was wanted in Virginia for bond jumping went out and got his man today.

Sherif J. A. Russ had recognized the much arrested congressman when Zioncheck made some telephone calls here, but had to drive more than seventy miles an hour, he said, to overtake him.

Then he called authorities at Alexandria, Va., to whom Zioncheck had given a $200 bond after arrest for reckless driving and disorderly conduct.

Honeymoon Is Resumed.

The Alexandria authorities told the sherif they no longer wanted Zioncheck, because a person representing him paid a $66 fine for him today and cleared the case.

Zioncheck and his bride resumed their honeymoon, but not until he came off second best with Mrs. Russ, a deputy sherif.

"I don't want any publicity," he told her, and got this rejoinder:

Five Seek Zioncheck's Seat.

Seattle, Wash., May 2.—(AP)—Five men announced themselves today as probable candidates this fall to contest Congressman M. A. Zioncheck's campaign for renomination on the Democratic ticket.

BEG YOUR PARDON

It was incorrectly stated in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE of Feb. 2, 1936, in an article entitled "Murder in Minneapolis" that Olof L. Bruce, a Minneapolis attorney, was involved in disbarment proceedings instituted by the Minnesota State Supreme court during the summer of 1926.

Mr. Bruce never has been involved in disbarment proceedings in the Supreme court of Minnesota, and the clerk of the court on Feb. 10, 1936, stated that he has been and is "in good and regular standing as an attorney and counsellor at law, further that he has not been suspended or disbarred and is not laboring under any disability to practice in the courts of Minnesota, and that his professional and private character appears to be good." No complaint has ever been filed against him by the state board of law examiners, and no records or complaints against him were found in the files of either the Hennepin county or Minnesota State Bar association.

Mr. Bruce was not in any way a party to the criminal libel action brought against Harold Birkeland by the county attorney of Hennepin county as related in the story of Feb. 2, 1936. The Birkeland charges, made against Mr. Bruce during that trial and later repeated in the Birkeland pamphlet mentioned in THE TRIBUNE's story, have never been found by any constituted authority to have a basis in fact.

Other portions of the article, referred to, deal with underworld conditions. THE TRIBUNE did not intend to imply that Mr. Bruce was involved in any way with other incidents therein related, and no such inference should be drawn from the article.

THE TRIBUNE regrets the inaccuracy in the former story.

Expectant Mother Slays Man Who Refuses to Wed

New York, May 2.—[U. P.]—Frank Di Biosi, 25, was stabbed fatally on a Brooklyn street tonight and a detective found Jean Cohen, 22, bent over the dying man wailing: "I didn't mean to do it. If you would only marry me." Di Biosi, just before he died, snarled "Get her out of here." She told police that for the second time in five years Di Biosi refused to marry her when she was about to become a mother.

COLLEGE OFFERS DATE SERVICE AT 50 CENTS A MONTH

Dallas, Tex., May 2.—(AP)—College "dates" on the coöperative plan—at 50 cents a month—is a new service at Southern Methodist university.

Miss Emily Anne Blach, a member of the coöperative association, explained today:

"Parties are given twice a month. Every one wanting a date submits the names of three persons of the opposite sex. A faculty committee takes the names and pairs off the applicants as best it can."

But it's no go unless the other half of the desired contract belongs to the coöperative, too.

HAGOOD TAKES CHICAGO CORPS AREA COMMAND

Silent on Plan to Accept Sears-Roebuck Post.

Maj. Gen. Johnson Hagood took command of the 6th corps area here yesterday at the headquarters in the new post office building. The general, who is the third ranking general officer in the army, telegraphed to the war department at Washington that he had taken command in accordance with an order issued April 13. He then conferred with his staf.

Afterward Gen. Hagood was questioned concerning reports that he planned to retire shortly to take an executive position with Sears Roebuck & Co. He is a close friend of Brig. Gen. R. E. Wood, president of that company.

"I am not making any predictions," Gen. Hagood said. "The only announcement I have at present is the formal one that I am taking command of the 6th corps area."

McCoy in New York Area.

Gen. Hagood, whose sharp criticism of the New Deal's easy money spending policies during a congressional hearing resulted in his removal two months ago from command of the 8th corps area at San Antonio, Tex., replaces Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy as commandant of the 6th corps.

Gen. McCoy, who was commander here for fifteen months, departed on Thursday for his new assignment as commander of the 2d corps area in New York. He succeeds Maj. Gen. Dennis E. Nolan, who is retiring.

Gen. Hagood's assignment places him in command of the second field army, as well as of the corps, and of the important army maneuvers to be held in August if he remains that long. The second field army embraces the 5th and 6th corps areas. Maj. Gen. William E. Cole is commander of the 5th corps area at Columbus, O.

Prospective Maneuvers Chief.

If Gen. Hagood resigns, Brig. Gen. Charles D. Herron, commander of the 6th field artillery brigade and second ranking officer of the 6th corps area, would become acting commander of the 6th corps until the war department assigns a commander, and Gen. Cole would become commander of the second field army and would be in charge of the maneuvers.

Gen. Hagood made his criticisms of the New Deal fiscal policies in testifying before the house committee on military affairs. Although the general declared he had been urged to speak freely by Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staf, the testimony was made public and incurred the displeasure of Harry Hopkins, Federal Works Progress administrator. In the hearing Gen. Hagood characterized WPA funds as "stage money."

Assigned After Seeing President.

On Feb. 24 it was disclosed that President Roosevelt had removed him from his Texas command and sent him to "await orders" at his home in Charleston, S. C. Congressmen then defended Gen. Hagood and charged he was the victim of administration "terrorism." The general had two conferences with the President and the announcement of his assignment here followed.

When Gen. Hagood's assignment was announced, it was indicated that he might plan to serve as commander of the 6th corps area until July and then use the accumulated leave due to him until next year, when he reaches the retirement age of 64. He is eligible for retirement because of his forty years' service in the army.

7 AWARDS WIND UP HIGH SCHOOL PAPER MEETING

Three hundred high school student journalists from seven middle western states yesterday concluded a two day press conclave at Northwestern university, sponsored by the Medill School of Journalism. Awards were made to the winners of seven contests as follows: Editorial, George Paddock Jr., Evanston Township High school; sports, M. Briggs, Peoria Central High school; year book, Lois Blue, Rockford Senior High school; advertising, Mary J. Viesel, Elkhart, Ind., High school; features, Martha Murphy, Hirsch High school of Chicago; editing and makeup, Boyd Davies, Columbus, Ind., High school; and news writing by teams, Englewood High school, represented by Paul Nichols, Arthur Middleton, Mark Anson, and Marian McCallister.

Homer Guck, president of the Harald and Examiner, told the conference that under a dictator the press could make profits but could not be an effective defender of the public interest. The motive of public service—not of gain—explains, according to Mr. Guck, the fight of newspapers against New Deal encroachments on the free press.

SUSPENDED TERM IS GIVEN GIRL IN POLYGAMY CASE

Kingman, Ariz., May 2.—(AP)—Silvia Allred, a principal in the Short Creek, Ariz., polygamy colony case, appeared today with her four month old daughter, Lucy, and pleaded guilty of "open and notorious cohabitation." She received a suspended sentence of 18 months.

Miss Allred was charged with I. C. Spencer and Price Johnson last December but was unable to appear for trial because of the expected birth of the child.

The two men are serving 18 month terms in Arizona penitentiary. They were convicted by a Mohave county jury which heard testimony that Miss Allred was the plural wife of Spencer.

FRENCH VOTERS FINISH ELECTING DEPUTIES TODAY

Radicals See Extension of Victory.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, May 2.—French voters will march to the polls for the second consecutive Sunday tomorrow to finish the election of a new chamber of deputies, the controling power in the selection of French cabinets.

Last Sunday 183 candidates were elected by receiving a clear majority of the votes cast in their respective districts. Tomorrow's run off balloting will decide the winners of the 432 other seats in the chamber. There are 4,947 candidates.

Radical Victory Seen.

The radical leftist parties and the center group won 63 seats each last Sunday, the rightist parties 57. Most political observers predict that the leftist "People's Front" of communists, Socialists and radical Socialists will increase the radical margin in the chamber tomorrow.

Chief reason for this prediction is the rigid discipline which is being enforced by the people's front. In almost every district where there was more than one radical candidate all but the top man in last Sunday's vote have withdrawn in order to concentrate support on this one man.

The "National Front" of rightists is attempting to follow the same tactics but without the same degree of success because of lack of discipline.

Socialist May Be Premier.

It is considered possible that the Socialist party will emerge from the election with the largest total of seats of any one party in the chamber. In this event, a Socialist leader, according to French political tradition, will be instructed to form the new government.

The present government headed by Premier Albert Sarraut will stay in office, however, until June 1, when the new chamber is installed.

Former Premier Edouard Herriot, a Radical Socialist leader, made what was interpreted as a bid for leadership in the next cabinet today with an article in his newspaper L'Ere Nouvelle.

"Let no one ever again mention that famous 'French reconciliation' to me," he wrote. "My mind is made up. I shall remain faithful to the ideas I always have defended. Democrats, don't fall into their [the right and center] clutches."

HARRY RUBY FLIES TO YUMA TO WED FORMER ACTRESS

Hollywood, Cal., May 2.—[Special.]—Eileen Percy, former film actress, and Harry Ruby, song writer, flew to Yuma, Ariz., in a chartered plane today to be married.

The couple arranged to fly back immediately after the ceremony for a wedding supper here. Miss Percy at one time was a showgirl for Flo Ziegfeld and formerly was married to Ulrich Busch, movie studio official, by whom she has a 9 year old son.

SELF-INFLICTED BURNS FATAL.

Joseph Lea, 50 years old, 10902 Torrence avenue, died yesterday in the South Chicago hospital of burns incurred a month ago when he saturated his clothing with gasoline and set fire to himself while despondent over lack of work.

AMERICAN 4-MAN ARMY 'ADVANCES' BY SITTING STILL

Legionnaires Gain Edge in Building Fight.

PARIS, May 2.—(AP)—The whole American army of occupation, composed this year of a corporal's guard, remained entrenched tonight in Pershing hall, Paris headquarters of the American Legion.

Legion officers said they couldn't afford to keep the hall open. The corporal's guard took an opposite view.

Legionnaires Gain Ground.

The four Legionnaires appeared to be gaining ground by sitting still. There were these developments:

1. A French judge called attention to "the noble sentiments between the United States and France" in urging Legion factions to "show a spirit of conciliation."

2. Legion officials, who said they couldn't pay building indebtedness and that therefore they would have to close the hall, agreed to pay the building corporation the expenses for the four-man occupancy.

3. The court appointed August Moulin, a professional administrator, to start administering the building next Monday.

Improve Mess Rations.

4. The embattled Legionnaires contracted a Chinese-American alliance by employing two Chinese servants to run errands and improve their mess rations—thus far a somewhat monotonous canned bean diet.

5. James MacAlese of Fargo, N. D., major general of the army of occupation, said he and the other major generals, Peter McKay of Brooklyn, John Hunter of Great Falls, Mont., and Julius Snowhill of Quincy, Ill., could sit it out on this line if it took all summer.

The French chamber of deputies was asked to do something about it. A bill for a 500,000 franc [$33,000] subsidy to help the Legion out of its difficulties was submitted to the chamber. Parliament, however, is not in session.

MATE CONFESSES IN 'SNAKE BITE' BRIDE SLAYING

Woman Tortured 14 Hrs., Says Accomplice.

BULLETIN.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 2.—(AP)—District Attorney Buron Fitts announced late tonight that Robert S. James had confessed he killed his wife. He said James denied forcing his wife to place her foot in a box of rattlesnakes to be bitten, but said he drowned her in a bath tub, then placed the body in a fish pond to make death appear accidental.

"I did it due to the fact that when I am drinking I am insane," Fitts said James told him.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 2.—[Special.]—A fantastic murder tale—how a resident of La Crescenta, Cal., forced his wife to submit to rattlesnake bites and then drowned her because the poison of the serpents worked too slowly—was related today to Deputy District Attorney Eugene Williams.

Robert James, now under arrest on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of a young girl, is the man accused of the weird plot. The victim was his fifth wife, Mary Emma Busch James, whose body was found Aug. 5, 1935, in a fish pond outside her La Crescenta home. James' third wife was found dead in a bathtub in Colorado in 1932.

Watches Snakes Bite Woman.

The narrator of the story was C. H. Hope, night manager of a beach café. He admitted he aided James by obtaining the snakes and looked on while they thrust their deadly fangs into the wife's flesh.

"James hypnotised me," declared Hope. "I had to do what he told me to do."

He denied, however, that he had anything to do with the drowning of the woman, who had been married to James a little over two weeks when she was slain—supposedly that her husband might collect a large insurance policy.

Bride Tortured 14 Hours.

Fourteen hours of torture was the lot of the wife, according to Hope, before an end was made to her sufferings.

"James got the idea of killing Mary with snake poison soon after they were married," Hope asserted. "I went out into the desert and got some snakes. They were turned over to James, and he tested them on dogs and chickens. He found they were no good and gave them back to me.

"I then went to Snake Joe's in Pasadena and bought some real rattlesnakes. These I gave to James on the morning of Aug. 4. When I reached his house at 11 in the morning he had his wife tied with ropes to a breakfast table, which he had placed in the kitchen.

Blindfolded and Gagged.

"She had on nothing but a nightgown and her eyes and mouth were covered with adhesive tape. She could neither see nor call out for help.

"James set the box of snakes on the floor. Then he took his wife's left foot and stuck it into the box, first stirring up the snakes until they were rattling and hissing angrily. One snake struck her with its fangs. I was surprised that all of them did not rise up and wrap around her foot. Some of them might have been old and lazy.

"After a little while James removed her foot. 'Take 'em away.' he said. I returned the box of serpents to Snake Joe's. When I came back in the evening James told me to drive into the garage. In there he produced a bottle of whisky and we each had a drink.

Venom Fails to Kill.

"'She's not dead yet,' he said as if he was angry. 'The damn rattlesnake poison's not working right. I won't waste any more time; I'll drown her.'

"He went into the house, leaving me with the bottle of whisky. I stayed there until 4 a. m., when James came out and said she was dead. 'I'll clean up the place and then collect the insurance,' he said. Once more he went into the house and then came back to say everything was cleaned up but that he had to get rid of the body.

"I followed him into the house and saw the body lying near the bathroom. James wanted me to help carry it out. I wouldn't do that. I went outside and sat in the car until he came to say that it was all over."

Find Body in Fish Pond.

The story indicated that Mrs. James was drowned in the bathtub and that her body then was laid in the fish pond, where it was discovered face down in six inches of water.

Authorities said there had been a thorough investigation of the death but that there had been no evidence of murder and that the story of suicide had been accepted. It was recalled, however, that there were two small abrasions on the left foot, and that the leg was swollen about the ankle. Rattlesnake bites would have caused this, it was said.

"He's Screwy," Says James.

James, confronted by his accuser, said: "You'll find out that guy Hope will tell you anything. He's screwy."

For months James has been engaged in litigation over the payment of insurance on his wife. He claimed double indemnity on the ground that her death was accidental.

According to the accused man, his former wives were Maude Duncan of Birmingham, Ala.; Vera Vermillion of Emporia, Kas.; Winona Wallace of Los Angeles, and Ruth Thomas of New Orleans, La. The first and second, he said, divorced him, and the fourth obtained an annulment the day after her marriage.

Winona, the third wife, was found dead in Manitou Springs, Colo. James said then he believed she fainted from the effects of injuries suffered in an automobile accident and had fallen into the tub. The coroner held death due to drowning.

FIGURES IN SNAKE BITE SLAYING INQUIRY

Robert James (left), barber of La Crescenta, Cal., was accused by Charles H. Hope (right) of killing his fifth wife, Mrs. Mary Busch James, by causing snakes to bite her and then drowning her in a bathtub. Hope told authorities James hired him to obtain three rattlesnakes—"sure killers."

EVIDENCE READY AGAINST PARKER IN WENDEL CASE

Confession Calls Him the Chief Plotter.

New York, May 2.—[Special.]—District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan announced today that he was ready to present evidence to the grand jury next week against Ellis Parker as the guiding genius behind the kidnaping of Paul H. Wendel, whose last minute entry into the Lindbergh case delayed the execution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

Parker, whose son, Ellis Jr., is a fugitive from justice under an indictment charging him with complicity in the crime, was accused by Murray Bleefeld of instigating the kidnaping and of editing the confessions which Wendel, a disbarred Trenton attorney, charges were forced from him by torture.

Bleefeld, who was arrested in Albany, N. Y., was held in $50,000 bail by Kings County Judge George W. Martin after he had appeared in the lineup at police headquarters and dictated a confession of his part in the kidnaping.

Bleefeld, relating how he got into the case, told Geoghan that he first heard of Wendel from the elder Parker when Bleefeld called on him at Mount Holly to ask what chance there was of getting his brother, Jeff Bleefeld, out of the state penitentiary at Trenton.

Parker, chief of Burlington county detectives, told him at that time that Gov. Harold G. Hoffman had commissioned him to investigate the Lindbergh case.

Parker told him, Bleefeld said, that he had had Wendel under suspicions and was anxious to get his hands on him. Bleefeld said he subsequently helped seize Wendel. He said Parker supervised the writing of the Wendel confession.

WHIP CONVICTS IN STATE OWNED SOUTHERN MINE

Situation in Tennessee Is Termed Inhuman.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Knoxville, Tenn., May 2.—[Special.]—Tennessee's hills of spring are very beautiful, but behind this massed color, fragrance, and song there is a black spot which it seems necessary to uncover so that, perhaps, the people may wipe it out.

Coal mines have always brought a blight to these southern hills, a blight to nature and to the human spirit, but it is safe to say that in no privately owned mine in this country are men being lashed to work to benefit the capitalists.

Hundreds Put to Work.

Yet in the state owned mine at Petros, 50 miles from here, the whip is falling upon the backs of convicts who do not produce their daily "task." Not only by day, but at night they are herded into the mines by the hundreds to increase production so that private contractors may profit. State industry and politics have produced an inhuman situation that could never result in free, private ownership, bad as that may be.

This story is found hidden in a report on state finances made by Griffenhagen & Associates, public auditors, on authority of the 1935 legislature and under sponsorship of the Tennessee Taxpayers' association.

The report has not yet been given general publicity, but it promises to result in a political scandal in the present gubernatorial campaign and in the general assembly.

Sue to Cancel Contracts.

It has been substantiated, unofficially, at Petros and the Southern Appalachian Coal Operators' association has just filed a suit at Nashville seeking cancellation of state contracts for the sale of "surplus" coal at the Brushy Mountain prison mines.

Brushy Mountain prison is located deep in the heart of the hills, in Morgan county, of bloody history, and is reached over a primitive mountain road. Forty years ago, when convicts were leased out to private operators in this district, there was a "rebellion" in which the free miners and their friends marched to the prison stockade, liberated the convicts and burned the buildings. Recaptured prisoners were herded to Brushy Mountain and a wooden structure was thrown up hastily to house them. This old fire-trap, now behind the walls of the new prison built 2 years ago, is still used for prisoners. Part of the old stockade still stands.

One Physician For All.

This prison is for able-bodied adults. Only about one in a hundred who go there escapes being sent into the mines. The population is 958. One physician is charged with the care of all these men and the 92 employés. Physical examination, as a result, is very superficial, according to the report, which reads:

"In all prisons a complete examination of each prisoner is considered to be essential to forestall assigning men to work which they are not physically capable of performing. In such a prison as Brushy Mountain, in which the chief work is coal mining, a thorough examination is more necessary than in prisons where the average occupation is less strenuous."

The report, which was written June 4, 1935, states that the morale of prisoners is excellent and the number of punishments required was low. This is given as follows for April:

"Good time taken, 1; flogged, 8; flogged and demoted to third grade, 2."

Flogging Criticized.

"The only criticism," it states, "that can be offered is that too great reliance seems to be placed in flogging and insufficient use made of other punishments."

On that date 498 men were in the coal mines. Conditions in the old wooden building were described as a frightful fire hazard and insanitary.

In the state penitentiary at Nashville, where the population was 1,963, the majority at work in hosiery and shirt shops, at the foundry and on roads, it is said of discipline:

"Flogging is used where other measures fail. It is always subject to a physician's approval."

The disciplines for the month were given as follows:

The report adds:

"No doubt in the cases of flogging some form of major punishment was necessary to control difficult prisoners. Flogging has been discontinued as a form of punishment in most states, but it is a long established custom in Tennessee, and, with proper safeguards, there may be no occasion to suggest its abolition here.

But the number of floggings is high, due to bad morale and lack of respect for guards and officials. With better qualified personnel the necessity for resorting to flogging could easily be reduced to 10 per cent of the cases in which it is now required."

With proper accounting methods, this report states, the state of Tennessee would find itself sustaining a loss on each industrial activity.

"In some the loss would be substantial. There is no account of depreciation, interest on amounts invested, or equivalent in taxes and licenses. Contractors are buying prison labor at from 34 cents to 75 cents a day as reported, and the recommendation is made that the products of prison labor be taken out of the commercial market."

Mine Output Increased.

As to the great impetus to hard labor at the coal mines, the installation of night shifts and the shoving of production up 50 per cent, the reason may be found in the sale of "surplus" coal to private contractors. Whether this has benefited any one beside the contractors is another subject for investigation. The state uses 26 per cent of the coal produced and it is stated that much more could be used advantageously in this way. For twenty months to Jan. 1, 1935, the production was 214,971 tons. The average monthly production was 10,748 tons. This has been increased to around 15,000 tons.

Brushy Mountain prison lies in a hollow that seems to be blighted. Perhaps it is the smoke, or the coal dust, or perhaps it is the emanations of human misery there. Beyond here, in other hillsides and hollows, the world is lovely and melodious, but here the trees seem stunted and the birds silent.

A babel of human voices arises from behind stone walls. A tipple and machine house belch forth smoke. Far up the mountainside lights gleam at the black mouth of "Frozen Head," the name for one of the mines.

It was here, on Aug. 15, 1933, that 178 convict miners threatened to stay down and commit mass suicide unless their conditions were improved. They complained particularly regarding O. C. Hendricks, then deputy warden. He was called "Bull Dick." Prisoners said he had lashed them. Willie White, a colored man, said Hendricks had drawn a gun on him and lashed him twelve times.

"Bull Dick" Gone Now.

"Bull Dick" is gone now. He was forced to resign and the men were promised better treatment. The warden, W. F. Gallaher, resigned also.

"I wouldn't whip them as hard as they had to be," he is reported to have said. Joe Morelock of Johnson City, the leader of the suicide rebellion, was taken before a board convened by order of Dr. E. W. Cocke, commissioner of institutions, and was pronounced insane. He is today an inmate of the central state hospital at Nashville.

The new warden is Emmet Bradshaw. Night work in the mines is still going on. Men who do not work are lashed, either in the mine or in the warden's "bull pen." Production is high and the contractors are profiting. The men are given a certain amount of task coal to get out, depending on the vein, and beyond that are paid for their labor.

The amounts credited to them run from $12 to $15 as high as $30 a month.

ASSETS OF MINE TURNED OVER TO COAL EMPLOYES

Company Unable to Meet Rising Pay Roll.

West Frankfort, Ill., May 2.—[Special.]—Unable to meet a mounting pay roll which in two weeks will reach $12,000, S. Angell, president, and S. D. Childers, secretary of the West Mine Coal corporation, today had executed assignment of company assets to a committee of miners. The company will cease operation of the 25 year old shaft within two weeks, Mr. Angell said.

The principal property assigned to the committee, representing 261 miners, includes the company's equity in 84 cars of unconsigned coal on the tracks here. Because of probable existence of prior assignments on coal, officials were unable to give an estimate of the revenue represented.

In event the assignment is not sufficient to cover the claims of employés, the miners may decide to continue operation of the mine temporarily if they deem it profitable. This and other issues in the unusual situation whereby the miners must decide operation questions themselves are expected to be discussed at a meeting early next week.

The decision to turn all visible assets over to the committee was reached when the company found it impossible to meet the $8,800 pay roll this week.

ONLY 4 COUNTIES IN U. S. FAIL TO ASK PWA FUNDS

Washington, D. C., May 2.—(AP)—The PWA checked over what it has been doing during the last three years and discovered today that only three of the nation's 3,073 counties hadn't asked it for any federal money.

These were Union and White counties in north Georgia and Putnam county in Missouri. The Public Works administration explained "they are dominated almost solely by agricultural pursuits and possess scattered rural population."

Each of the remaining 3,070 counties or their political subdivision has asked for an average of two projects even if they didn't get any.

Prefer Low Tax Levy.

Unionville, Mo., May 2.—(AP)—Putnam county likes to be independent and keep down tax levies. That, county officials said today, was the reason there had been no PWA projects submitted.

"We haven't needed it," said Presiding Judge A. S. Montgomery of the County court. "Of course, we would accept whatever was offered and it probably would help some, but I believe the county can take care of most, if not all, of its needs."

There was talk about a new county jail and an auditorium in Unionville. "We need a new jail," said Sherif A. R. Gibson. Two prisoners escaped last week.

'GET TORRIO,' MAYOR LA GUARDIA DEMANDS FOLLOWING SHOOTING

New York, May 2.—(AP)—"Get Torrio" was the order that came down to police today from Mayor La Guardia himself as the war against crime took on new momentum.

Torrio—the John Torrio who has been credited with having schooled Al Capone in the crimes that brought him finally to prison—is to be picked up as a "common vagrant," the mayor ordered.

"Common vagrant" is technical language, for Torrio's wife last week walked into police headquarters and calmly took $100,000 in cash from her handbag to post bond for his release, and went out and brought back $4,000 for a second bond. He had been arrested several days before on federal charges involving income tax evasion and fraud.

The "Get Torrio" order followed the Broadway shooting last night of Louis Silver—a "Torrio man"—and the subsequent arrest of Harry Bernstein, described by officers as a "front man" for Torrio. Near the scene of the Broadway shooting was found a hat with the initials "H. B." in it. Silver was in critical condition today.

The shooting of Silver, general manager of a Brooklyn brewery, occurred as he was standing beside his automobile on Broadway.

Meantime, Special Prosecutor Thomas E. Dewey prepared evidence against Charles [Lucky] Luciano, accused of heading the eastern seaboard's vice ring. In jail with Luciano, held under $350,000 bail, were twelve men said to have been Luciano's "lieutenants" in a white slave ring.

BURNED WHEN TORCH EXPLODES.

John Smith, 49 years old, 1446 Elgin avenue, employed by the Eck & Son Roofing company of Oak Park, was burned seriously yesterday on the face and hands when a gasoline torch exploded in the company's plant.

REJECT MOVE TO INSTRUCT UTAH VOTES FOR BORAH

Ogden, Utah, May 2.—(AP)—Utah Republicans, rejecting an attempt to pledge the state's national convention delegates to Senator William E. Borah [Rep., Idaho] for president, voted today to send an uninstructed group.

The move for the veteran Idaho senator came after the resolutions committee had recommended to the state convention that the delegation to Cleveland go uninstructed.

Borah Supporter Loses Fight.

The convention proper named four delegates and, immediately afterward, the two congressional district conventions were called to select four others to complete Utah's representation.

Maryland Primary Tomorrow.

Baltimore, Md., May 2.—(AP)—Maryland Democrats, who in 1932 made the late Albert C. Ritchie their "favorite son" candidate for the presidency, will decide at the polls on Monday whether the state's sixteen national convention votes shall go to President Roosevelt or Col. Henry Breckinridge.

Breckinridge, New York attorney, has been campaigning for a week in the state Ritchie governed for fifteen years.

In the Maryland preferential primary Monday, the Democrats may vote either for Breckinridge or President Roosevelt, or they may vote for an uninstructed delegation. Few ever vote for an uninstructed delegation.

Republicans will not participate in a presidential preferential primary, since no candidates filed.

Arkansas Vote Unpledged.

Little Rock, Ark., May 2.—(AP)—Approving an "expression of good will" toward Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, the Arkansas state Republican convention today completed selection of an uninstructed delegation to the Cleveland convention and entered a full state ticket in the 1936 elections.

There was no suggestion for instructing the seven congressional district delegates and four delegates at large who will cast this state's seven votes at Cleveland.

VETERINARIAN'S BODY FOUND.

Centralia, Ill., May 2.—(AP)—Missing for the past six weeks, the body of Dr. Charles F. Sanders, 68, a veterinarian living three miles southeast of Walnut Hill, was found in a water hole near an abandoned mine airshaft here today.

Wins Hero Medal

MISS GRACE GALLAGHER.

Miss Grace Gallagher, 4311 South Kedzie avenue, night chief operator of the Prospect telephone exchange, has been awarded the Theodore N. Vail medal by the Illinois Bell company for her outstanding service in saving the lives of four persons who had been overcome by coal gas.

The victims were members of the family of Charles Adair, 5537 South Homan avenue. One of them awakened and struggled to the telephone, but was unable to speak coherently. The operator on the call switched it to Miss Gallagher, who realized something was wrong and sent the police to the house. The Adairs were revived by an inhalator squad.

VANDENBERG NOT 'ACTIVE' IN RACE FOR NOMINATION

Washington, D. C., May 2.—[Special.]—Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg today said his request to Gov. Frank D. Fitzgerald to present his name to the Republican national convention does not make him an active candidate for the presidential nomination.

"The Michigan state convention generously instructed the Michigan delegation to Cleveland to present my name," the senator said.

"But the delegation is unpledged—at my request. It is free to vote as it pleases. I have not sought a delegate here or elsewhere and I shall not do so. I have not sought the nomination and shall not do so. My situation is not changed in the slightest."

The Michigan senator has never said he would not accept the nomination. His position has been that he would not seek it.

California and Ohio Vote Results Awaited.

much reason, as a repudiation more of Hearst than of Landon and a demonstration of the liability that many Republicans feel that the Kansas governor has incurred by the unrepudiated Hearst promotion of his candidacy. The triumph of the instructed slate would be variously interpreted. By some it would be said that Landon is so popular he won despite the Hearst handicap. By others it would be contended that the power of the Hearst press in California had pulled Landon through.

The Ohio primary on May 12 is a contest between Senator Borah and the regular organization which has put up Robert A. Taft, son of President William Howard Taft, as Ohio's favorite son. If Borah does anywhere nearly as well in Ohio as in the Illinois primary his power in the convention will be greatly enhanced.

Bay State Poll Cited.

It was a pretty impressive straw that the political winds wafted out of the Massachusetts primary last Tuesday. To be sure, only about one-tenth of the Republican electorate participated in the primary. But out of 92,000 Republicans who expressed their presidential preference, 77,000 wrote in the name of Landon. However, Borah, Vandenberg, and Knox polled only 15,000 altogether.

In one district the result was made all the more emphatic by the defeat of John Richardson, Republican national committeeman for Massachusetts, as a candidate for delegate to the national convention. Mr. Richardson and another candidate for the two delegate places were known as Hoover men. They were defeated by Landon men.

Viewed as Significant.

What happened in Massachusetts is generally regarded as significant of what is happening among Republicans in widely varying parts of the country. Landon is one of the least known of the candidates on the eastern seaboard.

He has made only two speeches, has not been seen east of Ohio since his name became seriously linked with the presidency. Hoover and Borah are national figures and Frank Knox is a native of Massachusetts and had campaigned New England intensively. All kinds of theories have been advanced to account for the preference manifested by Massachusetts for the Kansas budget balancer. Gov. Landon's own theory he expressed thus:

"It reflects something more significant than any personal factor. It should be regarded as an expression of voters' approval of an administrative record which seems to them in contrast to that of the New Deal."

Moley Takes on Landon.

Raymond Moley, ex officio head of the Roosevelt brain trust, had much the same idea when he said recently:

"Landon is the answer to the Republican need for a candidate strikingly in contrast with Roosevelt. He is sure to get the nomination.

"As a true Democrat I make this prediction after a careful study of public reaction throughout the nation. I make the statement, too, with the conviction, as a Democrat, that Landon will be an opponent to contend with.

"The drift of sentiment throughout the country is for a man with the elements of homely common sense and the background of economy which Landon represents."

SENATOR BORAH TO CAMPAIGN IN OHIO THIS WEEK

Washington, D. C., May 2.—(AP)—Senator Borah [Rep., Idaho] said today he would campaign in Ohio throughout next week, concluding with a radio address next Saturday night at Cleveland. The Ohio primary is on May 12.

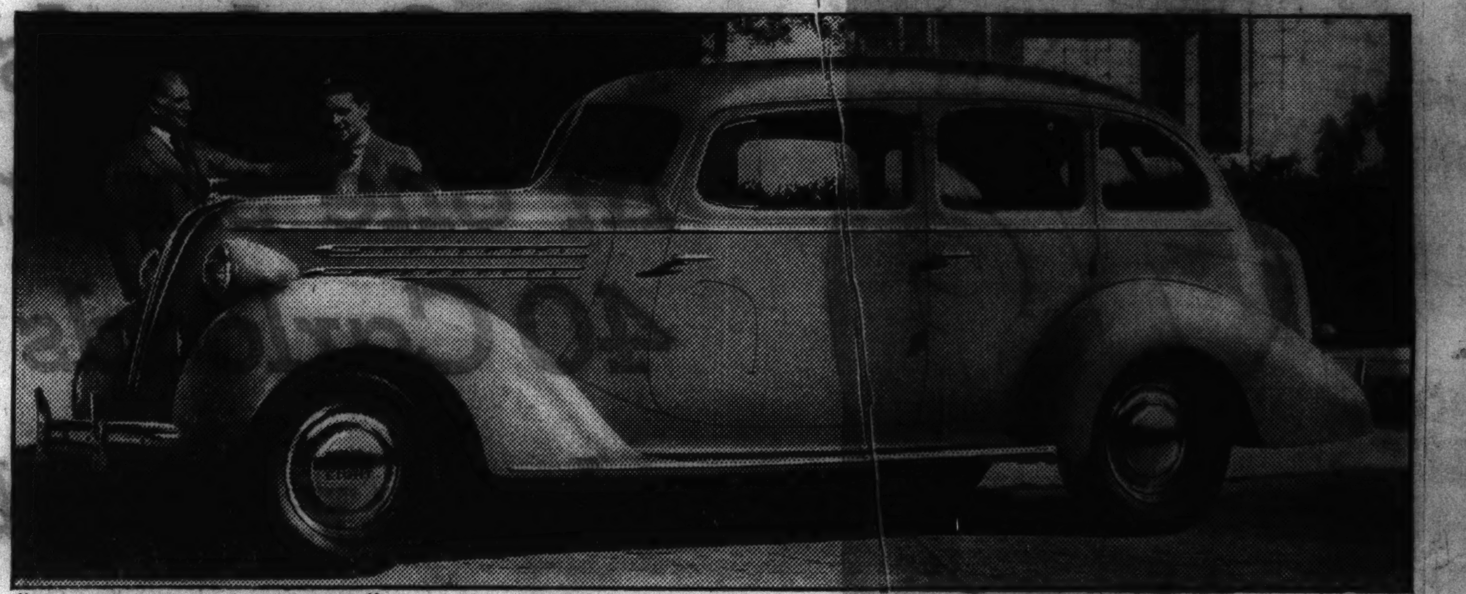
Here's Why HUDSON Performance Is Unmatched By Any Other Eight



"Best performing car at any price!"

It can be MEASURED before you spend your money . . . just like horsepower and wheelbase

Any new car feels great when you first take the wheel. That's what makes it so hard to decide which one is going to give you the best performance, year in and year out. You can find out in a month or two—but it's too late to change your mind then!

Wheelbase, seat widths, leg room . . . all these things can be measured and compared. No guesswork is necessary. Horsepower can be measured, too . . . but power alone doesn't mean performance, as many a car owner can tell you.

But there is a way to measure performance—before you spend your money. The answer is HORSEPOWER PER TON . . . the amount of power to pull the car and its passengers.

More horsepower per ton means a car that will get away faster, climb hills more easily, give you more miles on less gasoline. It means less strain on the motor, less wear and tear on its driver's nerves. It means a safer car, because of easier handling and quicker response to your demands.

That's why the Hudson Eight, with more horsepower per ton—and smoother power—than any other car built today, is recognized as the world's best performing stock car. Owners will tell you it's so; the official record books prove it over and over again. And, along with this performance, Hudson owners report gasoline and oil mileage equal to small Sixes . . . and total mileages of 150,000, 200,000 miles and more. Some Hudsons are well past the 500,000-mile mark and going strong.

Why guess at automobile performance? Measure it before you buy with this simple rule of horsepower per ton. Then prove what the figures show you by driving a Hudson Eight. There's no better time than today!

Here's how you can measure performance before you buy!

This list, including all the best performing cars built today, shows how they compare with the Hudson Eight in horsepower per ton . . . the measure of car performance . . . and in price.

HUDSON EIGHT	$855	74.1
Car A	1090	63.5

NEW DEAL HELD A CONTRADICTION BY G.O.P. SENATOR

Asks for Restoration of Government Sanity.

New York, May 2.—[Special.]—In his first speech in the east since his selection as temporary chairman of the Republican national convention, Senator Frederick Steiwer of Oregon declared tonight for the liquidation of the Works Progress administration and the turning over of responsibility for the administration of relief to the states and local agencies.

Senator Steiwer, regarded as a possible "dark horse" candidate for the presidential nomination, spoke at a meeting of the Queens county Republican committee in Jamaica. It was said that he will make no other speech in New York before the convention.

Opposes 5 Billion Fund.

Asserting that he always had believed it wrong to give a 5 billion dollar check to any president, Senator Steiwer charged that there had been political corruption in the expenditure of relief money and declared that the Republican party had a right to ask the American people whether they approved the evils of the present relief program.

"We will not repudiate the destitute nor starve those who are in need," he said, "but we must courageously take our position that public money voted for relief of the destitute will be employed to feed hungry mouths and not to feed hungry political manipulators working under the direction of Mr. Farley."

Senator Steiwer characterized the philosophy of President Roosevelt, as expressed in the latter's speech at the National Democratic club's dinner last week, as a reflection of the "abstruse confusion" of the New Deal.

Assails Tax Bill.

The senator attacked the administration's tax bill with its proposed tax on undivided profits, now pending in congress, as framed by those who no longer regarded thrift as a virtue. He urged balancing of the federal budget, restoration of sanity in government, the unfettering of the American economic system and the employment of the "matchless capabilities" of the American people for reconstruction in a way that would bring real social security.

"If you can imagine intricacies made wholly inscrutable and contradiction confounded with confusion: That is the New Deal," Senator Steiwer said at the outset of his address. "In its many ramifications it has been ingrafted upon the Democratic party, but it is a thing separate and apart from that party.

"The New Deal truly is made up from the discards of all the old deals. In the space of one political rally I shall not attempt further to define it. We know that its administration presents problems of greatest complexity and involved issues almost beyond human comprehension. Monetary questions, war debts, foreign trade, tarif and numerous other important subjects confront us."

12 Million Unemployed.

"Depression causes unemployment. In January, 1935, the number of unemployed was 13,000,000. Today, the number is in excess of 12,000,000. In January, 1935, the President stated that there was 5,000,000 families and unattached persons on relief. Recently his estimate was 5,300,000. The federal program for employment for these unfortunate fellow citizens and for relief for those who are destitute costs in excess of 3 billion dollars per year.

"It unbalances the federal budget. It insures a continuous deficit. It adds in serious amounts to the public debt. Last year the President asked for and received $4,880,000,000 for relief and work relief. This year he has asked for $1,500,000,000 in addition, and every one who knows the situation assumes that congress must appropriate this amount and probably an equal amount more next January.

"It is supposed that in normal times approximately 50,000,000 people are gainfully employed in this country. At this time about 40,000,000 who are gainfully employed, through the payment of direct taxes and the payment of indirect taxes concealed in the cost of living, are supporting the 10,000,000 unemployed. I ask a serious question: 'What are we going to do to solve this problem and to relieve ourselves of this burden?'

NRA Death a Benefit.

"The New Deal attempted to meet it with the NRA. Against NRA maladministration the people were almost in open rebellion. Finally it was stricken down by the Supreme court, and since that time there has been some improvement in employment and increases in wages. Since the NRA has been inoperative the New Deal has been without a program, save its program of relief and work relief.

"Moreover the New Deal seems incapable of formulating a program. It has degenerated from bad administration of the NRA to bad thinking with respect to present economic objectives. This is illustrated by the President's recent speech in New York, in which he said: 'Wages ought to and must go up with prices.'

"He also said: 'Higher wages for workers, more income for farmers, means more goods produced, more and better food eaten, fewer unemployed and lower taxes.'

"And then he added:

"'That is my economic and social philosophy, and incidentally, my political philosophy, as well.'

Prices Beat Wage Gains.

"Let us examine these statements of the President's economic, social and political philosophy. Have wages gone up with prices? It is reliably estimated that while wages were increasing 8 per cent the cost of living has increase approximately 20 per cent. The President asserted that we are 'on our way' to attainment of his objective, but if his objective is to increase real wages the further we go 'on our way' the greater will be the disparity between wages and living costs.

"In the second statement quoted," Senator Steiwer continued, "the President coupled higher wages for workers with more income for farmers. Both are desirable, but the increased income for farmers if accomplished by a program of scarcity or by a processing tax, means higher living costs for the consumer and a decrease in real wages for those who work in the cities."

Senator Steiwer added that the crowning glory of the President's philosophy was his declaration for lower taxes.

"How can there be a hope for lower taxes when we confront a steadily mounting cost of government," he said. "How can taxes be lowered when the number of federal employés is increasing and when the administration actually boasts that it plans a deficit? Lower taxes result from thrift and economy and not from recklessness and spending."

The Oregon senator commented upon the fact that President Roosevelt, in speaking of the "current costs of rebuilding America," said the governmental deficit this year was about 3 billions while Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said it was 6 billions. Senator Steiwer said that the four year cost of the Roosevelt administration was about 30 billions, or nearly the value of all the farm lands and buildings in the United States.

"America, agast at the revelations already made," he said with reference to the election in November, "must determine upon its course of action."

Undergoes Operation

VIRGINIA PINE.

Hollywood, Cal., May 2.—[Special.]—Virginia Pine, movie actress and former Chicago society girl, underwent a serious operation at the Cedars of Lebanon hospital here last night. The operation was reported successful. Miss Pine, who divorced Edward J. Lehmann Jr. of Chicago two years ago, has been reported planning to marry George Raft, screen star, as soon as he obtains a divorce.

TENANTS WITH HIGHER INCOMES MUST QUIT PROJECT APARTMENTS

New York, May 2.—[Special.]—Hundreds of families with substantial incomes occupying apartments in the three model housing projects erected in New York with federal financing, must give up their suites, the state board of housing has ruled. The board has directed building owners to replace such tenants with families of low income, for whom the homes primarily were designed, it was learned today.

The three operations affected by the decision are Knickerbocker Village, on the lower east side of Manhattan; Hillside homes, in the Bronx, and Boulevard Gardens, in Woodside, Queens.

The state board reported it had found many tenants in these buildings with family incomes of from $4,000 to $5,000 and even higher, some of whom previously occupied apartments renting for from $80 to $100 or more a month.

STRIKE AT GOLF CLUBS DROPPED BY UNION VOTE

Members of the Hodcarriers, Building, and Common Laborers union of Lake county voted last night to end the strike of greens keepers at nine exclusive North Shore golf clubs. Earlier in the day pickets failed to appear at any of the clubs.

In effect the strike, which was called last week-end, was ended several days ago when work was resumed at seven of the clubs either by old employés or new laborers. Sherif Lawrence A. Doolittle of Lake county said last night he expected that all of the strikers would be rehired.

They failed in their demand for recognition of the union and an increase in their hourly wage from 47½ cents to 75 cents. Club officials, however, granted them an increase to 55 cents.

REGULARS ROAR AT HINT OF NEW HORNER BREACH

See Peril to County Patronage Hopes.

BY PERCY WOOD.

Reëlection of Bruce A. Campbell of Belleville to the Democratic state chairmanship was predicted yesterday by Chicago Democrats who returned from Friday's turbulent state convention in Springfield where "party harmony" was loudly proclaimed by the speakers to the accompaniment of boos and jeers from delegates on the floor.

Campbell will be supported by the Kelly-Nash Chicago forces when the state central committee meets in the capitol on May 12. The Horner group of downstaters, plus a few Chicagoans who aligned themselves with the governor in the primary campaign, want Campbell dethroned because of his opposition to Horner. But the Cook county members will control the committee, as Chicago delegates controled the convention, and it appeared that Campbell will continue as chairman.

Horner-Courtney Pact Seen.

There was some talk at Springfield that the governor and State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney might establish Cook county headquarters of their own next fall and run their campaigns jointly, independent of the state committee which customarily handles campaigns.

Or, it was regarded as possible that the governor might place his fight for reëlection in the hands of the men who directed his primary fight—James M. Slattery in Cook county and F. Lynden Smith, downstate. Existence of this dual organization was discussed angrily by the Chicago delegates in Springfield hotel lobbies prior to the state convention.

Chicagoans Eye Patronage.

The primary fight over, the Chicago organization members feel that the governor should disband the group which helped him and leave only the regular organization to handle matters, and to receive the state patronage.

Horner people have expressed a preference for Harry Hershey of Taylorville for state chairman, but their hopes are considered anything but bright in view of the convention sentiment and the solid Cook county majority Chicago committeemen hold.

However, Daniel James Florence Sullivan, secretary of the state committee and Horner's chief political strategist, declared in Springfield that the governor's forces have a chance to control the committee and elect Hershey.

Complete Primary Vote Given.

About the time this statement was being made Secretary of State Hughes announced the comparative Cook county and downstate Democratic primary vote, as follows: Cook, 969,654; downstate, 627,764. The Chicago organization believes it will control the entire county vote, save for Sullivan's district, the second, and would be able to run the convention with 933,937 votes, as compared to 663,421 votes among the Horner adherents.

Sullivan insisted, however, that Committeemen Leo J. Slaski of the Fifth, Chicago, district, and John P. Dougherty, who will cast the Tenth district—part of Cook and all of Lake county—vote, will be with Horner. If Slaski's and Dougherty's votes were added to the Horner total the governor would have 812,363 and the Kelly-Nash group 785,055. But organization men denied that the two Chicagoans would desert to Horner.

Mayor Kelly returned yesterday from the convention in which his appearance was cheered in a demonstration which lasted several minutes.

"Just Blowing Off"—Kelly.

Asked if he saw any special significance in the boos which greeted Gov. Horner's appearance, the mayor said he thought it of little importance and merely "blowing off steam."

"Of course there was still some animosity remaining from the campaign," the mayor added, "but the incident wasn't important."

Victory for the entire Democratic ticket next fall, "from Roosevelt on," was predicted by the mayor. Asked about relief legislation pending in the legislature, he said he opposed the move to place the burden on real estate, as by the Billman plan which the governor is backing.

Under this contemplated legislation, county boards would be empowered to levy and collect relief taxes. The bills were introduced last week but did not progress far. They will be considered further on Tuesday when both houses reconvene.

Eden T. Brekke, Republican committeeman of the 36th ward, was chosen yesterday to be chief doorkeeper of the Republican national convention in Cleveland in June by National Committeeman Frank L. Smith, who was designated to make the selection by the national committee.

Brekke was campaign manager for County Commissioner H. Wallace Caldwell, aspirant for the Republican nomination for governor who was defeated by Wayland Brooks.

The new Liberty church, near Baubstadt, burned first, and an hour later the Harper school, near Somerville, 15 miles away, burned.

HASTINGS PLANS TO RETIRE FROM PLACE IN SENATE

Will Not Seek Re-election, He Announces.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 2.—[Special.]—Senator Daniel O. Hastings of Delaware, chairman of the Republican senatorial campaign committee and one of the most outspoken foes of the New Deal in congress, announced today that he would not seek reëlection, but would devote his time, after the campaign, to the private practice of law.

Senator Hastings' announcement, which was made in the form of a letter to Republican leaders in Delaware, declared that his law practice had suffered greatly and that he could not neglect it for another six year term in the senate. There were reports in reliable quarters, however, that another reason for his determination not to make the race was the intention of the powerful du Pont family to support Gov. C. Douglas Buck, another Republican, for the senate. Support of the du Ponts in Delaware is indispensable for a candidate for office.

Friends Are Surprised.

Friends of Senator Hastings were surprised by the reports that the du Pont family would sponsor another man for the senate, because of his record as a Republican and his readiness to defend them against attacks by the New Dealers. Senator Lewis B. Schwellenbach [Dem., Wash.] took the floor just before Alfred E. Smith's Liberty league speech and denounced Pierre S. du Pont and John J. Raskob, former chairman of the Democratic national committee, as tax dodgers.

Senator Hastings replied with a long analysis of the record before the board of tax appeals, which showed, he declared, that there was no evidence of fraud, as alleged by the government, in connection with stock transactions between the two men. He charged the administration with using the income tax weapon for political persecution.

Senator Hastings came to the senate by appointment in 1928 to succeed T. Coleman du Pont and was elected for the six year term beginning March 4, 1931.

Plans to Practice Law.

His letter, addressed to Gov. Buck, who is Republican national committeeman; Mrs. Frank G. Tallman, Republican national committeewoman, and Edmund Mitchell, state Republican chairman, stated:

"I have concluded not to be a candidate for reëlection, and I think I ought to acquaint you with that fact as soon as possible.

"When I have finished my term I will have been in the public service in various positions for 32 years, with the exception of three months. During my service in the senate my law practice has greatly suffered and I have arrived at a time in life when six more years in the senate would leave me in a position where I could not take care of the obligations imposed upon me.

"After the senate adjourns I propose to devote my time between then and November to the election of the Republican national and state ticket."

Five Indicted on Charge of Concealing Firm's Assets

W. H. Feinberg, 28 years old, owner of the Clifford-Crosby company, 1379 Milwaukee avenue, merchandisers, and four salesmen were named in an indictment returned in federal court yesterday before Judge John P. Barnes on charges of concealing assets of the firm, which is in bankruptcy. The four salesmen are Lee Ornstein, 40 years old; G. W. McDonald, 45 years old; W. P. Perry, 39 years old, and John O'Day, 40 years old.

WED ONE WEEK; SEIZED FOR "L" STATION HOLDUP

Thomas Boulahanis, 23 years old, a bridegroom of a week, was arrested yesterday at his home, 803 South Ashland avenue, by Sergt. John J. Hanrahan of the detective bureau, and was identified as one of the two gunmen who took $80 in a robbery of the Randolph street and Wabash avenue elevated station on Feb. 11.

In the robbery Boulahanis is accused of threatening twenty persons on the platform with a revolver while his partner, John Carter, robbed Miss Bernice Culhane, 4312 Washington boulevard, the ticket agent. Miss Culhane identified Boulahanis yesterday. Carter was arrested a week ago and is held in the county jail under a $10,000 bond.

All day yesterday Boulahanis's bride sobbed and pleaded with Sergt. Hanrahan to visit her husband, but her plea was refused until a formal charge is placed against him.

Sergt. O'Malley to End 30 Years' Police Service

Sergt. Michael J. O'Malley of the Shakespeare avenue police station will end thirty years' service in the police department at midnight tonight when he is retired under the compulsory retirement pension act. Commissioner James P. Allman announced yesterday. Sergt. O'Malley will be 63 years old tomorrow. He lives at 4342 North Tripp avenue and has been a desk sergeant at the Shakespeare station for six years.

U. S. DIPLOMATS LIVE IN LUXURY IN MANY CLIMES

American Taxpayers Dig to Meet Bills.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 2.—[Special.]—The American people dig into their pockets for almost 12 million dollars each year to maintain members of their diplomatic corps abroad in a luxury to which most of the drawing room statesmen are not accustomed.

The government has 54 embassies and legations. Of these 23 have been bought by the American people. Nineteen of the latter have residential quarters so the members of the diplomatic corps may not have to ride to and from their work as do most of the people whom they are representing. Seven more, all with residential quarters, are under construction.

Two Under Construction.

The consular corps is less fortunate in the matter of housing, although steps are being taken to remedy the plight of its members. Of about 200 consulates only 12 are owned by this government. Six of these have residential quarters. Two more are under construction which will provide housing.

The 54 ambassadors and ministers draw annual pay of $842,500. The consular corps draws $3,341,500 a year ranging from $10,000 a year for 21 class one consul generals to 48 unclassified foreign service who draw but $2,500. The total number of foreign service offices is 693.

For transportation foreign service officers can draw on a fund of $516,700. For office and living quarters, not owned by the United States, there is an office and living quarter rent fund of $2,016,000 for 1,287 members, ranging from $3,000 to $560 a year.

Transportation Big Item.

A kind government gives, in addition to living quarters and transportation $250,000 a year. These ration allowances range from $1,335 to $42 a year, a sum which would be welcomed by any family.

As most American posts of high rank are recognizedly filled in repayment of political favors and campaign contributions, it must be said in justice to the holders that they spend far more than their salaries in realizing to the full the social advantages of their positions. It is also admittedly true that the lesser men, who do the work for those who get the glory and the blame, make a very good living out of their posts.

Under direction of the lieutenants is an army of clerks, some of them citizens of the country to which the American representative is assigned; on the shoulders of 1,621 of these workers falls the bulk of this government's work abroad. These get $2,334,000. The annual salary of the clerks ranges from $4,000 to $1,088 depending upon their posts.

Many Other Employés.

In addition to the clerks there are 1,254 miscellaneous employés from dispatch agents to porters, who take $618,345 a year. Most of these are subjects of foreign countries.

The corps has a fund of $1,462,450 for contingent expenses such as stationery and supplies, office equipment, seals, ice and drinking water, garden supplies, motor vehicles and uniform of embassy and legation attendants.

In addition there are emergency funds. One of $200,000 is appropriated for "emergencies arising in the diplomatic and consular corps," another of $125,000 is more mysteriously entitled representation allowance to diplomatic missions and consulates. There is also a $185,300 fund for retirement and disability.

All the appropriations mentioned total $11,591,795, so that foreign officers abroad, for whom a beneficent government provides food, lodging, servants and even ice water, spent the bulk of the $15,938,565 appropriation for the department of state.

CONGRESSMAN UNDER JAIL SENTENCE WILL TRY FOR RE-ELECTION

Washington, D. C., May 2.—(AP)—Representative John H. Hoeppel [Dem., Cal.], who received a jail sentence after conviction for conspiracy to sell a West Point appointment, today disclosed his candidacy for reelection in a letter to United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett.

He wrote Garnett demanding dismissal or immediate trial on a second indictment charging sale of a West Point appointment for $1,000. In the letter, he said, "from present indications, I will be renominated."

Hoeppel and a son, Charles, were tried and convicted last December on the conspiracy charge. They were sentenced to four months to a year, but have an appeal pending before the District of Columbia Court of Appeals.

The Californian pleaded not guilty to the second indictment, which charged the actual solicitation and acceptance of a $1,000 note from James W. Ives of Baltimore in return for the appointment.

ACQUITTED ON SLAYING CHARGE.

Pekin, Ill., May 2.—[U. P.]—William J. Potts, 23, son of a prominent Pekin attorney, was acquitted by a Circuit court jury last night of a charge of slaying his brother-in-law, Clarence Rupp, Feb. 9. Potts pleaded self-defense.

YEAR'S HEAVIEST RAIN DRENCHES CHICAGO REGION

The twenty-four hour rain fall which ended early yesterday totaled .93 of an inch, the heaviest in Chicago since last November. In central Illinois the rain approached a deluge and was the heaviest in recent years.

At Bloomington the 24 hour fall brought a total of 4.49 inches. Between 6 and 8:45 p. m. Friday night, 3.45 inches fell. Sugar creek and Miller creek went over their banks submerging adjacent streets under several inches of water.

Despite the rain, Chicago still has a deficiency of 2.22 inches below normal since Jan. 1. During the 24 hours ending at 8 o'clock last night precipitation totaled .15 of an inch.

ROOSEVELT ON WEEK-END TRIP ABOARD YACHT

Approves Routine Bills Before Departing.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., May 2.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt tonight was steaming down Chesapeake bay on his first week-end cruise of the 1936 season.

Mr. Roosevelt left the White House shortly after noon to board the presidential yacht Potomac in the Washington navy yard. It was the first down-the-bay cruise for the Potomac, the former department of commerce cutter Electra which was reconditioned for presidential use at a cost of $160,000. The Potomac carried Mr. Roosevelt on his recent fishing excursion off the coast of Florida.

Also aboard are Col. and Mrs. Arthur Murray of Argyle, Scotland, friends of Mr. Roosevelt; Raymond Moley, one of the original brain trust; Capt. and Mrs. Wilson Brown, and Miss Marguerite Lehand, the President's personal secretary. Capt. Brown, who is the White House naval aid, will command the Potomac on the cruise.

Mr. Roosevelt plans return to the White House tomorrow afternoon in time to greet Sir Bede Clifford, governor general of the Bahamas, and Lady Clifford.

Before he left Mr. Roosevelt signed routine bills, among which was a joint congressional resolution providing for investigation of means for increasing the capacity of the Panama canal for possible future needs of oceanic shipping.

CHICAGO AIRPORT VETOED, BUT WPA BUILDS OTHERS

51 Projects Approved for Plane Bases.

The federal Works Progress administration, which turned down Chicago's request for a lake front airport last January, has been launching similar projects in other cities at the rate of more than one a day, it was disclosed yesterday in dispatches from Washington. Between Feb. 15 and March 31—45 days—there were 51 such projects approved, according to an announcement by Harry Hopkins, WPA administrator.

Chicago asked $8,577,000 for its airport. Although federal officials agreed the improvement was desirable, approval was withheld because such a permanent project would require the expenditure of too much money for materials in proportion to wages. The city's plea was voted down in favor of quick employment projects with low material costs.

Kelly Still Has Hope.

Informed of the airport projects planned for other cities, Mayor Kelly said yesterday that he regretted the action of the WPA in refusing Chicago's plea.

"I hope that the WPA rules can be made elastic enough to include construction of our airport," the mayor declared. "The higher material costs would be more than compensated by the benefits the postoffice and commercial aircraft would obtain from a lake front airport in Chicago."

The WPA had allocated funds for a total of 461 airport projects up to March 31. The total expenditure to that date was $23,111,886, including contributions of $3,271,242 by local governmental units sponsoring the improvements. Projects under construction, including those completed, partially completed, or temporarily suspended, totaled 391.

Many Near Chicago Costs.

WPA officials admitted the proportionate material costs of many of the approved projects approach the Chicago estimate and acknowledged many of them are less worth while. The officials said it was easier to find made work projects in large centers than in rural areas where most of the airport projects are under way.

The largest number of projects in any one state is 40 in Florida, which are to cost $1,400,000. That state is one of the smallest contributors of federal taxes. In contrast to Florida, Illinois has but six projects, including one of $444,604 for improvement of the Municipal airport and five downstate. The total allocation for all the Illinois airport projects is $677,533, despite the fact that this state is a heavy tax contributor.

"While the necessity for improvement of airways is generally appreciated," Hopkins said, "and this development program of the present is comparable to the highway program of a generation ago, it is also appreciated that in certain localities other types of work of necessity come first. The airway problem in such localities therefore must properly take its place after such projects as schools, sanitation systems, and the like."

Of the 461 airport projects for which WPA funds have been allocated, only nine are in the twelve large cities which supply the major portion of airway passenger trafic, and these nine are improvement projects. The large cities which have received some of the funds, in addition to Chicago, are New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Cleveland, Detroit, Baltimore, St. Paul, and San Francisco.

LONDON, May 2.—(AP)—Earl Poulett, withdrawing his disclaimer of responsibility for his wife's debts, announced today that "having reëstablished their home together," he was prepared to accept his legal obligations to the same extent as before March 31. The earl, who married the former Oriel Ross, an actress, June 21, 1935, had announced April 2 he would not be responsible for her debts.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, May 2.—The American flag alone will fly over Porto Rican public buildings, acting Gov. José Padín asserted today. He said that as a result of the Tydings plebiscite bill in congress some individuals had acted as though the measure already has become a law.

"Over the island's public buildings no one has the right to hoist any other flag but that of the United States of America," he said. "Any substitution made for that flag, no matter how respectable the substitute, must necessarily be interpreted as a challenge to the sovereignty of the United States."

NEW GERMAN ZEP HOPS WEDNESDAY ON FLIGHT TO U. S.

52 Passengers Booked for Atlantic Voyage.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, May 2.—Passengers began assembling today at Friedrichshafen for the first trip to Lakehurst, N. J., of the new German airship, the Hindenburg. The dirigible will take off at dawn next Wednesday.

There will be fifty-two passengers aboard, including several veteran airship travelers. Among them are Sir Hubert Wilkins, the polar explorer, Commander Scott E. Peck of the United States navy, two members of the Goodyear-Zeppelin corporation of Akron, O., Mr. and Mrs. William B. Leeds Jr. and Dr. Theodore Lewald, president of the Olympic organizing committee.

The name of Dr. Hugo Eckener's son was mentioned in the press as being a member of the crew, but no reference was made to Eckener himself, despite the reported removal of the Nazi "disgrace ban" against the veteran Zeppelin commander. The ban was imposed because of Eckener's alleged indifference in using the Hindenburg for Nazi election propaganda.

Terms Flights Experimental.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, May 2.—(AP)—Dr. Hugo Eckener, veteran Zeppelin master, today explained that this summer's voyages of the new German Zeppelin, the Hindenberg, to the United States will chiefly be in the nature of an experiment to determine whether North Atlantic cruises can be made with the same punctuality as the Zeppelin company has maintained to South America.

"The projected North American trips first and foremost are intended to be in order to study the experimental voyages to see whether it is possible to fly regularly to North America with the same promptness and timetable precision as trips to South America which have become a fixed institution," Eckener said.

"The North Atlantic constitutes an area with a great weather variety and will need a carefully planned navigation to enable us to arrive in average figures such as must be maintained in a timetable.

No Fixed Routes for Flights.

"One thing is certain, however. It will never be possible to give a single route as one to be followed. The route must be decided from case to case. Sometimes the best time can be made not by a straight route but by going far north or south. The best we can do is to figure on about 65 to 70 hours for a trip westward and 50 to 55 hours eastward. This uncertainty in time required has nothing to do with safety.

"I expect the coming North American voyage to prove extremely interesting in increasing our meteorological knowledge."

Crashes into Mooring Tower.

[Copyright: 1936: By the New York Times.]

RIO DE JANEIRO, May 2.—A workman was injured and passengers aboard the Graf Zeppelin were frightened this afternoon when a guy line was snapped by strong winds and the airship plunged into its mooring tower. A workman was struck by the guy line as it snapped and he was knocked off his footing. He clung to an end of the line and dangled from the tower until rescued. Forty feet of the Zeppelin's fabric was ripped in the accident. The airship arrived shortly after noon and sailed early this evening for Germany.

GOV. COCHRAN CALLS NEBRASKA 'TAXPAYER EDEN'

Fremont, Neb., May 2.—(AP)—Gov. R. L. Cochran pictured Nebraska as a "taxpayer's paradise" and advocated the state continue its pay as it goes policy in an address here this afternoon at the 41st annual convention of the Nebraska division, Travelers' Protective association. "Nebraska probably is in the most enviable financial condition of any state in the country," the governor said. "Its problem is not that of borrowing money or selling bonds but of investing some of its surplus funds."

CONSTIPATION, LIVER AND GALL BLADDER TROUBLES

Need Pluto Water with Amazing Double Action

2. Stimulates Gall Bladder and Liver to Normal, "Free-Flowing" Action!

Constipation, liver and gall bladder troubles often come together. Millions suffer them daily—yet don't know why. Often, physicians say, it is not only because you're constipated, but also because biliary drainage from liver and gall bladder is not normal.

Hence, ordinary laxatives that act only on bowels to temporarily relieve constipation still leave you feeling terrible. Pluto Water, however (with its amazing double action), relieves all these troubles at the same time.

First, Pluto gives you a sure, gentle flush in an hour or less. Second, it stimulates gall bladder and liver to normal, "free flowing" action. So relief is quick—and thorough! You feel amazingly better in an hour. Soon feel normal again! That's why more than 50,000 doctors take Pluto themselves and recommend it to their patients. That's why your own doctor, too, will tell you there is nothing better.

DO AS DOCTORS DO

Dr. W. R. K. of Iowa says: "Since a gall bladder operation, my liver has never functioned normally. Pluto gives me best relief."

So do as doctors do next time you feel dull and listless from constipation, liver or gall bladder troubles. Take Pluto Water in the tasteless, non-habit-forming dose—1/5 Pluto, 4/5 glass hot water. Cleanse your system of health-destroying poisons this sure way. You'll be amazed at the difference it makes!

Two hundred million bottles of Pluto have been used—millions more each year. The safest, surest, most economical relief you can buy. Comes in 2 sizes—25c and 50c—at all drug stores. A beneficial, saline mineral water from famous French Lick Springs, Indiana.

WPA PROGRAMS WILL GET WHOLE 1½ BILLION FUND

Republicans May Suggest Substitute Bill.

Washington, D. C., May 2.—[Special.]—The new 1½ billion dollar relief appropriation in its final form provides only for a continued WPA program, it was revealed today as the house appropriations committee concluded work on the measure. The bill will be reported to the house late next week, as soon as committee clerks have perfected its technical language, according to present plans.

Specific amounts are earmarked in the bill for various types of WPA construction projects, work through the National Youth administration, and white collar undertakings which will continue in more or less their present form, but no sums are set aside for Secretary Ickes's PWA or Rexford Guy Tugwell's resettlement administration.

See or Position Ignored.

The fact that the bill will be reported out in this form was taken by house members to indicate that the Democratic leadership is determined to push the new appropriation through in the form in which President Roosevelt wants it, despite opposition from a number of Republicans and pressure from powerful blocs favoring continuance of a PWA heavy construction program.

Only word from the President himself that he wants 400 million dollars for WPA included in the measure, as requested by a house bloc of 154 members, would lead to alteration of the bill, Democratic leaders said. They expressed conviction that all funds earmarked for WPA are needed to provide sufficient federal employment, and remarked that if Mr. Roosevelt decides to aid PWA, an act they do not expect, it will be necessary to increase the relief appropriation to 1 billion 900 million dollars.

G. O. P. May Draft Substitute.

It appeared today that Republican leaders in both senate and house may get together to suggest a constructive program to take the place of the administration bill.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg [Rep., Mich.], said he would introduce a substitute relief bill in the senate when the administration measure reaches there, and it was revealed that he has been in conference upon it with Republican leaders in the house.

Coincidentally, it was learned that Republican members of the house appropriations committee were considering making a minority report on the administration bill.

Seek End of Burocracy.

The Republicans plan to propose, briefly, that the federal government assume all responsibility for relief but turn funds over to impartial state boards, consisting of both Democrats and Republicans, to guarantee, as they put it, "non-political administration and local responsibility."

This would, in their opinion, lead to lowered relief costs through at least a partial return to direct relief, and tend to "eliminate federal burocracy" and pave the way for liquidation of relief.

Hawk Frightening Police Is Captured by a Hero

Policeman Oscar [Cowboy] Scott became a hero to his comrades at the Englewood station yesterday when he captured with his barehands a large hawk that had been swooping about the interior of the building and frightening the policemen. The bird was captured Friday after it broke two windows in a home and was caged in a box at the station from which it escaped yesterday. When Scott recaptured the hawk, Desk Sergt. Joseph Scanlan ordered it taken for safe keeping to the dog pound.

NEW DEAL TO COUNT U. S. JOBLESS AFTER ELECTION IN NOVEMBER

Washington, D. C., May 2.—(AP)—Plans for a complete census of the jobless after the November election and a continuing check at frequent intervals thereafter were pushed today by the commerce department.

Demands for such a count were made at the recent convention of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. Secretary Daniel C. Roper and several chamber speakers joined in stressing the lack of accurate data on the number of unemployed as a primary obstacle in planning for new jobs.

Figures on the number of unemployed range from 6,000,000 by government estimators to the more than 12,000,000 by the American Federation of Labor. There has been no actual count since 1930, and most government statisticians believe present estimates contain wide errors.

STEAK IS FAVORED FOOD, BUT CORNED BEEF RATES NEXT

Results of a survey among business, governmental and civic leaders throughout the country to determine the most popular American dishes were announced yesterday by the National Restaurant association, with headquarters at 666 Lake Shore drive.

The association is sponsoring National Restaurant week which opens tomorrow and will continue until next Sunday.

The survey disclosed that corned beef and cabbage runs a close race with steak as the favorite main dish. Among soups, vegetable and onion top all others. White fish leads in that course and lettuce and tomato salad is the choice. Favorite desserts are apple and gooseberry pie. Coffee is the preferred beverage with milk a close second, and white bread is a two to one choice.

TOWNSEND PLAN MOTOR CARAVAN HIT AS NEW HOAX

Bell Assails Proposed Trek Across U. S.

Washington, D. C., May 2.—(AP)—A call for a Townsend plan motor caravan from Los Angeles to Washington to seek enactment of $200 per month old age pension legislation was called "another cruel hoax upon the aged and infirm" today by Chairman Bell [Dem., Mo.] of the house committee investigating the Townsend organization.

"It clearly has been shown that the Townsend leaders, whose fertile minds conceived this latest fantastic dream, primarily were interested in the monetary returns from the members for their own personal benefits," Bell said.

Inquiry to Resume.

Meanwhile it was announced that the investigation would be resumed Tuesday with Dr. F. E. Townsend, originator of the plan, on the witness stand.

Members of a subcommittee which has been holding hearings in Michigan and California will be back with new testimony to be used as a basis for questioning.

Explaining that the call for the caravan was carried in the current issue of the Townsend weekly over Dr. Townsend's facsimile signature, Bell said "there can be no good accomplished" by it so far as the enactment of the Townsend legislation is concerned.

Would Welcome Attendance.

"I can visualize that if many make the motor trip they may suffer physical injury from such a arduous journey at this time of year," Bell said. "Many may even die prematurely on account of the rigors of the trip, if not while en route to Washington."

He said the "pilgrims" would be welcome to attend the committee's hearings "because we feel that they would leave feeling as several eastern Townsendites did."

The latter, he said, told him "they were surprised at the fairness and orderliness of the hearings because stories in Townsend weekly and speeches by organizers were to the contrary."

BOY'S SLAYING HELD ACCIDENTAL.

A coroner's jury yesterday decided that the slaying of Luke Grbac Jr., 10 years old, 439 North Harding avenue, who was shot by a pistol in the hands of a playmate Friday evening, was accidental and freed John Tomasovich, 12 years old, 453 North Harding avenue.

NEW DEAL PERILS RIGHTS, ASSERTS STEPHEN A. DAY

Attorney Stephen A. Day, who heads the ballot as a native son candidate in the Republican presidential primary May 12 in Ohio, said here yesterday that the reelection of President Roosevelt will mean the eventual wiping out of the bill of rights. He charged the New Dealers with attempting to supplant the rule of the constitution by a socialistic state.

Mr. Day said he considers his candidacy a fight for the constitution, which his father, the late William R. Day, who was secretary of state in the cabinet of President McKinley and later a justice of the United States Supreme court, taught him to revere. He declared that defenders of the constitution are rallying throughout the nation under the Republican banner to such an extent that former party lines are forgotten.

He charged that the "Roosevelt high command but awaits another victory to complete the overthrow of our fundamental liberties by an amendment to the constitution so far reaching in effect that the safeguards of the bill of rights will be wiped out at one stroke."

ARMY TO CALL 1,000 RESERVES TO ACTIVE DUTY

Prepares 10 Yr. Program to Increase Officers.

Washington D. C., May 2.—(AP)—Preparing to inaugurate a 10 year program for increasing the number of army officers, the war department today completed plans for calling 1,000 young reserve officers to a year of active service beginning in July.

Final passage by congress of the army supply bill, containing the necessary appropriation, remains before the plan becomes effective.

Annually thereafter for ten years the same number of reservists will be given one year of training, and from each of these classes 50 will be designated for commissions in the regular army. This system is intended to supplement officer personnel supplied by West Point to keep pace with the army's growing enlisted strength.

Corps Commanders Instructed.

Expecting favorable congressional action, the adjutant general's office has issued instructions for the first year's training to the commanding general of each of the nine corps areas who will select quotas of reserve officers for training.

Trainees will be chosen from the ranks of reserve second lieutenants from lists of eligibles supplied by officers in charge of reserve officer training corps units at schools and colleges.

Each candidate must have the equivalent of two years of a college course and be under 28. Preference will be given 1935 and 1936 graduates of R. O. T. C. institutions, nongraduates who received their reserve commissions in 1935 and 1936, and other outstanding former R. O. T. C. men commissioned prior to those years.

Active Duty Planned.

In addition, each corps area commander may select a small proportion of his total allotment of trainees from among the officers' reserve corps graduates of citizens' military training camps.

Those chosen will be assigned to active duty with infantry, cavalry, field artillery, coast artillery, engineer, signal corps and chemical warfare service regiments.

Such active service is not compulsory, depending entirely on voluntary acceptance by eligible candidates. War department officials said large numbers of applications for such duty had been received.

Hollywood, Cal., May 2.—(AP)—Hollywood offices of Selznick International Pictures said today they had been advised Marlene Dietrich collapsed from heat prostration on the desert near Yuma, Ariz.

The actress was unconscious for five minutes, it was stated. She was reported under the care of a physician and special nurse in Yuma. The temperature on the desert was 138 today, film representatives said. Miss Dietrich has been appearing in the picture, "Garden of Allah."

BLOC IN SENATE PREPARES FIGHT ON NAVAL BILL

Washington, D. C., May 2.—(AP)—Notice that at least a score of senators would fight against passage of the near record $531,068,707 naval appropriations bill, even at the cost of delaying the adjournment of congress, was served today by Senator Gerald P. Nye [Rad., N. D.].

"We're going to fight it," asserted Nye, chairman of the senate munitions committee, in referring to the bill providing conditionally for the building of two new battleships and other increases, which was passed yesterday by the house.

Acting Chairman Walsh [Dem., Mass.] of the naval affairs committee nevertheless predicted passage without difficulty and announced that efforts to enact legislation to provide fifty new naval auxiliary vessels to augment the ships authorized in the big appropriation bill also would be pressed.

STATE TO INSIST ON PEACOCK CASE TRIAL TOMORROW

Assistant State's Attorney Marshall Kearney said yesterday he would demand immediate trial for Emil Reck, 19 years old, and Michael Livingston, 17 years old, when they are brought before Judge Joseph Burke in the Criminal court tomorrow for the murder of Dr. Silber C. Peacock.

The two have repudiated their confessions of the murder and have pleaded not guilty. Attorney Lloyd Faxton indicated yesterday he might seek a separate trial for Reck, who has been found dull witted by a psychiatrist. Two other members of the gang, Durland Nash and Robert Goethe, both 19 years old, pleaded guilty at a previous hearing and are serving sentences of 199 years in Joliet prison.

The prosecutor said he would demand the death penalty for the two youths. Mrs. Ruth Peacock, widow of the slain physician, has been notified to appear as a witness at the trial.

What IS it that makes a FINE car FINE?

In every car that is manufactured, there is some sort of compromise between quality and price. If you build to a price standard, you sacrifice quality. If you build to a quality standard, you sacrifice low price. Cadillac has no criticism for those who build to a price. But, for itself, it prefers to let quality be the order of the day. Always, Cadillac builds as finely as it can—and lets the price fall where it may. That is why La Salle cannot be duplicated at or near its price. If you want La Salle style, beauty and quality, you must buy a La Salle. There is no substitute.

Mothers Need Not Die

Proper Medical Care During the Full Term of Pregnancy Eliminates Its Dangers

GETTING ready for motherhood is one of the most important steps in a woman's life, and in many cases it should begin years before the event takes place. Child birth, however lovely to contemplate, places an extra burden upon the vital organs of the body that requires the most careful preparation and care to withstand. Medical supervision is of paramount importance and the earlier it is instituted the greater the chances are of avoiding dangerous consequences.

Outstanding evidence of this fact is found in recent figures which show that for the country at large one mother out of every 175 is lost during child birth, while in special localities where early medical supervision prevailed there was only one mother lost out of more than 4,000 cases. Medical science was never more fully equipped and prepared to render protective service than it is today.

However, in many cases its high costs have prevented many expectant mothers from seeking early medical care while others delay through ignorance of the dangers involved.

Every prospective mother needs and should have proper medical care throughout the full term of pregnancy, as well as the services of a trained and experienced physician aided by every modern hospital and medical facility at the time of delivery. And every prospective mother can now have this complete service within their ability to pay.

Through organization and group practice, which has permitted a control over all medical, surgical, and hospital costs, there has been made possible a UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE which provides all of the values that lie in medicine at costs well within reach of the most modest incomes.

POLISH SOCIETIES UNITE TO FORM COMMON COUNCIL

Will Handle Problems of 8,000,000 in U. S.

Delegates from organizations representing nearly a million Polish Americans yesterday approved plans for an inter-organization council at a conference in the Polish Women's Alliance hall at 1309 North Ashland avenue. The main purpose of the council will be the fostering of closer cultural relationships with Poland.

The largest of the more than 50 organizations represented at the conference were the Polish National alliance, Polish Roman Catholic union, Polish Women's alliance, and Polish Falcons. Francis X. Swietlik of Milwaukee, Wis., grand censor of the P. N. A. and dean of the Marquette university law school, presided over the meeting.

Dean Swietlik was elected president of the council. The council will hold an annual meeting and an executive committee was named to carry on the work during the year.

Work for Common Interests.

Dean Swietlik, said the council, will represent the common interests of all the Polish societies, such as in the immigration problem, but will leave each group free to act independently in other matters, as at present.

The question of coöperation with or membership in the World Alliance of Poles Living Abroad, which the American delegation to Warsaw in 1934 refused to join, was left open for future consideration. Dean Swietlik emphasized the fact that the proposed council will have as its main function the introduction of the best elements of Polish culture into the United States and the handling of general problems arising in connection with the 8,000,000 Polish people, or their descendants, in this country.

Honorota Wolowska, president of the Polish Women's alliance, pleaded for equal rights for her sex in the new council. "You men believe yourselves to be the masters of creation, but you forget that we are those that gave birth to you," she said.

Warsaw Secretary Speaks.

Stephen Ratowicz of Warsaw, Poland, secretary of the World alliance, said the meeting "may be historical," and that Poles all over the world were watching the meeting. He brought with him an invitation for the new group to join the World alliance, in the interest of "more cordial relations between the Poles of this country and the motherland."

Gov. Horner is expected to speak today at a mass-meeting of Poles in Humboldt park to celebrate the 145th anniversary of the Polish constitution preceding the third partition of the country.

LEMKE ASSERTS 2 MILLION FACE LOSS OF FARMS

Washington, D. C., May 2.—(AP)—Asserting that two million farm families were in danger of losing their homes through foreclosure, Representative Lemke [Rep., N. D.] appealed to the house membership today to "lay aside prejudice and vote with an open mind" on the Frazier-Lemke farm refinancing bill.

[The bill, assured of house consideration when 218 members signed a petition releasing it from the rules committee, proposes to refinance farm mortgages through issuance of not more than three billion dollars in new currency.]

In a statement inserted in the congression record, Lemke denied claims made on the floor that the federal land banks and their "insolvent twin brothers," the joint stock land banks, were helping the farmers. 'On the other hand, he said, they were "relieving" them of their homes at the rate of 2,000 a month.

He produced statistics of the federal home loan board showing 370,772 rea lestate foreclosures in 1934—both rural and urban—and 366,802 in 1935.

MRS. GERTRUDE PUHSE, SLAYER OF HUSBAND, DIES IN A PRISON CELL

Dwight, Ill., May 2.—[Special.]—Mrs. Gertrude Puhse, 45 years old, of Granite City, who was serving a 99 year sentence for the murder two years ago of her husband, Charles, a steel worker, died last night in the women's prison at Dwight.

Together with Thomas J. Lehne, a former policeman at Venice and her alleged lover, Mrs. Puhse was convicted of the murder by a jury and both were sentenced to death in the electric chair.

Mrs. Puhse's sentence was commuted by Gov. Horner April 17, 1935, and she was brought to Dwight. Two weeks later Lehne was electrocuted at the Menard prison.

WPA PERFORMERS ENTERTAIN 25,000 IN CENTRAL PARK

New York, May 2.—[Special.]—Under the aegis of four federal art projects—music, art, theater, and writers—the Sheep Meadow in Central park was transformed into a huge stage today for a festive entertainment that took four hours to parade a conglomeration of circus performers, minstrel men, variety players, choristers, Harlem strutters, and brass bands across the setting.

The festival began at 1 p. m., with 6,000 school children for an audience. The gathering grew all afternoon and at 5 p. m., when the day's fun closed with a hunt for lost children, 25,000 persons swarmed the shallow amphitheater.

The patrons of government inspired entertainment, constituted a cool audience at first, but as the Works Progress administration turned out bigger and better acts, they were warmed into laughter and applause.

ATTORNEYS SUE CLEANERS FOR $9,310 IN FEES

Attorneys George S. Lavin and William Jaffe, who compose the law firm of Lavin and Jaffe, filed suit in the Circuit court yesterday for fees totaling $9,310 from eighty-three wholesale and retail cleaning and dyeing firms whom they have been representing in the price fixing litigation against price cutting independents. The bill charges that the clients are refusing to pay the fees which are based upon $100 a day in court and $50 a day in office work involved in the case.

Attorney Jaffe said that cause of the nonpayment is a split between the wholesalers and the retailers, who until recently were all members of the Cleaning and Dyeing Plant Owners' association of Chicago. The two groups were said to be at odds over the proportion of fees each should pay. Of the total bill of $13,560, the sum of $4,250 has been paid.

METHODISTS GET PLANS TO UNITE THREE BRANCHES

Proposal Would Create Body of 8 Million.

Columbus, O., May 2.—(AP)—A proposal for unification of the three branches of Methodism into the world's largest Protestant denomination headed tonight toward a vote at the quadrennial conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, with leaders predicting speedy approval.

Placed before the conference unexpectedly, the proposal was made the first order of business Monday, nearly three weeks before it was to have been considered.

Unification, the goal of many churchmen since the Methodist church split over the question of slave ownership in 1844, would create a Protestant body of more than 8 million members.

Conferences Must Ratify.

The program must be ratified by the general conferences of the three branches, the last of which meets in 1938, and at least three-fourths of the annual conferences of each branch.

The Methodist Church North had today from the college of bishops of the Methodist Church South the first indication that the southern church was agreeable.

"The college of bishops sends greetings and prays that . . . your deliberations may hasten the day when once more the American Methodism shall present a solid front to the world," the message from Nashville said.

Provides Six Areas.

Drafted by a commission headed by Bishop William F. McDowell of the northern church, Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon of the southern church, and the Rev. John C. Broomfield of the Methodist Protestant church, the proposal provides that the unified church shall be called "the Methodist church."

The church would be split into six jurisdictional conferences, five located geographically and a sixth for colored congregations.

U. S. to Request a Delay in H. W. Elmore Tax Trial

Government attorneys indicated yesterday that they would ask a postponement tomorrow of the trial of Howard W. Elmore, former president of the Chicago sanitary district, who is charged with evading total income tax payments of $51,659 for the years of 1929 and 1930. The trial was scheduled to begin before Federal Judge Philip L. Sullivan, but the continuance will be requested because of the illness of Assistant United States District Attorney E. Riley Campbell, who is in charge of income tax prosecutions in the Chicago area.

New York, May 2. — [Special.] — Three groups sponsoring lotteries or prize money contests in which the public already has invested thousands of dollars, lost the first round in their fight for legal sanction in the United States District court this afternoon.

After a hearing in chambers Judge John C. Knox dismissed the injunction suits brought against Postmaster Albert Goldman of New York City by the Golden Stakes Advertising corporation, of which Alfred E. Smith Jr. is vice president and general counsel, and by the National Conference on Legalizing Lotteries, Inc., headed by Mrs. Oliver Harriman.

In a third suit, which was not before him for final adjudication, Judge Knox refused to grant a temporary restraining order to the Association for Legalizing American Lotteries, Inc.

The Smith and Harriman groups had obtained restraining orders Wednesday and were haled back to court today on motions to vacate filed by Assistant U. S. Attorneys Edward J. Ennis and Irvin C. Rutter. Judge Knox not only voided these temporary injunctions, but expressed the opinion that Postmaster General James A. Farley was an indispensable party and should have been made a defendant with Mr. Goldman.

Crippled Children's Work Displayed in Loop Store

Officials of Daughters of the Nile were hostesses yesterday at the exhibit put on in Mandel Brothers' store by the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children. The display illustrates the orthopedic treatment that has been given to 2,000 handicapped boys and girls at the hospital in the last 10 years, as well as lether work, carved wooden toys, bead work, weaving and fancy work done by the crippled children. The youngsters receive the proceeds from the sale of articles they have made. Mrs. Lucille Hanks, queen of the Daughters of the Nile, was in charge of yesterday's showing. The display will continue through May 9.

Presenting the Custom-built Packard 120 Convertible Sedan

WITH people again seeking the pleasure and smartness of open car driving, Packard announces the addition of a custom-built Convertible Sedan to its line of seven standard body types.

With a custom body by Deitrich, this newest Packard has been hailed by designers as the smartest all-weather car ever offered at so reasonable a price.

This car will not go into mass production. Only a limited number will be built, but that number will be available in a wide variety of color combinations for upholstery and body.

So that you may enjoy this distinguished car throughout the fine weather, it is suggested that you place your order as early as possible. Deliveries will be made promptly.

You are cordially invited to come in and see this new custom-built Packard 120. It is priced at $1395 at the factory. See, too, the seven standard Packard 120 models ranging in price from $990 to $1115—the cars which, because of their better engineering, their longer style and mechanical life, their greater precision, have carried Packard 120 from scratch to second place in its price class in eight months' time!

CHACO PRISONERS OF WAR START FOR THEIR HOMES

First Units Freed Under Paraguay-Bolivia Pact.

BUENOS AIRES, May 2.—(AP)—Fighting men who lost their freedom in the long "war of the Chaco" between Paraguay and Bolivia started for their homelands tonight.

They were the first detachments in the some 20,000 prisoners of war held by the two nations whose half century long struggle for supremacy in the wilderness called the Chaco Boreal, was one of the greatest threats to peace in the Americas.

About 500 enlisted men and 20 officers of the Bolivian army left from Asuncion by a river boat for Bolivia. The 500 were the first of the 16,500 Bolivian soldiers who have been held in Paraguay.

Paraguayans To Leave Soon.

A similar detachment of Paraguayans, held in Bolivia, will start from the northern country as soon as railroad facilities are available.

The war weary men, some of whom have been in custody as long as three years, are being repartriated under the Bolivian-Paraguayan accord reached Jan. 21 with the help of the six neutrals, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru, the United States and Uruguay.

The protocol gives three months for completion of the exchange, most of it to be effected by way of Formosa, in northern Argentina, and Villazon, in southern Bolivia, but the neutrals expect it to be completed much quicker.

Use Special Trains.

Special trains of the Argentine state railways are being used in transporting the Bolivian prisoners from Paraguay through Argentine territory to the frontier.

Among the Bolivians now returning to their homeland, are enough officers to lead an entire army. Paraguayan figures showed three Bolivian colonels in encampments, as well as fifteen lieutenant colonels, 23 majors, 32 captains, 45 lieutenants, 240 sub-lieutenants, 33 cadet officers and twelve subofficers.

Fulfilment of the accord on exchange of prisoners was delayed slightly by the recent revolution in Paraguay by military officers and students who, dissatisfied with peace terms and post-war plans of President Eusebio Ayala, overthrew him and made Col. Rafael Franco provisional president.

Both Bolivia and Paraguay, through the peace conference commission on prisoners, paid for the maintenance of their respective nationals in enemy camps The resultant "clearing house" transaction gave Paraguay the equivalent of $1,500,000 in cash.

MAUD THOMAS JOINS OKLAHOMA CONGRESS RACE

Oklahoma City, Okla., May 2.—(AP)—Maude O. Thomas, "The Woman from No Man's Land," changed political mounts tonight and rode into Oklahoma's congressional race. She seeks the Democratic nomination for congressional representative at large.

For years she has appeared time and again from the prairie stretches of the panhandle to cut a militant figure in Oklahoma affairs—but always as a Republican. This year she gave her party affiliation as "Democratic," her age as "legal," her profession as "journalist." She once published a newspaper at Beaver.

It was from there that she moved into the office of state highway commissioner during the administration of William [Alfalfa Bill] Murray. Troops protected her as she took over the office of Lew Wentz, highway commissioner, whose post had been declared vacant by Murray.

She held on for several months until the state Supreme court held Murray without power to remove Wentz.

GIRL, 16, LOSES 3 QTS. OF BLOOD SO SHE MAY LIVE

Omaha, Neb., May 2.—(AP)—Theresa Thiele, 16, Clearwater, Neb., high school senior, who suffered an illness due to having too much blood, was reported by her physician today to be well on the way to recovery. She will be released from the hospital Monday, he said, so that she can return to school and be graduated with her class May 28.

Three quarts of blood were extracted from the girl's body over a period of eight days, the physician reported. She entered the hospital April 21, and blood was drawn from her daily for eight days.

He said her body contained twice the normal amount of blood for a girl her age, the result of a rare disease, known to the medical profession as polycythemia vera.

The physician explained there was no treatment for it until a short time ago when scientists learned a drug, which destroys red corpuscles, could be used effectively, if administered in light doses.

AIR CONDITIONING PARLEY TO START AT ILLINOIS U.

Urbana, Ill., May 2.—[Special.]—Engineers from all sections of the state and many from adjoining states are expected to attend the annual conference on air conditioning, sponsored by the department of mechanical engineering at the University of Illinois, which opens Monday and continues Tuesday. One of the features of this year's meeting will be the inspection of the air conditioning test plant in the research residence.

U. S. PROPOSES NEW COMPACT ON NEUTRALITY

Urges World Nations Reshape Principles.

Washington, D. C., May 2.—(AP)—The United States proposed today to give all nations, through the medium of the approaching American peace conference, an opportunity to reshape existing neutrality principles.

Adding to the international significance of the gathering, this government suggested the conclusion of a general convention to supplement and clarify present rules governing the rights and duties of neutrals in wartime.

It would be open to signature not only by the twenty-one American republics participating in the parley, but to all other countries as well.

"Tarif Truce" Urged.

Among four other recommendations for the conference aganda, transmitted by Secretary Hull, were the establishment of a "tarif truce" among the Americas, involving a pledge to erect no new trade discriminations, and the perfection of existing inter-American peace treaties or the inauguration of new ones.

Neutrality and commerce thus became the keystones of the United States' program for attainment of the general peace objectives mapped out for the western hemisphere by President Roosevelt in summoning the conference to meet this year at Buenos Aires.

Before its recommendations find a place on the conference agenda, however, they must first receive the approval of all the participating governments. Most Latin American observers predicted this would be forthcoming.

Two Neutrality Proposals.

Putting into effect his recently announced intention of urging other nations to join the United States in throwing new safeguards about neutral privileges and responsibilities, Hull divided his recommendations into two parts:

"A.—Conclusion of a convention open to all nations supplementing and clarifying existing rules concerning rights and duties of neutrals with reference to certain classes of trade and commerce.

"B.—Consideration of steps looking to a more comprehensive restatement of international law pertaining to neutral and belligerent rights and duties."

SOUND EXPERTS TO STUDY NOISE AT PARLEY HERE

"Practical Aspects of Noise Abatement" will be discussed at a luncheon tomorrow in the Hotel La Salle as part of the fifteenth meeting of the Acoustical Society of America. The meeting continues through Tuesday.

Dr. Harvey Fletcher, director of acoustical research, Bell Telephone laboratories, and chairman of the mayor's technical advisory committee on noise abatement in New York, will open the discussion, followed by Maj. Joel I. Connolly, chief of the bureau of sanitary engineering in Chicago, and Dr. Malcolm T. MacEachern, associate director of the American College of Surgeons, located here.

Technical papers on development of apparatus for the use of the deaf in "hearing" speech through the senses of touch and vibration and the mechanics of sound conduction in relation to the possible correction of deafness, will be read at the morning session tomorrow.

DIXON STUDENTS CONTROL CITY'S OFFICES FOR DAY

Dixon, Ill., May 2.—[Special.]—Dixon High school students were in control of municipal offices here today. The council was comprised of Lorene Gianonni, Louis Schumm, Robert Stitzel, and William Thompson, who won the high school election.

One of the events of the annual city government projects sponsored by the senior civic classes, eleven officers were appointed by Student Mayor Arthur Klein to govern the city for a day.

Fred Aydellotte was appointed city attorney and Russell Brown chief of police. Mayor Klein and his commissioners and officers were inducted into office last night, after which the regular city council "resigned."

Thief Enters Two Evanston Apartments; Takes $28

Evanston police were seeking a burglar who early yesterday stole $28 in two apartments in the suburb. In the home of Harry C. Dean, an attorney, 836 Judson avenue, the prowler took $3 from Dean's trousers. Next he broke into the apartment of Alfred D. Smith, president of the National Quotation bureau, 166 West Jackson boulevard, at 922 Judson avenue. Mrs. Smith awoke to see a light in the living room She screamed and the prowler fled with $25 from a desk drawer. Mrs. Smith was alone with her two children as her husband was out of town.

WILL CONTAIN APARTMENTS AND ROWS OF HOUSES

Completed Plans Now in Washington.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Simultaneously with the submission to Washington of plans for the $6,000,000 Julia C. Lathrop Homes, at Diversey parkway and the river, details of the big venture into home building by the Public Works administration were made public for the first time yesterday. Advertising of bids on the superstructure is expected by Chester A. Inman, district manager, housing division of the PWA, to be made shortly in Washington. Foundation work for the north side development, originally called the Diversey housing project, is reported as 15 per cent complete.

The Diversey project, which occupies 35.3 acres, is the largest in area of the three local federal housing developments. In number of apartments, its 975 family units will be exceeded by the 981 proposed for the west side Jane Addams houses.

Buildings on 17% of Site.

Only 17 per cent of the site will be covered by buildings. The streets in the development will require another 17 per cent. This will leave 66 per cent of the area available for use as playgrounds, lawn and other open spaces.

The river frontage of the section south of Diversey parkway will have a wide, sweeping drive. Between it and the buildings will be a large open center for playground.

The area on the north side of Diversey will be bisected by a drive with the lawns extending down to the river's edge. The big playground of this section will be surrounded by buildings.

Face Brick to Be Used.

According to plans by Jens Jensen, landscape architect, not much shrubbery will be used, but there will be clumps of trees, mostly honey locust and hawthorn, and ivy will be planted about the buildings to grace the walls.

The staf of architects, of which Robert S. De Golyer is chief, has recommended that the exterior of the buildings be face brick, red and buff tones predominating, with detail trim of stone.

In addition to the open air spaces there will be seven recreation rooms opening off the outer play areas, each with approximately 1,000 square feet of space. For the adult residents there will be seven social units, each with about 600 square feet of floor area, and containing small club rooms and kitchens.

Thirty Buildings in All.

Altogether there will be thirty buildings and a modern power house which will provide heat and hot water. The latter will be on Damen avenue at the extreme south corner of the project.

Two story row houses will be built along Damen avenue in the south section, and also more row houses in the north corner of the project. Twelve of the thirty buildings will be these row houses. The remaining eighteen units will be apartment buildings, three stories in height, some with pent houses.

The row houses will have living quarters on the first floor and sleeping rooms on the second. In conjunction with the row houses, in most cases at the corners, there will be two story flat buildings with one suite to a floor, and with exteriors similar to the houses.

The 975 living units will provide a total of 3,419 rooms. They will be divided into 48 two room units, 455 three rooms, 402 of four rooms each, and 70 with five rooms.

These 975 units will comprise 738 apartments, 39 pent house suites, 172 houses, and 26 flats. The apartments will range from two to five rooms each; the houses will contain four and five rooms; the flats three, four, and five rooms and the pent house suites will have three and four rooms each.

D. R. Kennicott is the project manager for the Diversey development. Chief Architect De Golyer has on his staf the following director architects, Hubert Burnham, Hugh M. G. Garden, Quinn & Christiansen, Tallmadge & Watson, and White & Weber. In addition the following are associate architects: Edwin H. Clark, Loewenberg & Loewenberg, Mayo & Mayo, and E. E. and Elmer C. Roberts. Martin C. Schwab is mechanical engineer and Albert Smith structural engineer.

AIR VIEW OF NORTH SIDE FEDERAL HOME DEVELOPMENT

4 Steel Frame Homes Open to Public Today

Four prefabricated, steel frame houses will be open to the public today, one on the north shore, two in Du Page county, and one in Tinley park on the far south side. For the next three months the public will have an opportunity to inspect these homes from 11 a. m. until 7 p. m. daily.

The four were designed and fabricated by General Houses, Inc., with the coöperation of Sears, Roebuck & Co. The north shore residence is in Frederick H. Bartlett's Highland Park development, the two Du Page county homes are on Roosevelt road, near Villa Park, also in a Bartlett subdivision, while the fourth house is at 177th street and Oak Park avenue, in the Tinley Park subdivision of the Grover C. Elmore company.

All Are Furnished.

All are completely furnished and shown as though occupied. The furniture was provided by Sears, Roebuck & Co., and all of the interior decoration was done by the same organization.

The north shore unit and one of the Du Page county homes are identical and cost $5,964 complete, without the land. The smaller Du Page residence and the Tinley Park home each cost $4,910 complete, without the site.

Have Frames of Steel.

"These houses embody the experience and research which this company has brought to the subject of low cost housing in the last six years," said L. R. Walker, supervisor of Sears' modern home department. "All structural framing members, such as joists and studs, are made of special formed steel shapes. Exterior walls are built of fire resistant asbestos cement board with special insulation. Interior walls and ceilings are of fir plywood."

Sears, Roebuck & Co., according to their officials, have coöperated with General Houses in this project because they believe that if the purchase of houses can be placed on a basis which will put them easily within reach of a great number of people it will stimulate building construction, real estate, and all other allied industries.

PLAN BUSINESS BLOCK AT 79TH AND EBERHART

Plans have been completed and work is scheduled to start shortly on a $30,000 one story, air conditioned business block at the northeast corner of Eberhart avenue and 79th street, according to R. N. Isreal, owner. Sidney C. Finck is architect. Fronting 149 feet on Eberhart and 124 feet on 79th, the building will contain eight stores. The exterior will be of green and black terra cotta. A 1,000 seat theater may be built in the rear later, Isreal stated. The project was financed with a $27,000 ten year 5 per cent mortgage made by the Republic Realty Mortgage corporation. Carl H. Kahn is renting agent.

S. F. Wilson & Co., men's furnishings store, for many years on Jackson boulevard, between State street and Wabash avenue, and on North Michigan avenue for the last few years, has leased upper floor space in the Austin building, at 111 West Jackson boulevard.

SEARS MODEL HOUSES READY FOR INSPECTION

The above model house, to be open for the next three months beginning today from 11 a. m. until 7 p. m., can be seen at the Frederick H. Bartlett Highland Park development and a duplicate of it in his Du Page county subdivision on Roosevelt road, a mile and a half west of the intersection of Butterfield road. If you use a Tribune Chicagoland map you'll find it at the southeast corner of Meyers road and Roosevelt, York Center. The Highland Park home is reached by following North avenue [which is one block north of the Highwood station of the Chicago and North Western] four blocks west to Highland Park limits.

Two less pretentious homes will be open to the public—one near the Du Page county residence mentioned above, and the other at 177th street and Oak Park avenue, in the Tinley Park subdivision of the Grover C. Elmore company.

These four prefabricated homes, all of steel frame construction, with exterior walls of asbestos and interior walls and ceiling of plywood, were erected by General Houses, Inc., with the coöperation of Sears, Roebuck & Co. More is told about them in another column of this page.

MODEL HOME TO BE FEATURE OF REALTY SHOW

"The Honeymoon Home," a $4,500 brick house designed by Holsman & Holsman and sponsored by Chicago face brick dealers in coöperation with Indiana and Illinois face brick manufacturers, will be a feature of the National Home Show of Chicago at the Coliseum May 16 to 24. This two story, six room residence, with sleeping porch, sun deck, and attached garage, is designed for a 35 foot lot.

The house, similar to the one at A Century of Progress designed by the same architects, will have exterior walls of brick panels which are assembled on the ground and then raised into position.

According to Albert W. Luse, secretary-manager of the Chicago face brick bureau, this unit will be the largest house possible, of sound construction and fireproof material, at the price. The home show is sponsored by the Chicago Real Estate board.

Will Remodel Fifth Floor of FurnitureMart

Installation of an additional cafeteria and other extensive structural changes which will make the fifth floor of the American Furniture mart an appliance center, will be started immediately after the spring furniture show, to be held at the mart next week, Lawrence H. Whiting, president, announced yesterday.

Small display spaces suitable for the showing of manufacturers' lines of washing machines, refrigerators, house furnishings, stoves, and appliances will be built, he said.

This will be the first large remodeling job at the Furniture mart since the addition of the 30 story tower to the original building, completed in 1927, it was stated. At that time the Furniture mart was the largest commercial building in the world. It is still said to be the biggest structure devoted to a single industry.

The new restaurant, which will supplement the main dining room and coffee shop operated by the Furniture club of America on the seventeenth floor, will accommodate 1,000 persons per day for luncheon during the furniture markets.

Plans call for the construction of new corridors that will provide three main east and west trafic arteries, instead of the one central corridor on all of the floors of the mart at present.

The mortgage is secured by the Providence High school, at Central Park avenue and Monroe street, Chicago, and other property in Terre Haute, Ind.

RECALLS DODGING DEATH BOMB AT HAYMARKET RIOT

Police Veterans of 1886 Meet Today.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

Fifty years ago tomorrow night—May 4—a bomb whirred through the semi-darkness of the old Haymarket square. Eight policemen were killed and seventy-four others received wounds.

At least two of the surviving heroes of this tragic episode in Chicago history will meet in the Des Plaines street police station at 2 o'clock this afternoon, continuing the custom of the Haymarket Riot Veterans' association in meeting annually the Sunday before the anniversary of the event.

They are Capt. Frank B. Tyrrell, 43 Clarence avenue, Oak Park, who will be 78 years old next month, president of the association, and George Roycraft, 88 years old, 3234 Diversey avenue. Andrew O'Day, 81 years old, of Fox Lake, may attend the reunion of the last survivors.

Recalls Night of Tragedy.

Capt. Tyrrell was found yesterday doing some repair work on a four flat building he owns at 825 South Lombard avenue, Oak Park. Hearty and clear eyed, he gave a vivid account of the riot of May 4, 1886. At the time he was walking a beat. Later he became captain in the west parks district.

Describing events leading up to the bombing, Capt. Tyrrell said:

"Around May 1 and prior to then agitators were advocating an eight hour working day. The Knights of Labor controled labor then. Unions were principally those of the boilermakers, molders and machinists, and were not strong. On May 1 nearly all laborers went out on strike, and those who didn't were chased out of their shops.

"The entire police department was held in reserve. For days we slept and ate in the stations.

One Rioter Killed.

"Trouble centered May 2 and 3 on the south side where several large factories were. The police would ride there in patrol wagons. There were no covers on the wagons, and rioters would stone, club and shoot at the police. The result was that the police shot and killed one man.

"The morning of May 4 the anarchists distributed handbills all over the city bearing the heading: 'Revenge: To arms, brothers, to arms! Revenge the death of our brother, killed by a policeman yesterday.' That night they gathered in Haymarket square, on Des Plaines street 100 feet north of Randolph street."

Capt. Tyrrell described how at 10:10 o'clock that night policemen in the Des Plaines street station were ordered to fall in and then were marched out. His company came third. There were 176 policemen and seven companies all told. They marched in formation north in Des Plaines street.

March Through Crowd.

"As we crossed Randolph street the street lights were out, but I could see men swarming on both sides of the street," Capt. Tyrrell went on. "Those in the middle of the street fell back and let us pass. In Haymarket square stood a platform wagon. A kerosene torch was flaring at either end.

"Sam Fielden stood in the center, talking and shaking his arms. I couldn't get what he said as we approached. Then when we came close he hollered: 'Here come the bloodhounds. Now you do your duty and I'll do mine.'

"Police Captain William Ward then stepped in front of the stand and said: 'In the name of the people of Illinois I command you to quietly disperse.'

Bomb Thrown from Alley.

"At the same time the bomb came flying from an alley. I saw it, saw its fuse, as it hurtled through the air. I stooped down mechanically to let it go over my head, and I didn't get straightened up again. It fell four feet behind me, dropping between two companies, getting us in the back and them in the front. My buddy I'd worked in a foundry with in Cleveland years before was next to me and was killed—George Mueller.

"I got hit in the back and in the head and was knocked senseless. Later I got up, but was in a daze. I got to go home in a patrol wagon."

5,000 WILL SING IN TRIBUNE MUSIC FESTIVAL AUG. 15

List Selections for the Choral Contest.

BY PHILIP MAXWELL.

More than 5,000 individuals are expected to take part in the various musical competitions of the seventh Chicagoland Music festival, which is scheduled for Saturday night, Aug. 15, in Soldiers' field. The festival is sponsored by THE TRIBUNE and other newspapers, and civic and musical organizations of the central west.

NOBLE CAIN.

As in the past six festivals, competition for men, women, and mixed choruses will be a high-light of the program. Already ten great Chicagoland choruses have entered, and Noble Cain, who is general choral director of the festival, declares that interest is widespread. Choruses will be judged on tone quality, pitch, tonal balance, precision, tempo, phrasing, and expression. They may sing a cappella, but if piano is used THE TRIBUNE will provide the accompanist.

Selections to Be Sung.

The following are selections from which two numbers will be sung in the choral contest, the first required:

Men—"Song of the Jolly Roger," Cudleigh-Candish"; "On the Sea," Dudley Buck; "Let the Celestial Concerts," Handel-Davison.

Women—"Follow Me Down to Carlow," Fletcher; "Where Go the Boats," Lefevre; "Stars of a Summer Night," Noble Cain.

Mixed—"O Blest Are They," Tschaikowsky; "Take, O Take Those Lips Away," Edward C. Moore; "The Music of Life," Noble Cain.

Winners to Receive Medals.

Gold and silver medals will be presented each individual of the first and second place winning choruses in the Chicagoland finals. Preliminary contests for Cook county will be held on three nights in the Grand ballroom of the Drake hotel, on Monday, Aug. 10, for men; on Tuesday, Aug. 11, for women, and on Wednesday, Aug. 12, for mixed choruses. Only choruses placing first in the preliminaries will participate in the Chicagoaland finals of the festival.

The entry deadline for all choruses will be Monday afternoon, Aug. 3, at 6 p. m. Each chorus must submit a list of its personnel at that time. Only bona fide members may compete. Each chorus must have not less than twenty members and not more than 100.

Choruses wishing to enter the festival will receive the official entry blank by writing to the festival headquarters, Room 1418 Tribune Tower, Chicago.

KARL MARX IN THE TAX BILLS.

New Deal taxes are levied and new tax programs are developed with two purposes in mind. One is to get spending money. The other is to create a new economic order. Sometimes the two purposes are made plain and at other times the one is not mentioned. When Mr. Roosevelt first proposed soaking the rich the idea was that no matter how the capitalist had earned his money he shouldn't keep it. It should be taken away from him by the government and distributed to other people, thus equalizing the incomes and trimming down the big ones to the size of the little ones.

It was soon discovered that there was more spitefulness than anything else in this idea and most of the steam was allowed to blow off. There was reason to doubt that many men would try to make much money if they were to be treated as cattle in a pasture. It would be more fun to make just enough to go fishing off Bermuda and the Bahamas. Furthermore, if capitalism were willing to be a contented cow in the pasture, to be milked by the New Deal, the general distribution of the daily output would spread out pretty thin when the milk carts tried to make it go around. Soaking the rich did hardly anything more than indicate a state of mind.

The estate taxes have more Marxian philosophy in them. If for combined federal and state inheritance and estate levies the sky could be made the limit, few accumulations of wealth would survive one or more deaths. The wealth and the productive institution represented by it would either be destroyed or pass into other hands. In these proposals and in the effect of existing laws there is an actual blow at the institution of private property and a real advance toward communism, even if it is not along a direct road.

Heavy taxation to meet extravagant spending is a necessity whenever a government undertakes five billion dollar jobs, pyramids the national debt, and loads the banks with its bonds. A government which was merely reckless would ultimately have to come to oppressive taxation unless it decided that it would wipe out its debts by destroying the value of its money.

The general purpose of using taxes not for the support of government but for the changing of the social and economic order is not concealed in Washington. Taxation for the control of agriculture was the basis of the AAA, and although the Supreme court held that the federal government couldn't regulate crop production it was forced to admit that congress could levy taxes to accomplish almost anything if that thing fell within its power to do. The majority of the court used a considerable part of its opinion in explaining with a great deal of apprehension how far this revolution by taxation could go if it could find a clear warant for its tax bills. A complete overturn in the social and economic order could be brought about through the revenue department of the treasury.

The pending tax bill passed by the house and thrown at the senate is essentially Marxian in its intention to levy on the undistributed earnings of a corporation, partnership, or individual. The idea is to deprive an industry or a person of the privilege of accumulating out of profits funds for plant expansion or for insurance against bad times.

The great utilities and the great industries were able to get through the depression because they had accumulated reserves in good times which enabled them to keep going in bad times. If they could be forced by taxation to distribute their profits either in dividends or wages and salaries they might be up against it in the next depression, and whenever they wanted to increase their plant facilities or other operations they would have to go to the banker or the stock market.

Thus the proposed taxation would hit capitalism and private property in two ways. The next time panic and depression came along business wouldn't be able to carry on. Its paralysis would indicate that the communists were right, they having created the condition which proved that they were. They would then say there was nothing to be done except to let them take the show over. The other thing would be this. The logical supplement to this form of taxation, as Mr. Tugwell has pointed out and as many other New Dealers appreciate, is an act for federal incorporation and the control of stock and bond issues by the government at Washington as a substitute for the present system of state incorporation. The federal government could then say what stock might be issued and in what amounts and for what purposes. If the tax on the undistributed earnings was made in effect confiscatory, as in the estate taxes, no business man could increase his equipment without the permission of the federal government.

From here to Mr. Tugwell's industrial production by government allotment of capital and quotas of production, the complete control of industry as by Stalin, would be but a step. The tax schemes of the New Deal when viewed in the light of Lincoln's simile of the framed timbers and the mortises and tenons, all brought on the ground nicely fitted to be joined, show that the devisers, the architects and carpenters, have adopted with a talented ingenuity the Marxian theory of how capitalism may be transformed into socialism. When the state can lay its hands on that part of capital which is used by the industrialist not in buying his materials and paying his labor but in expanding his operations and guarding the integrity of his plant, it has its foot on his neck. For Marx, Lenin, and Stalin the state is the proletarian dictatorship. In the American case we have the revolutionaries using the legislative process of a free democracy to make the transformation which Marx and Lenin said was inevitable, given the proper conditions. The New Deal is creating the conditions. It is not doing so blindly. Joe Robinson may be the dumb ass, but Rexford Tugwell is the shrewd rider and Mr. Roosevelt is the bland voice of command.

THE REPUBLICAN NOMINEE.

As the factors in the Republican national situation shape themselves more clearly in advance of the Cleveland convention it becomes apparent that the delegates will have a full opportunity for deliberation and a thoughtful decision.

Less than a year ago this was hoped for but it was not evident. Politics has its dust storms and its fogs as well as its landslides. The average Republican, convinced that Mr. Roosevelt had to be stopped if the country was to be kept from the deep end, did not see how it was to be done. That Republican was afraid an unreconstructed old guard would come out of retirement and whip a machine into shape, successfully capturing the convention and decisively losing the election.

No T. R. was in sight. There were men who had stood fast against the onrush of strange ideas and oppressive acts. They had kept their heads and they had spoken their minds. A natural choice, however, a choice which men make instinctively when they look for another to lead them, is dictated by many complexities. It is based primarily on a general understanding, widespread as to area and sustained in point of time, of the characteristics and acts of the man. Age had worked against some of the prominent figures of the Republican party and had not begun to build up the figures of the future.

Despair is not a continuing or dominating element in American politics. Our political action is one of development. There is a difference between the Lincoln of the Illinois legislature and the Lincoln of the White House. American life is not a shallow pond but a mighty reservoir. When the waters are stirred and troubled it gives forth. Even if it were not within the less hopeful expectation a year ago it now seems the natural thing that as the time for the convention draws near all signs are encouraging.

Four leading candidates for the nomination have been mentioned—Landon of Kansas, Dickinson of Iowa, Borah of Idaho, and Vandenberg of Michigan. The decision of the convention is not foreclosed in behalf of any of them. The delegates within the logic of their instructions are free members of the party responsible to it and to the country for the best nomination they can make.

The qualifications which should be in their minds are great in meaning but simple in definition. They are fitness for the office and fitness for the campaign. One quality without the other does not make the complete candidate. The best President the United States could have is no President without the vote to elect him. The candidate should be chosen for strength he has shown plus ability to add to it.

The Republican convention will have its great chance. So far things have not gone wrong. The party is on its way to success.

Editorial of the Day

FAILING FOUNTAINS.

[New York Sun.]

Grumblers in the legislatures of Tennessee and Alabama are beginning to turn atrabilious glances toward the relative immunity of the Tennessee Valley Authority from taxation. It naturally gravels any good legislator to find a spring of revenue going dry. The public utility business has long been an almost inexhaustible fountain of public revenue. But the public utility business as managed through private corporations is coming into increasingly keen competition with the public utility business as governmentally managed. Down Alabama-Tennessee way the fountain of revenue gives signs of failing.

In the course of debate in the Alabama legislature the other day a member presented some illuminating figures. Last year, he said, the Alabama Power company paid more than $2,500,000 in taxes in Alabama, whereas TVA paid into the state treasury $16,900. If TVA were taxed on a comparable basis, he argued, it would pay at least $300,000 a year, assuming that it reaches the levels of sales and production predicted by its engineers.

Meanwhile a bureau of business research of the University of Alabama reports that TVA is creating another serious problem in taxation by acquiring large parcels of taxable real estate, thus taking them from local assessment rolls. One county alone is said to face a loss of $1,000,000 in assessed valuations from this cause. Lands in that same region owned by private utility corporations and used for similar purposes are commonly assessed at about 50 per cent more than lands of other taxpayers.

This is, of course, one disadvantage of public ownership which advocates of that form of ownership have never wished to meet face to face. As Robert Teviot Livingston so capably explains in an article in the Independent Journal of Columbia University for April 17, where the purpose of public operation of utility service is to provide social benefit the inevitable result is to increase the tax burden; lower rates and lower taxes are simultaneously impossible. What finally happens is that the burden of taxation is shifted from the user of electricity to the owner of property.

There never has been any mystery about this, although attempts deliberately to mystify the public have been innumerable. A government can always reduce the cost of electric service to consumers if it is willing to take the accompanying loss out of its own pocket or to sandbag some third person—usually the taxpayer—to obtain the money. But states, counties, and municipalities which go into the electric utility business can expect diminution in the extent of taxable property listed on assessment rolls. Giving something for nothing is as economically unfeasible for governments as for private citizens.

LIBERTIES OF AN AMERICAN

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.—[From the first amendment to the constitution of the United States.]

No religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States.—[From section 3, article VI. of the constitution.]

Religious freedom is a concept of our own age. The modern man fails frequently to realize to what extent this is true, because he misinterprets the motives behind the centuries of religious warfare in Europe. He sees those who resisted persecution as fighting for religious liberty. For the most part they were doing no such thing. They were fighting for their own particular dogma, and if they won, their first move, more often than not, was to start persecuting their former persecutors.

Nor was this persecution confined to the old world. The Puritans, when they came to the wilderness of New England, had no intention of establishing religious freedom. They were seeking freedom to practice their particular religion, a far different thing. They fined the first president of Harvard college for preaching against infant baptism, and they hanged Quaker missionaries.

The Quakers themselves, in Pennsylvania, while they had no established church, insisted that their officials be Protestants, and Maryland, founded as a Catholic colony, passed a statute for religious freedom in 1649, revoked it in 1654, and, when it was reënacted in 1658, excluded Catholics from its protection.

Only Rhode Island had a consistent record of religious freedom, and this was due to the efforts of Roger Williams, a man who lived a century before his time. When Charles II. granted Rhode Island religious freedom in its charter of 1663 he expressed the hope that it, "by reason of the remote distances of those places, will [as we hope] bee noe breach of the unitie and unifirmitie established in this nation"—for Charles was at the time proceeding against nonconformists in England.

A number of the colonies had state churches at the outbreak of the revolution, Puritan in New England and Anglican in the south. As late as 1768 Patrick Henry was defending Baptist ministers who were haled into court in Virginia for preaching in violation of the colony's laws. The Virginia assembly adopted Jefferson's famous "Statute for Religious Liberty" in 1785, and at the time of the constitutional convention only Virginia and Rhode Island guaranteed complete freedom of worship.

The provision of the first amendment regarding religious freedom was thus little short of revolutionary in its time. It undoubtedly grew in part out of the distrust of a strong national government, for it was not then binding on the states. Whether it was made so by the "due process" clause in the fourteenth amendment has never been decided, although the Supreme court has recently held that the other guarantees of the first amendment are so extended. It is doubtful whether the question will ever come before the court, since every state except Alabama guarantees religious liberty in its state constitution.

The constitutional prohibition of test oaths was no less revolutionary, for even when freedom of worship was allowed in that day it did not follow that dissenters from the religion of the majority enjoyed the franchise, or, even if they could vote, were allowed to hold office. America was far ahead of England in this respect. It was not until the nineteenth century that the political disabilities of Catholics and Jews were removed, and to this day the British king must adhere to the established church.

Test oaths were required in some of the American states after the adoption of the constitution, and Maryland did not remove all of the political disabilities of Jews until 1828. But Massachusetts, the stronghold of Puritanism, had rejected test oaths in the state constitution of 1780. It was drawn up by a convention in which 24 ministers of the established church sat. One of their number, a Rev. Mr. Backus, declared that "religious tests are the greatest engine for tyranny in the world."

The revolutionary ideas of the founders of the republic extended only so far, however, as complete separation of church and state. They were neither hostile nor indifferent to religion. The statutes against blasphemy, the tax exemption granted religious property, and the customary form of oath used in our courts are some of the many ways in which the law recognizes that we are fundamentally a religious people.

Test oaths, also, are prohibited only to the government. This has not prevented voters imposing what is practically a test oath upon their elected representatives. In those areas where a single denomination predominates offices go in most cases to men professing the religious convictions of the majority of their constituents.

Congress has never shown any disposition to violate the bulwarks of religious freedom established by the constitution, and so the Supreme court has never been called upon to enforce the guarantee. The court, however, has passed several times upon religious or quasi-religious questions. It held that polygamy was still a crime, even though sanctioned by a religion, in which case its opinion stated:

"Whilst legislation for the establishment of a religion is forbidden, and its free exercise permitted, it does not follow that everything which may be so called can be tolerated. Crime is not the less odious because sanctioned by what any particular sect may designate as religion."

In another case the Supreme court has sustained the practice which a number of denominations hold to be a duty of their religion, that of educating their children in schools administered by their church. This was in 1925, when the court held an Oregon law requiring that all children attend public schools to be unconstitutional.

Two appeals against the law were taken to the court, one by a Catholic parochial school and the other by a private military academy. The opinion invalidating the state law was based not upon the first amendment, but upon the fourteenth. The court held that the schools were being deprived of property without due process of law—one of many instances in which the constitutional protection of property rights has at the same time been a protection of human rights.

Further discussions of the liberties guaranteed Americans by the constitution will appear in these columns from time to time.

THE "JUMPY" HEART.

THERE are numerous conditions masquerading under the cloak of heart disease that have little or nothing to do with that organ. True enough, they are often responsible for sensations which arise, as many patients believe, because the heart is figuratively jumping through hoops, but all such symptoms must be viewed in the light of our present knowledge of how the heart behaves in health and in disease.

Of 300 patients complaining of "heart trouble" admitted to an Akron clinic, 114 were found, as the result of a thorough examination, to present no heart difficulties whatsoever. Many of these persons exhibited shortness of breath, palpitation, heart pain, heart consciousness, and swelling of the ankles.

Some of us are unusually sensitive to tobacco, caffeine [from tea or coffee], or theobromine [from cocoa or chocolate]. We may suffer a rapidly beating heart after taking but one cup of coffee or following the smoking of a single cigar. Not only will the rate be increased, but there may be a definite sense of pain in the upper left side of the chest. Such symptoms do not point to disease of the heart. They are merely indications that the structure has been overstimulated by what—to the individual—is a poison.

Many persons possess unusually delicate stomachs, bladders, or intestinal tracts. Others manifest a lack of nervous equilibrium by developing skin eruptions. Still others, under a severe mental strain, will exhibit what appears to be a misbehaving heart. As a rule the symptoms indicate merely an untrained nervous system and may not have the slightest relation to the heart.

Whether we realize it or not, we are dealing with an organ of habit. It, too, can be guided so that it will not respond by rapid contractions or by skipping a beat now and then at every emotional upset. We really do not train the heart, but by controling our nerves we neutralize impulses that would otherwise affect it.

Heart consciousness may be disregarded for the most part. Some patients will state that they can hear the heart pumping whenever they are lying down. If this has not been a constant symptom the individual's attention will be attracted to it and he will begin at once to anticipate disease, thus increasing his nervous reactions. Cases have been reported in which this was the beginning of a chain of manifestations, including attacks of fainting, prostration, and the fear of imminent death—all due to apprehension.

Swelling of the ankles is not at all uncommon. If it is moderate and occurs in obese individuals or if there is a tendency to varicose veins it is probably not the result of organic disease. Careful examination will usually show that this is not a true edema, but is due to venous congestion or to slowing down of the flow of lymph.

Irregularity is another common difficulty. The patient may have felt his pulse and noted a dropped or skipped beat. While this situation may denote a tired heart it does not mean necessarily that disease exists. Sometimes the occurrence will produce sensations of jumping or dizziness and faintness. In most cases these impressions will disappear with adequate rest and quiet. If the condition warants the first essential, of course, is to reassure the fearsome one that organic disease is not present.

Individuals with any of these pseudo heart signs should receive a systematic inventory as a precautionary measure. It is frequently desirable to reduce the amount of tobacco, caffeine, and alcohol, since these drugs can and do produce heart irritability. Treatment is directed to providing sufficient rest for the nervous system. Ten hours in bed at night, plus an hour in the middle of the day, combined with gradually increasing walks, will relieve 90 per cent of these cases.

CIGARETS.

E. R. Z. writes: A while ago cigaret manufacturers were stating their claims negatively. Now their claims are positive. They assert that their use assists athletes in their hard tests, helps digestion, etc. What justification, if any, is there for such statements?

REPLY.

The very mildness of cigaret smoke encourages the smoker to inhale and the chronic irritation of the mucous membrane of the bronchi thus produced is sufficient in many cases to produce "a cigaret cough" with excessive secretion. The aid suggested is probably psychological.

CAN BE CHECKED.

V. L. J. writes: Is there any known treatment to check the advance of locomotor ataxia in the first stages?

REPLY.

Any individual suffering from syphilis in any stage should be under the care of a competent physician. If the patient coöperates, his disease can be checked, if not cured. Locomotor ataxia means that the disease has affected the nervous system.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY ALEX SMALL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DAMASCUS, Syria.—"We're a civilized people, able to take care of ourselves," the young Syrian nationalist was telling me. His black eyes glowed under the brick red tarbush, a flowerpot above a face which, like that of most young orientals, was slightly puffy and looked as if it had been shaved about two days before.

"We do not want any mandatory power, France or any other, sent us by the league of nations. Look at what we can do. Look at this city, the oldest in the world, and now a modern capital with more than 300,000 inhabitants."

It is hardly a "modern capital" as an American would judge, but it is picturesque enough—a huddle of indistinguishable little houses, and above them on every side, the gracile slenderness of the minarets. There is a mosque everywhere you turn in Damascus, and every mosque means a minaret.

Then there are the cupolas, meant to shed the scanty rainfall into cisterns. You see them generally in clusters, so many yellowish beehives, sometimes lined up neatly in rows.

Damascus is not a grandiose or inspiring city. The endless rows of houses—practically none over two stories high—are mostly built in mortar smeared over light beams, the way European houses were built in the middle ages, and the beams show through. You feel that they are ready to topple.

In fact, they do topple, as you can see by the heaps of rubbish around you and the gaping holes in house walls. What gives Damascus, like other oriental cities, its peculiar character is not that no one ever seems to finish building anything. The peculiarity is that no one ever seems to finish demolishing anything.

Hence these houses with part of an upper story torn off. The rest stands in jagged sections. No one has bothered even to take out window frames. Damascus has acres of this sort of thing, and you may call it picturesque, but it is the picturesqueness of squalor.

The bazar, or "souk," is reputed to be the largest and grandest in the near east. It is arched over with sheet iron vaulting, so that you grope your way in a twilight amid the jostling Arabs, camels, and donkeys. You see an ancient organization by trade guilds—all the brass merchants together, all the lether goods stores, all the sellers of spice.

People are enjoying themselves hugely in the process of haggling over pennies. No first price is ever meant to be taken seriously. If you should pay it, that shows you are a foreign idiot who wants to do things in a hurry and cannot appreciate the delights of an hour's squabbling before a nickel changes hands.

All the textile stuffs and brassware are supposed to be native manufacture. You may be only slightly dubious about that, but there can be no doubt about the heaps of cheap little household appliances. This is the mass production stuff of Germany, England, France, or Czechoslovakia. Or, more likely, it is Japanese, for Japan has muscled into this market as into all others of the near east.

Damascus still has the handcraft industries which long made it renowned, but they are in bad shape. Steel working has disappeared, so that the "Damascus blade" now belongs to literature. Brass is still hammered by hand, but only the extreme cheapness of labor here keeps the trade alive against the competition of the machine products of Germany. The cultivation of silk is dying out of Syria, and with it the weaving of silks and brocades. Rugs are still made, but I was told they are considerably inferior to those of Persia.

In a factory which manufactures "oriental articles" I saw tiny tots working at the hand looms. They are taken at the age of 8, and have to work six hours a day. Child labor is regarded as a blessing in Syria; it keeps idle hands out of mischief; and the youngsters may bring 30 or 40 cents a day into the family income.

This was skirting the problem I had come to Damascus to investigate—the discontent of Syrians with the mandatory power, France—but on my return I got a sight of the reality. Behind the blaring of a bugler's band two companies of French African Negroes, Senagelese, were marching.

"How many of them are here?" I asked.

"Ten thousand," the young nationalist answered. "And they have a fort up there,"—pointing to the hills eastward, "on a height which can command any point in the town. They have us at their mercy."

The number, I later learned, was an exaggeration by about half, but there was no doubt about the fort nor its commanding position.

"And isn't it a shame," my nationalist friend continued, "to send those Negro savages on garrison duty among a civilized people like us? It is an insult to us cultured Syrians."

EXECUTION ON JUDGMENT.

Berwyn, Ill., April 23.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—When judgment is taken on a note [1] how long a time must elapse before any action can be taken on it—i. e., place a [2] lien on property—[3] store goods, etc.? 4. If property is already mortgaged what effect would that have on any action taken? F. C.

1. No delay is necessary.
2. The judgment is automatically a lien on real estate as soon as it is entered.
3. Execution can be levied at once.
4. Relationship of the judgment lien to a prior lien would be substantially the same as that of a second mortgage to a first mortgage. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

SHARE IN ESTATE.

Chicago, April 11.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—My mother died recently leaving my brother and myself sole heirs and co-administrators without bond. All property, personal and real estate, was left share and share alike. When the will was probated [1] I paid the bill and [2] my brother received the copy of the will and [3] I the receipt for the probating. Why? Although the original will is on file at the court and the inventory of the lockbox has been taken, I have nothing to show that I am one of the heirs. 4. Am I not entitled to a copy of the inventory and will [5] or must I pay for copies myself? I asked my brother to have a copy of both documents made and to date have not received same. My brother has a lawyer looking after his part of the estate and I asked him to have the same man look after mine. 6. To date I have nothing to show in writing that I have a share in the estate. The estate is very small from my brother's point of view, but large from mine. Please advise. J. C. M.

1. You are in a better position to say why you did this than we are.
2. It seems probable that he happened to be the one who applied for it.
3. If you mean the receipt for payment, then it would be natural that the receipt should be given to the one who made the payment.
4. You are not entitled to a copy as a matter of right, but you can obtain a copy from the clerk of the court by paying him.
5. Yes.
6. If you examine the court files we are confident that you will find that your rights appear on record.

1935 LICENSE PLATES.

Herrin, Ill., April 28.—We have noticed several complaints in the Voice of the People column of THE TRIBUNE recently relative to the large number of 1935 Illinois auto plates still to be seen on the highways of this state. The lack of enforcement of the automobile license law has become the talk of autoists all throughout Egypt. One would think that an auto license strike was on, from the little effort apparently made to remedy the situation.

In a trip Sunday, April 26, of less than one hundred miles here in southern Illinois, we found forty-three cars bearing 1935 plates and forty-eight cars with no plates at all. Several of these cars were parked in the business sections of Harrisburg and Du Quoin. In each city we understand there are regular auto license inspectors residing. A number of cars bearing 1936 licenses display but one plate. We are wondering if it is the policy of the secretary of state's office to make most of us pay our license and let the balance of our autoists go scot free. HAL W. TROVILLION.

NOTE ON HEROISM.

Chicago, April 26.—I have seen references to "the entombed heroes." I realize the nation is thankful that the entombed men, or at least two of them, were saved, but who were the heroes? It certainly wasn't the careless men who descended into a place they evidently didn't know anything about. It seems to me that if an investigation was brought about those men would be censured for their carelessness in not having some one with them who knew something about the place they were walking into. Isn't it true that when we read in THE TRIBUNE about a boat being caught in a storm on the lake, or some one caught adrift on a piece of ice, the ones who do the rescuing are the heroes and the ones rescued the careless ones? Is there any difference in this case? I don't think so. The heroes are the men who actually risked their lives and knew it and worked night and day like slaves to save their fellow men. PAT DEVLIN.

MOON'S SECRET.

Chicago, April 26.—I would appreciate it very much if Frank Willard [creator of Moon Mullins] would send me his rapid remover of black eyes which he demonstrated in today's SUNDAY TRIBUNE. In panels nine and ten Moon is shown with a black eye and in the one following the black eye has disappeared. The fact that the man whom Moon mistook for a doctor did not erase the black eye proves to me that Mr. Willard has the secret. Out with it, Frank; give your readers the dope on this. F. W. ERNST.

I SING MY COUNTRY.

Chicago, April 28.—I have in my possession an article written by Arthur Sears Henning. It is dated Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 9, aboard North Coast Limited, and begins "I Sing My Country!" Why not republish the article? I think every American should have a copy in his home. It is a masterpiece. I should like very much to see a reprint. MRS. ROSE MUGEIT.

MUSIC AND DRAWING.

Chicago, April 27.—As an ex-tea[cher] and a mother of a little high school [student] on a "night shift" I want to ask [THE] TRIBUNE to appeal to the Chicago b[oard] of education in behalf of the high sc[hool] freshmen and sophomores.

The North-Central Association of [Col]leges and High Schools has just [con]demned the Chicago high schools [for] overcrowded school buildings and p[upil] and teacher overload. Would it be a[...] to suggest the following simple plan [for] cutting down the length of the [...] school day and reducing the burden[s of] students and teachers?

A year of music and a year of draw[ing] are required in the freshman and so[pho]more years of the high school cou[rse]. Although these subjects meet five h[ours] per week they are classed as liquids [and] are taken as fifth subject, not cou[nted] among the thirty-two majors requ[ired] for graduation. In other words, [the] youngest students are forced, for no [ap]parent reason, to carry the heaviest l[oad].

If drawing and music are consid[ered] so valuable in the general education [of] our young people, then why not g[ive] them with the dignity of major subj[ects] and count them among the required [thir]ty-two majors? This would automati[cal]ly relieve the freshmen and sophomo[res] of one subject. There would be m[ore] classrooms available during the nor[mal] school day, as about one-fifth of the n[um]ber of classes would be cut from the h[igh] school program. The teachers would [be] glad to teach the same number of pu[pils] in five rather than six classes. And [the] board of education would save on li[ght] and coal bills.

With the return of five class per te[ach]er day the teachers would get a li[ttle] time for helping the students who n[eed] special help. SARAH JAMIESON.

PLOWED UNDER.

Chicago, April 26.—In his recent N[ew] York speech President Roosevelt [ex]pressed disappointment at his failure [to] find grass growing in the city streets.

It goes without saying that Herb[ert] Hoover would never have made the [re]mark to which his successor so facetio[usly] referred had he realized the extent [to] which the Roosevelt administration wo[uld] go in the matter of crop curtailment.

What we would be interested in kno[w]ing is—who has been getting the b[ig] checks for not letting it grow? T. N. ST. HILL.

LOGICAL.

New York, April 26.—Your correspo[nd]ent, Tom Russell, in Sunday's pa[per] suggests that if Mr. Roosevelt is logi[cal] in asking a 30 hour week for labor [he] would be more logical still asking fo[r a] 15 hour week.

Conversely, if Mr. Russell is logi[cal in] asking for a longer week, or defendi[ng] it, he would be more logical still aski[ng] for a week of 168 hours of labor—[or] whatever 24 hours for seven da[ys] amounts to.

Logic being funny that way. F. A. SIEVERMAN JR.

SIR JAMES BARRIE IS 76 MAY 9; CAN WAGGLE EARS YET

Peter Pan Creator Keeps Birthday Plans Secret.

LONDON, May 2—(AP)—High in his almost hermit retreat, in the heart of London, overlooking the Thames, Sir James Barrie, creator of the immortal Peter Pan, will celebrate his 76th birthday next Saturday.

It will be a fairly advanced age that Sir James comes into—and there are those who insist that he is now, unlike his most famous characters, definitely growing up.

But there are many others, those who know his writings better, who point out that it virtually is impossible for Sir James really to grow up.

Still Can Waggle Ears.

It is claimed that he still can waggle his ears, or throw a postage stamp to the ceiling and make it stick there — accomplishments that even Peter Pan would be proud to possess.

Nor would anyone be surprised if Sir James decided to spend his birthday playing pirates at the round pond in Kensington gardens.

But just how Sir James will spend his birthday is his own secret. He clings steadfastly to his long-standing rule against personal notice.

"I have all my days," he writes, "made a rule against saying anything about myself for publication. Please do not think me a curmudgeon . . ."

Plenty of Tobacco Smoke.

Visitors are met by a servant who is adept at preserving his master's seclusion. But even a glimpse through an open door makes it evident that the shy author of "The Little Minister" and "The Admirable Crichton" lives as one would expect him to live—in a small, unpretentious, comfortable apartment with plenty of tobacco smoke, worn pipes, books, and photographs.

It is also a work shop [he has completed a new play, "The Boy, David," for Elizabeth Bergner] and a retreat. He is completely cut off from new and modern London.

At 76 he is shortly to see his new play performed, and, if he keeps his press cuttings, to count perhaps how many times he is described as whimsical or wistful.

Beattie of the Northwestern University School of Music directed the three concerts.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, May 2. — Dr. Wilhelm Furtwaengler, orchestra conductor, has been released from all his contracts in Germany for the coming season by Reichsfuehrer Hitler.

Officially it was explained the "leave" was granted at Furtwaengler's own request "to attend to personal matters" and that he will resume full activities the following season.

[Furtwaengler last year resigned all his posts after a dispute with Paul Joseph Goebbels, Nazi propaganda minister, over the composer Paul Hindemith, who, Goebbels charged, had Jewish associations. The rift later was patched up. When Furtwaengler was signed by the New York Philharmonic Symphony this year, protests against his renewed relations with the Nazis caused him to cancel his engagement.]

A RESTAURATEUR TRIES TO BE TOO NICE TO POLICE

Sergt. Anton Schultz and Detective Edward Bussean of the Evanston police department dropped in yesterday at the Derby restaurant, 335 Howard street, for a plate of ravioli and a cup of coffee. It was the "grand opening" of the restaurant, and the waitress brought each of the plainclothesmen a "couple of eye-openers on the house."

"It looks like wine," remarked Sergt. Schultz.

"It smells like wine," replied Detective Bussean.

"It is wine," they agreed after a sip. Whereupon they arrested Paul Lambert, 52 years old, 7423 Rogers avenue, the owner. After examining the Evanston dry ordinance, they booked him for "giving away liquor in a public place."

SCHACHT RETAINS POST AS GERMAN ECONOMICS CHIEF

BERLIN, May 2.—(AP)—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht agreed tonight to remain at his post as Nazi minister of economics and president of the Reichsbank after receiving Adolf Hitler's assurances of faith in his economic policies.

Hitler and his financial expert composed their differences at a conference which was so hearty it led one high German official to assert:

"The grounds for divorce having been eliminated through a heart-to-heart talk, the marriage will continue."

Goering Furnishes Incentive.

The chief incentive for the patched up alliance was furnished by Col. Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering whose appointment as supreme dictator over foreign exchange and raw materials questions subordinated Schacht to the No. 2 position in German commerce and industry.

Goering, who also had a "preliminary talk" with the Reichsbank president, agreed to use only a small corps of adjutants as a connecting link with ministries and departments under his new office.

He said he would confine himself, with the exception of this small administrative staf, to using the existing machinery for coördinating Germany's raw materials and foreign exchange needs with her resources.

The fighting Schacht, who has differed with the Reichsfuehrer before, was reported to have the support of Gen. Werner von Blomberg, minister of war.

Army Supports Schacht.

"Blomberg realizes only too well that when others have already been forced to give adulterated bluish milk, Schacht still manages to serve cream," one official declared.

Therefore, this official continued, it is to the army's interest to have Schacht remain in control of Germany's economic life since otherwise the stupendous demands arising from Germany's rearmament program could not be met.

Schacht, who was known to have started his three-hour discussion with Hitler by offering to resign, remained at the chancellery for lunch with the Fuehrer. It was the first time in months the two had met over the luncheon table.

Almost at the same time that Hitler and his economic minister reached agreement, the league of German industries announced its fund for advancing foreign exports would be continued for another year at approximately 1 billion marks [$400,000,000].

AVIATRIX AND 3 MEN SAVED AFTER WEEK IN DESERT

TRIPOLI, Tripolitania, May 2.—(AP)—A French aviatrix and three Belgians, forced down near Mount Talut, in Italy's North African possession of Libya, were found safe late yesterday after almost a week of searching, it was learned today.

The French woman, Vivienne Elders, and the Belgian men lived in the desert with only eight quarts of water from Monday, when their plane made a forced landing, until they were rescued. All were in reasonably good physical condition.

Col. Cagna, who flew with Gen. Italo Balbo, now governor of Libya, in the Italian squadron trans-Atlantic flight of 1933 to Chicago, was the aviator who found them.

SCIENTISTS USE SOUND WAVES TO DESTROY GERMS

New Immunizing Agents Are Reported.

Washington, D. C., May 2.—(AP)—The destruction of disease germs by sound waves and the creation of new and safer disease immunizing agents were reported today to the American Physical society.

Dr. L. A. Chambers of the Johnson Foundation also revealed a phenomenon new to science—the production of cold light in water and 13 other liquids by the bombardment with sound waves.

When these liquids are subjected to the sound vibrations of from 1,000 to 9,000 cycles per second, he said, the surface of the liquid and the air immediately above it begins to glow with a bluish-white light plainly visible to the eye.

Why this reaction occurs is still a mystery, he added.

Cavities Formed in Liquids.

The principal reaction known to occur within the liquids, Dr. Chambers said, is cavitation, or the pulling apart of the liquids to form cavities within them. An oxidation effect, such as the formation of hydrogen peroxide, the same chemical used in hair bleaching, is also found when the emission of light occurs in the presence of oxygen.

The physicist displayed great interest in the possible biological uses of such waves, some suggesting that since bacteria could be destroyed by them perhaps they could be employed in the treatment of cancer and other malignant human diseases.

Bacterial destruction has been demonstrated, Dr. Chambers said, by the sterilization of milk as effectively as if it had been pasteurized, and by the making of soft-curd, easily digestible milk for use as baby food.

Bombarded with Sound.

The disease-immunizing agents were made by first subjecting the microöganisms which cause the disease, such as the dreaded streptococcus and scarlet fever germs, to sound bombardment, he said. This caused a breakdown of the bacterial cells and the broken particles of them could then be separated from the antigens, or substances which make disease-resistance possible in the body, by whirling them about in a centrifuge, a machine resembling a cream separator.

These antibodies are extremely sensitive to methods, such as heating, used formerly to kill the disease germs before injecting them into the body to build up resistance, he added, but are apparently not affected by sound. Thus, the active immunizing agents can be separated and injected into the body in pure form.

Fox for research in pathology, and to Dr. Dan H. Campbell for research in bacteriology. A SNAKELESS HOME IS A CHEERLESS ONE, THINKS BOY RUNAWAY

Jerome Leonhardt, 11 years old, of 7128 Drury lane, Maplewood, Mo., likes snakes and they like him. His interest in reptiles was so marked that he recently announced to his parents that he intended to make a career of raising cottonmouth vipers, rattlers, and other species.

But his mother not only vetoed his ambition, but ordered that Jerome get rid of the stock he had in the back yard. He then went to a girl named Eleanor, whom he admires greatly, and told her about his troubles. But Eleanor, agreeing with Mother Leonhardt, said Jerome would have to choose between her and his snakes.

This so discouraged the lad that he ran away from home Friday night and hitch hiked his way into Chicago. He arrived penniless and was glad when he was taken into custody on Garfield boulevard by Park Policeman Thomas Carey. At the Englewood station he told Policewoman Dorothy Tedell the story of his life. She sympathized and said she hoped he could get out to the zoo and see big serpents there before he returns to his snakeless world in Maplewood, which is a suburb of St. Louis.

DECLARES CURB ON FREEDOM IS SUICIDE CAUSE

St. Louis, Mo., May 2.—(AP)—Dr. Gregory Zilboorg, New York psychiatrist, told the Missouri Society for Mental Hygiene today suicides resulted not from insanity and depressions but from the "bottling up" of inherent aggressive impulses.

"Unless the psychic machine, the human individual, is permitted to function freely, it will wilt under the pressure of its inner steam and, like a boiler whose safety valves are plugged, it will break," he said.

"The recent growth of political dictatorships undoubtedly serves as such an agency of plugging up man's natural drives and it would not be surprising to learn that suicide will begin to increase as a result," Dr. Zilboorg said.

Dr. Zilboorg reported 15,000 to 20,000 suicides are "officially" recorded in the United States each year. "Few people," he said, "suspect how many suicides in the true sense of the word are concealed behind our numerous automobile accidents. The psychiatrist is only too familiar with the neurotic and ostensibly normal individual who labors under the pressure of a violent but unconscious trend of self-destruction and who either runs his automobile into a pole or lets himself be run over by an approaching car."

Gunmen Get $540 Cash In Robbery of Market

Four gunmen entered the Pioneer Market company's store at 1954 Armitage avenue last night, and nervously advised the six persons in the store to "keep cool." The bandits took $500 from the cash register and $40 more from the owners of the store and three clerks, whom they forced into an ice box.

Abe Oslan, 1220 Sherwin avenue, reported to the Summerdale police that two gunmen took $1,000 last night from a safe in the office of the Clifton Cleaners, 5709 North Clark street, of which he is part owner. The robbers forced him to open the safe doors, he said.

FOES OF BRITAIN TAKE BIG LEAD IN EGYPTIAN VOTE

2 Killed, 34 Hurt as Wafd Party Gains Control.

CAIRO, May 2.—(AP)—The nationalistic Wafd party was believed to have won a clear majority in the election of a new chamber of deputies today.

In contrast with the situation several months ago, election day passed quietly except in upper Egypt. There 2 persons were killed and 34 injured in clashes in several villages. [Many persons were killed last autumn and winter in riots between police and Wafdists, who demanded an independent Egypt, free entirely from British influence.]

Seventy Wafdists Without Foes.

Although election returns will not be available before tomorrow, the ballots listed 70 Wafdists, running for election to the 23 seat chamber, as without opposition. Observers believed the Wafd party had returned without trouble the other 47 candidates necessary to a clear majority.

Among the unopposed candidates for the new chamber were Egypt's delegates to the pending negotiations with Britain for a treaty to replace the present British control.

The treaty negotiations were postponed until after the election, the delegates being scheduled to meet next Tuesday to determine their course of action.

Fifth Egyptian Election.

The electorate went to the polls under the recently restored constitution. It was Egypt's fifth election since the parliamentary régime was first instituted in 1923 and was called to select a lower house for its first Democratic legislature since 1930.

Mourning for King Fuad I, who died Tuesday and was succeeded by his son Farouk, now returning from London aboard a British vessel, lent a sobering influence to the election.

FATHER REFUSES TO BUY HIM DRINK; SON KILLS SELF

Charles Anbach, 25 years old, killed himself early today in front of the home of his father, Otto Anbach, 344 Wisconsin avenue, after the father and son had visited a series of taverns with another son, Robert, and the latter's wife. To the Hudson avenue police the elder Anbach told this story:

"Charles went out with us and wanted us to buy him drinks. We refused, and when we returned home he stopped outside and called to me, 'Well, Dad, I'm going to end it all.' Then he pulled a pistol from his pocket and fired a bullet into his temple."

The son was dead when police arrived.

Memorial Services Today for C. S. Cutting, Ex-Judge

BOY OF 6, GIRL FRIEND DELAY SPECIAL TRAIN TO SEE NIAGARA FALLS

Cleveland, O., May 2.—(AP)—A 6 year old boy in a cowboy suit and a little girl friend delayed a special train for half an hour today because they wanted to see Niagara Falls.

The boy was James V. Allred Jr., son of Gov. James V. Allred of Texas. The girl was Gladys Pharr, a daughter of Burnett Pharr, leader of the University of Texas band. They were traveling on the special train touring the country in the interest of the Texas Centennial exposition.

RITES FOR SISTER MARY BERTILLE TO BE TOMORROW

Sister Mary was born in Chicago and was one of the first postulates from the Holy Family parish to become affiliated with the B. V. M. when the sisters came here from Dubuque, Ia., to teach in 1870. CONCERTS ENDED, TOSCANINI SAILS BACK TO EUROPE

Maestro Cherishes Album of "Candid" Photos.

New York, May 2.—(AP)—Arturo Toscanini sailed for Europe today on the Champlain, his eleven years' service as conductor of the New York Philharmonic Symphony society ended and a treasured album of unusual photographs in his luggage.

That was the doings of Saul Goodman, orchestra tympanist and amateur photographer whose pictures are the only ones ever taken of the conductor in action.

The 69 year old maestro, whose final concert Wednesday night brought his brilliant conductorship in America to a close, may have recalled, as the Champlain moved down the bay, that day not so long ago when he glared at the tympanist and asked: 'Is it that you are being paid to play the tympani, or is it that you are being paid for photographing your maestro?"

Takes Pictures on Sly.

Goodman shivers perceptibly as he recalls that inauspicious beginning of his self appointed career as Toscanini's photographer. He began taking pictures of the conductor about three months ago.

"I carried a little camera in my pocket during rehersals," Goodman recalled. "When there would be a rest for the drums I would slip the camera out and catch the maestro as he was waving his arms, or was intent on some part of the score he particularly loved. He didn't seem to notice it, so one day I brought in a little tripod and set it up in front of the tympani. He didn't seem to notice that, either.

Photographer Falls Into Drum.

"We were rehersing Hydn's 'Clock Symphony' and during a rest in my score I slipped around in front of the drums, set the camera on the tripod and took a fine picture. Then I realized all of a sudden that I was to come in pretty soon with the drums and I scurried back to my place.

"I fell over the tripod, went boom into a drum, and the orchestra was thrown off. It was awful. I could hardly move."

That was the occasion for Toscanini's request for Goodman's definition of his services. After the rehearsal Goodman thought he'd better ask the maestro how he felt about it and maybe thus save his job.

He did so and discovered that Toscanini all the time had been aware of being photographed. He asked to see some of the prints and was so delighted with the results that he gave Goodman the permission to take pictures during rehersals.

Goodman has taken some two hundred shots of the maestro and when Toscanini made his final bow at Carnegie hall last Wednesday one of the gifts with which he was presented was the album from Goodman containing 60 of the best pictures.

When the maestro sailed today two other conductors of international renown also were on the passenger list. They were Otto Klemperer, conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic orchestra, and Pierre Monteux, former conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra and now leader of the San Francisco Symphony.

PERSHING MEETS BOYHOOD PALS

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

His "Last" Visit

Laclede, Mo., May 2.—[U. P.]—Gen. John J. Pershing today made what he expects to be his last trip back to this little town of his birth.

"I expect I'll take my last look at Laclede on the way out today," the wartime A. E. F. commander told friends here and from nearby Brookfield who still called him "Jack."

Travel is becoming too strenuous for him, he told a boyhood friend, Ed B. Allen, 83, Brookfield tavern keeper.

Pershing spoke only a few congratulatory words when he dedicated a cornerstone of a $50,000, partially government financed school building here.

Pershing has made three visits back to northeast Missouri since he won fame in France.

The general rode into Laclede about noon, and visited his birthplace and the spot where his father, James Pershing, operated a "general store" while his son attended school.

Cannon Pointed at Home Makes Californian Nervous

San Luis Obispo, Cal., May 2.—(AP)—The city's world war relic, a German cannon, occupied a new position on the courthouse lawn today because Benjamin Cerini didn't like to have the barrel pointing at his house. ABLY DONE 'UNION PACIFIC' BALLET CAPTURES HOUSE

"Aurora's Wedding" an Artful Artistic Contrast.

BY EDWARD BARRY.

The ballet hysteria of other years, which was comparatively little in evidence Thursday and Friday, seized the city again yesterday afternoon. De Basil's Ballet Russe programmed two perennial favorites, "Union Pacific" and "Aurora's Wedding," and the resulting enthusiasm threatened to stop the show four or five times.

Massine has done an amazingly good job of "Union Pacific." The fact that its theme and settings are, from his standtpoint, highly exotic, has helped rather than hindered him in the task of turning out an excellent American ballet based on the completion of the first transcontinental railroad.

I do not believe that one can stylize the familiar without a little self-consciousness creeping into the composition. Massine, working with materials as strange to him as the blessing of the Galway fishing boats would be to the routine man of a Broadway chorus, has produced a fresh, gay, convincing piece.

Complex and Sophisticated.

Massine appears both as choreographer and solo dancer, for the four or five minutes allotted to the barman are the high point of any performance of "Union Pacific." This ballet, by the way, boasts the most complex choreographic pattern of anything in the company's répertoire. Surveyors, workers, ladies of dubious virtue, photographers, captains of industry—all are conventionalized in so clever a way that each type retains some recognizable essential of its character, and yet fits nicely into the roaring whole, which is supposed to represent a synthesis of the forces that made the American west.

Special mention should go to Roman Jasinsky and Paul Petroff as the vital, assured surveyors, and to Eugénie Delarova as the Lady Gay. Exquisite Sono Osato, a Chicago Japanese who is making good with the ballet, has a small part in "Union Pacific."

"Aurora's Wedding" a Contrast.

The knowing program arranger went clear to the other extreme when he followed this angular Massine piece with the dainty "Aurora's Wedding." Its Alice in Wonderland beauty of costume and setting, and the delectable series of varying sorts of dances that its flexible frame permits, make of the Petipa relic a perfect foil for the sophisticated piece that went before.

As usual, the Blue Bird number stood the house on its ear, with Riabouchinska and Lichine sharing the honors. Since there is something in Cossack dancing, as in "Dixie," that automatically excites enthusiasm, the company would hardly need to provide three such Ivans as Shabelevsky, Ladre, and Matouchevsky. As it was, the trio of expert technicians provoked a small tumult in the audience.

What a smart idea that is which lets five of the loveliest women in the troupe dance the five variations that succeed the Ladies of Honor business! "Aurora's Wedding" is rich in such devices.

Danilova Wins Acclaim.

"Lake of the Swans," a revival of this season, was repeated yesterday afternoon. The accomplished Alexandra Danilova bore away the major portion of the honors. Some reference should certainly be made also to the delicate "Dance of the Little Swans," which brought Nelidova, Razoumova, Serova and Volkova into the limelight for as sweet and restrained a piece of concerted work as the week's visit is likely to boast.

Antal Dorati conducted all three ballets yesterday afternoon.

Evening saw repetitions of the mysterious and fetching "Cotillon," which grows on one steadily with each sight and hearing; also of the successful "Thamar" of Friday night and Lichine's "Spectre de la Rose." The day closed with a first performance for this engagement of the barbaric and stimulating dances from "Prince Igor."

Paul Petroff replaces David Lichine in tonight's "Spectre de la Rose." Both men have danced the part in Europe, but Chicago has never yet seen Petroff in the famous Nijinsky rôle.

CAMPAIGN BEGUN TO CURB MAYOR AS STAGE CENSOR

Clergymen Lead in Battle to Amend Ordinances.

A campaign to revoke the theater censorship powers of the mayor was begun yesterday by the Chicago Council on Freedom from Censorship at a meeting of dramatic groups at the Chicago Bar association.

The council began the distribution of petitions asking the city council to amend the two ordinances which give the mayor power to revoke theater licenses. The proposed amendments would require that the producers or performers of questionable shows must be convicted in court before the mayor may close them.

"The people who uphold censorship oppose permanent registration, favor licensed gambling and peep shows and fan dancers," said Rabbi Louis Mann of Sinai congregation, one of several speakers who criticized Mayor Kelly's suppression of "Tobacco Road" and other plays. "The mayor and Corporation Counsel Hodes are not so much on trial as we are. Are we going to lie down or are we going to stand up and fight?"

Offer Examples from Bible.

Dr. Frederick Eastman of the Chicago Theological society branded commercial censorship as "even worse than political censorship" and condemned the motion picture practice of block booking, "which compels neighborhood theater operators to exhibit pictures unsuitable for children."

A complaint that his play "Model Tenement" was refused production for the Federal Theater project in Chicago because Mayor Kelly's office objected and because Washington officials concurred, saying, "It's Kelly's town," was made by Meyer Levin, author and magazine film critic.

Speakers for New Ordinances.

Other speakers who urged the lightening of censorship were Carl Haessler, managing editor of the Federated Press; Harold Ehrensberger of Northwestern university, Alice Evans of the Chicago Répertoire theater, and Burgess Meredith of the cast of "Winterset."

Autoist Robbed of $550 on Trip Back from Bank

Three robbers forced the automobile of Benjamin Melsky, 915 Glengyle avenue, to the curb at Homan avenue and Arthington street yesterday and compelled him to surrender $550. Melsky at the time was on his way from a bank to the Central restaurant at 3613 West Roosevelt road, where he is employed.

$75,000 PALACE FOR STRAY PETS NEARS OPENING

Three Story Hotel De Luxe for Cats and Dogs.

While the human stray may find meager accommodations in a relief shelter, stray dogs and cats will be housed in a small animal's "hotel de luxe" when the Anti-Cruelty society's new establishment at 157-159 West Grand avenue is completed in two weeks, an inspection showed yesterday.

Made possible by a bequest of the late Marion E. McConnell, the modern three story building was raised as a memorial to her and to her husband, Horace E. McConnell. Its site, adjoining the old quarters of the society, was purchased for $32,000 and the building cost $75,000.

Sunken Exercise Yard.

Workmen are now on the last step of the project, paving with flagstones the sunken exercise yard for animals and erecting an eight foot stone wall to shield the guests from possible teasing by passersby. A few days ago another thoughtful provision was made for the 20,000 dogs the society entertains yearly when two 40 year old maple trees were transplanted to the exercise yard.

From kennels on the first floor of the building—so-called, although it is a story below the sidewalk level of Grand avenue—the dogs will spring into the yard when glass doors are raised by an attendant. On this floor are the kitchen, with white electric refrigerator and pastel tinted walls like any bride's, and the dogs' bathroom, also spotlessly white.

There are two rooms for cats. In one is a multiple celled cage on wheels. In the other are more commodious compartments, with a series of shelves to allow for feline leaping proclivities.

Clinic and Operating Room.

On the street level floor, near the offices and reception rooms, are the two room free clinic and operating room. Here the latest facilities for treatment of small animals' ailments and injuries will be available to strays and to cats and dogs whose owners are more likely to keep them if they can be returned to health.

"We believe that by offering free clinic service to pet owners with sick animals they will be induced to keep the cat or dog they otherwise might abandon because of the cost of treatment," said Miss Ethel Walsh, executive secretary of the society.

Miss Walsh showed the devices for putting dogs and cats to death. There is an electrocution chamber for cats, a larger one for dogs, and a monoxide chamber for dogs whose owners prefer this method.

Mrs. McConnell, who died in 1931, left approximately $2,000,000 of a $3,000,000 estate to homeless cats and dogs, through bequests to the Anti-Cruelty society and the American Humane Association of New York. She had long been a member of the society here but had taken little part in its activities. She had cared for few, if any, pets during her lifetime.

Seven first cousins of Mrs. McConnell contested her will but later dismissed their action. Her husband, a real estate operator, died in 1917.

PROPER DIET IS FOUND HELP IN TREATING LEPERS

St. Louis, Mo., May 2.—(AP)—A two year study of leprosy at Washington university school of medicine has indicated that proper food may aid afflicted persons.

Drs. Edmund V. Cowdry, L. F. Heimburger, and P. S. Williams said today they had found the large and disfiguring nodules that mark one form of leprosy contain relatively too little calcium and too much phosphorus.

Diets rich in calcium, with the addition of cod liver oil, tend to reestablish normal relations between these substances, the physicians said.

They said some of the favorable results noted from use of chaulmoogra oil now are explained by the fact that while under treatment the lepers enjoyed better food and more healthful surroundings. Chaulmoogra oil still is given on the remote chance it may be helpful and because it does no harm.

The nearly complete disappearance of leprosy from Europe and the United States was attributed by the investigators to improvement in living conditions.

JOCKY WRIGHT BLAMES BUMPING FOR BREVITY'S DEFEAT

STOUT CLAIMS HE WAS PULLED OFF GRANVILLE

Hanford to Receive Nearly $5,000.

BY FRENCH LANE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Louisville, Ky., May 2.—"They jammed me, but I don't think it was intentional," Jocky Wayne Wright, who was beaten a head on Brevity, the favorite in the 62d Derby, said tonight.

He told his sad tale to the even sadder Pete Coyne, the favorite's trainer, and to Joseph E. Widener, the owner, in one of the thousands of wailing conferences that punctuated the night's celebration.

There were wailing conferences, for when Brevity was beaten by Bold Venture, into the creek went the bank rolls of most of the 60,000 in the vast throng. And down into another creek went the thousands which had bet on Brevity at short odds in future book speculation.

Blames No One.

"I don't know just exactly what happened," Wright said. "But it seemed to me Indian Broom and Coldstream tried to form a flying wedge and as they did it, they caught Brevity and Granville in between them. Brevity didn't fall, but I thought he was going down.

"I'm not blaming Wall [Coldstream's jocky] or Burns [Indian Broom's jocky]. I probably was as excited as they were. But it was the only way they could have beaten Brevity."

Wright was nervous and mouthing an abundance of good old fashioned cuss words as he paced up and down the jocky room. Finally he smiled.

"Well, you know I got those breaks in the Santa Anita Handicap in which I brought Top Row through some rough riding," he continued. "Just wasn't in the book for me to get them here today, but it does make me damn mad to lose a Derby when I know I was on the best horse."

"No Accident," Says Stout.

Jocky Johnny Stout, who was knocked out of the saddle when Granville was bumped, was in a much uglier mood.

"That wasn't an accident," he said in no uncertain terms. "Maybe I was excited and didn't know what was going on, but I'm certain somebody reached out with a good strong right arm and pulled me out of the saddle. They couldn't have yanked me out of there any other way."

Stout's valet, who wasn't quite as excited as the jocky, said Indian Broom hit Granville with such force that no one could have stayed in the saddle.

Indian Broom broke on the inside of Brevity, so if some lad did reach out with his right arm and pull Stout out of the saddle it must have been G. Burns, Indian Broom's jocky. Coldstream had broken to the outside of Granville. If Nick Wall on Coldstream had pulled Stout out of the saddle he would have had to do it with his left hand.

Three Draw Suspensions.

Burns and Walls drew 15 day suspensions. So did little Ira Hanford, one of the few apprentice jockies to win a Derby, who kept Bold Venture going long enough to outlast Brevity. Little Hanford was so excited about winning he didn't know about the 15 days' penalty until told about it by a TRIBUNE correspondent.

"Golly, I got him home in front and tried to keep him close to the rail all the way," he said. We didn't hit anybody as far as I can remember."

Hanford's suspension was for cutting over sharply when the field neared the last turn, just at the time the Derby winner was starting his

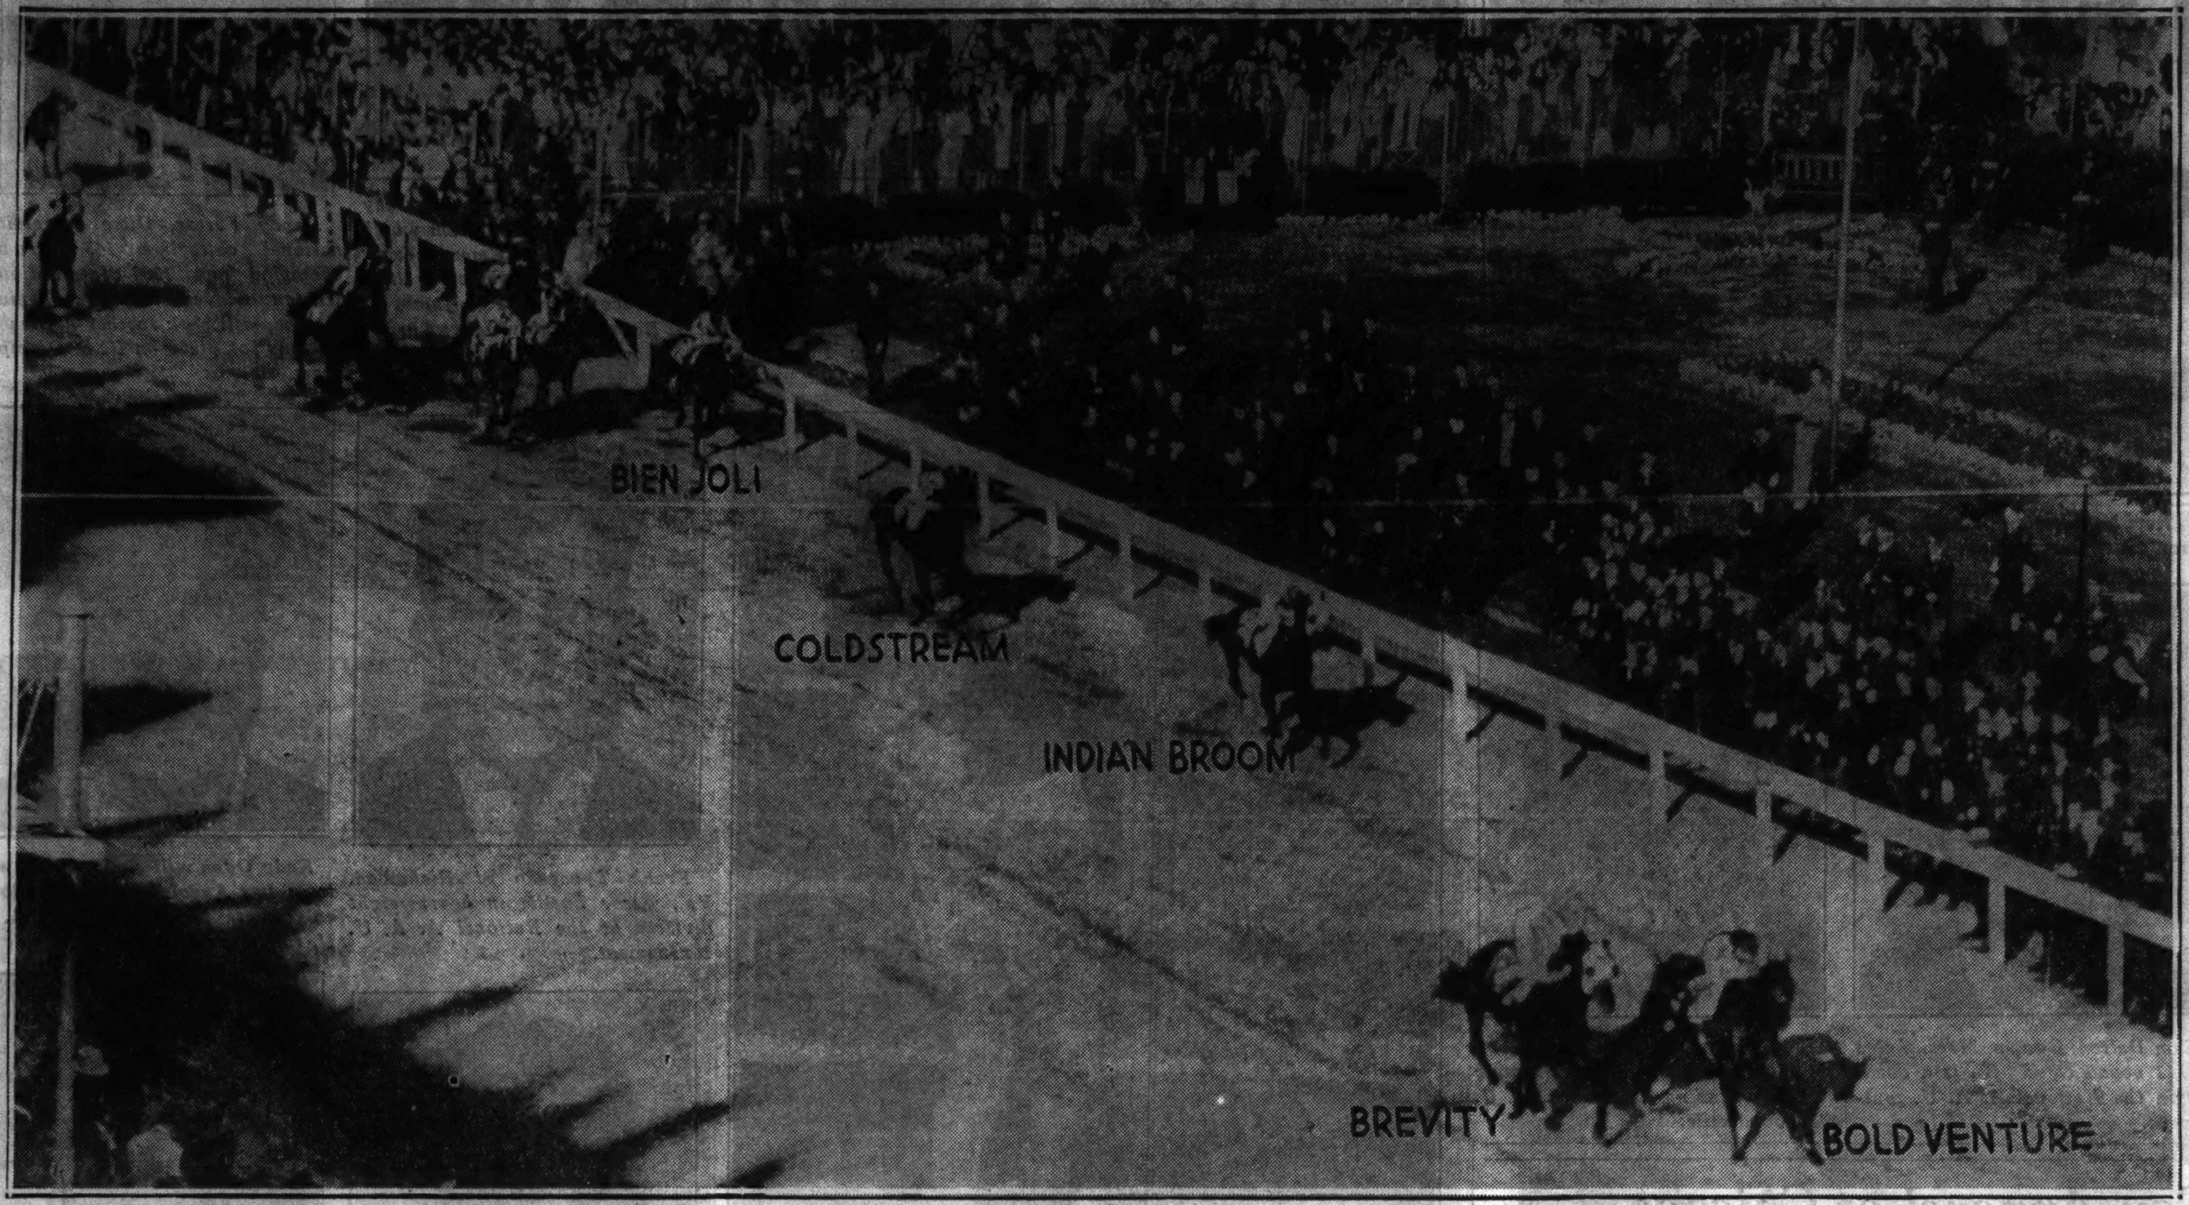
Derby Jinx Pays Fourth Visit to Brevity's Owner

Louisville, Ky., May 2.—[U. P.]—Brevity's defeat by a head in the Kentucky Derby today marked the fourth disappointment for Joseph E. Widener, Philadelphia traction millionaire and one of the country's leading sportsmen. Widener's life ambition is a Kentucky Derby winner.

In 1927 Whiskery beat his favorite Osmond in ankle deep mud. In 1934 his Peace Chance was given a good chance, but his hopes were crushed at the post in a jam in which Peace Chance was almost bumped off the track. Last year his winter book favorite, Chance Sun, went bad and was withdrawn 24 hours before he would have gone to the post a favorite.

And today his picture horse, big Brevity, was knocked almost to his knees at the start, costing him the few inches which would have given him victory.

LONGSHOT WITHSTANDS HARD STRETCH DRIVE TO WIN DERBY



Finish of the Kentucky Derby, with Bold Venture clinging courageously to a slim lead to beat Brevity by a head after a terrific stretch drive. The winner, next to the rail, was the longest shot to win the Derby since 1918. He paid $43 to win, $11.80 to place, and $6.60 to show. A crowd of 60,000 gathered for the famous race and made Brevity the favorite at odds of 4 to 5. Six lengths back of Bold Venture and Brevity is Indian Broom.

ARMY BOXERS DUE TODAY FOR GOLDEN GLOVES

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Amateur boxing stars of the United States today are on the march. These lads, from all sections of the nation, representing universities and amateur athletic associations in more than a score of states, Golden Gloves champions, and winners in other tournaments, will make Chicago the fight center of the world this week.

Ten enlisted men of the United States army, winners from 25,000 stationed in the Hawaiian Islands, are completing a journey of nearly 5,000 miles. These men will arrive this morning on the Overland Limited, the first to register for the two day tournament which will supply the first answer to the question: "Who will fight for the United States in the Olympic games?"

Battles Open Thursday.

Thursday and Friday of this week in two rings at the International amphitheater, 90 boys and men will fight through the early rounds. From this welter of conflict will come 16 finalists who will train in Chicago for two weeks and carry on in the eight championship matches May 20 at the Chicago Stadium.

The eight champions of the United States will meet the nations of the world in friendly combat this summer in Berlin. They will constitute the best group ever brought together. They will have fought through the greatest tournament in amateur boxing history.

Eight other lads will support them, will be ready to step into the breach in case of injury or illness. And they also will fight it out in the European training period for the right to enter the Olympic games. John Behr, director of the Illinois Athletic club, long time head of Golden Gloves teams, and Freddie Caserio, twice Golden Gloves champion and a member of the 1932 United States Olympic boxing team, will direct these boys in their bouts in Germany.

Colleges Send Their Best.

The United States must be represented by its best fighters. It hasn't had the finest amateurs in other years, not even in 1932 when the Olympic games were held in Los Angeles.

To that end THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, in lieu of its international Golden Gloves tournament, offered to sponsor the American Olympics. It is the first national Golden Gloves boxing meet. It will be conducted by the same officials who have conducted the Golden Gloves tournaments, the intercity, and international bouts.

From the national collegiate tournament in Virginia will come the cream

United States Champions

The young men who fight their way through the Olympic Golden Gloves bouts will be crowned champions of the United States and will represent Uncle Sam in the Olympic games.

Preliminaries will be held Thursday and Friday nights at the International Amphitheater. Prices are 55 cents, $1.10, and $1.65. Finals are scheduled for Chicago Stadium May 20 at 55 cents, $1.10, $1.65, $2.20, and $3.30.

It's America's greatest boxing show. No Golden Gloves fan will want to miss it. You can buy your seats at The Tribune Public Service Offices, 1 S. Dearborn, or in Tribune Tower. If you can't get to a ticket booth, call Superior 0100 and ask for "Golden Gloves Tickets." Your order will be held for you. Ticket offices are open from 9 a. m. to 11 p. m.

SOX SNAP LOSING STREAK; PHELPS BEATS YANKS, 6-4

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 2.—Hail to Babe Phelps' trained seal flips, his dipsydews, and jug handle curves! And a million hails to Babe Phelps' bat! Big Babe, in a relief rôle, halted the White Sox's losing streak at eight straight with arm and bat today as the Yanks suffered their first defeat in six games, 6 to 4.

The double with which Phelps drove in the winning margin in the eighth inning today was no such lusty affair as the double with which he drove in the winning run in the opening game of the season. But it was another eighth inning double, and two Lukes—Appling and Sewell—pranced home with the two runs that broke a 4 to 4 tie the Sox had accomplished with two runs in the seventh. A crowd of 23,595 paid saw the surprising outcome.

Just Get 'Em; That's All.

Little did it matter to the Sox that four of their runs were scored by men who had walked and the other two came home on an error. Victory was the thing after the eight straight trimmings since April 20. A pox on any man who would take anything from the belated triumph.

The Yanks, in addition to ending their winning streak at five straight, booted a chance to go into first place in the American league. And the disappointment was severe inasmuch as they had enjoyed a 4 to 2 lead going into the seventh. This was the result of a homer by Frank Crosetti, which drove in three runs after the side should have been retired in the fourth and another run which Crosetti drove in with two out in the sixth on a blooper single which should have been caught. It appeared up till the seventh that everything would just keep right on going bad for the Sox until, perhaps, the millennium.

Mr. Ruffing, Meet Mr. Phelps.

Appling, whose protracted confusion had caused most of the early unhappiness today as well as that of other recent days, walked to start the eighth to round out a 1.000 day at bat and moved up on Piet's sacrifice. Dykes popped to Rolfe, but Ruffing walked Sewell, his fifth pass. Phelps then lifted one of his ornery twisting flies which came to earth back of second in the midst of four players. The Lukes came home and that was the ball game.

As his pitching contribution, Phelps got the side out after loading the bases in the seventh. In the eighth he halted another uprising by the strikeout route. Crosetti singled with one out and Ruffing fanned. Then Rolfe put Crosetti on third with a single to center and Johnson was called out on strikes.

After Selkirk had fouled to Dykes

HERRMANN HURLS NO-HIT, NO-RUN GAME, 10 INNINGS

TORONTO, Ont., May 2.—(AP)—Leroy Herrmann, Toronto right hander, pitched a ten inning no hit, no run game today against Newark, winning 1 to 0.

Herrmann, a former Chicago Cub who came to the Leafs from the Cincinnati Reds, allowed only five men to reach the bases in ten innings. He walked three men, hit one batsman, and was charged with an error.

Marvin Duke of Newark allowed only seven hits.

Perry, Kay Stammers Win British Hard Court Titles

BOURNEMOUTH, England, May 2.—(AP)—Kay Stammers, English star, retained the British hard court tennis championship today, defeating Anita Lizane of Chile, 7-5, 7-5, in the final round. Fred Perry, British Davis cup ace, gained the men's singles championship by defeating his cup mate, Bunny Austin, 6-2, 8-6, 6-3.

TOMMY CURTIN, YALE BASEBALL CAPTAIN, DIES

Pittsfield, Mass., May 2.—[Special.]—Thomas R. Curtin Jr., Yale baseball captain and star half back, died today of leucopenia. He had been in the hospital since February and had undergone 21 blood transfusions. He was a senior at Yale and was 22 years old.

Curtin was stricken with influenza on Feb. 7. After ten days at the Yale infirmary, he was sent to his home here to recuperate. On Feb. 21 a hemorrhage necessitated his removal to the hospital. Then his case was diagnosed as leucopenia. A deficiency of white corpulscles in the blood. Doctors said he might have contracted the disease during the trip the Yale baseball team made to Japan last summer, although its effects had not been felt until the winter, after a strenuous athletic campaign.

As a football player, Curtin was a spectacular pass receiver and an accurate place kicker.

HACK DRIVES IN STAINBACK TO BEAT GIANTS

French Replaced by Root in Ninth.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Tuck Stainback, the benchwarmer, snapped out of his day dreaming yesterday and carved a name for himself as a tamer of the always rough and ready Giants from New York. The wavy haired youngster notched a single and the idea spread to Gabby Hartnett and Stanley Hack. That was all that was needed for the finishing touch to a ten inning see-saw struggle in which the champion Cubs triumphed over their long standing enemy by 5 to 4 and presented Rescuer Charley Root with his season's first victory.

But the Giants, although they hung on doggedly and even threatened to win on this occasion, probably are accustomed to such treatment by now. They have been dusted off nine times in a row at Wrigley field, their only two 1935 victories appearing during their initial visit hereabouts, after which they dropped eight straight. They have captured only three of their last twenty battles in the home of the Cubs, thus being important contributors to the champions' record of losing only eight out of forty-seven here to the eastern clubs since the start of last season.

Schumacher Goes Out.

Prior to the finale in the tenth the Cubs lost two different leads. They scored off the great Hal Schumacher in the second but the Giants tied it against Larry French in the fourth. The champions bounced back in the same inning with two runs. The New Yorkers did the same in the fifth, creating a 3 to 3 deadlock. Then the Giants took the whip by going ahead in the eighth when a brilliant catch by Augie Galan staved off more than a lone run. But the Cubs tied it in the same inning, knocked out Schumacher, and climaxed their job against Dick Coffman.

Herman Slips In Mud.

Stainback warmed up for his tenth inning heroics by running for Chuck Klein, whose double in the eighth led to the tying run. Then in his first time at bat Stainback singled to center off Coffman with none gone in the tenth. Hartnett bounced a drive back at Coffman and it caromed off the ex-American leaguer's glove for a single. A wild pitch moved the two runners along, but they held their stations on an infield tap by Demaree. Cavarretta was purposely passed and Hack promptly broke up the party by singling through short on the first pitch, Stainback scoring.

The Cubs almost had a run in the first inning. They lost it somewhere in the mud around third base foul territory. For his opening contribution Schumacher slipped a pass to Galan who was forced at second on Herman's tap to Whitehead. Herman scooted down to second while Klein was being erased on a grounder to Leslie. Then Hartnett singled to left and Herman spread his sails for a flying trip to the plate but as he rounded third he lost his footing and skidded along on the seat of his pants. He tried to scramble back to third but was nipped when Jackson intercepted Moore's return throw and tossed to Bartell.

Two hits and the speed of Galan's feet enabled the champions to burst forth with a run in the third. French started arrangements for this exploit by singling to center with one out. Galan forced French, but to even up for this stole second a moment later. Herman did the rest. He spanked a single into right and Galan sprinted home. Klein bounced to Whitehead for the third out.

Having had no hits during the first three innings the Giants started off in the fourth as if determined to the start and was in the No. 2 niche on the home turn. Wright batted him over the rump, and the Florida Derby winner probably would have taken off if he'd had wings. Coming down the final stretch Brevity gave Bold Venture a stiff argument, but Morton Schwartz's colt had what it took to repulse him. As they whipped over the tape Bold Venture shoved his head out and they needed no camera to decide the finish. The winner's prize of $37,125 will buy Bold Venture enough oats to last him the rest of his life.

Wright Congratulates Hanford.

Young Hanford was grinning from ear to ear when he steered his steaming steed into the paddock for the usual felicitations. An army band played "My Old Kentucky Home," and the crowd shouted hysterically. The tow headed little Wayne Wright, who rode Brevity, was first to congratulate the winner.

"I had the better horse," said Wayne, "but I didn't get the racing breaks. I'm not taking anything from Hanford. He rode a beautiful race. If I hadn't been pushed around at the start it might have been a different story, though."

"Now Bold Venture will win the Preakness," exulted Hanford. "And he won't have Brevity to worry about, because he isn't eligible."

Third Fastest Derby.

Bold Venture went the 1¼ miles route in 2:03 3-5, third fastest Derby ever run. The record of 2:01 4-5 belongs to Twenty Grand. Bold Venture is a chestnut colt by St. Germans-Possible, and racy looking in his proportions rather than a picture horse. St. Germans also sired Twenty Grand.

If Bold Venture's victory was a bit lucky, considering the misfortunes of Brevity, so in a measure is Mr. Schwartz's ownership. When he tired of racing last year and ordered a dispersal sale of his string, Bold Venture was offered among the others. No bidder named a figure which Mr. Schwartz considered the colt was worth. So Bold Venture was leased to Admiral Cary Grayson for part of the 1935 racing season but later was back in the Schwartz colors.

Amidst these vagaries of rough riding, mutuel betting, and unusual happenings, one is likely to forget temporarily mention of the colorful crowd, a crowd such as we knew in days when money didn't matter much just so it was spent. It was here this afternoon. National celebrities from the highest business, political and social world and some from the public enemy zone were in that conglomerate mass indicative of turf democracy.

But let's return to the running of the Derby in which the turf followers—they call them hard boots in this section—are interested.

When Starter Bill Hamilton dispatched the field, the bumping and mishaps previously described occurred. Bold Venture, away tardily, was hustled to keep up by Jocky Hanford, but it was He Did, Santa Anita Derby winner, Bien Joli from the Bradley barn, The Fighter of the Milky Ways stable, Grand Slam, the mudder, and Coldstream, owned by C. B. Shaffer of Chicago which formed the vanguard as the field of 14 sped past the stand after the first quarter mile of their journey.

At this stage, Bold Venture was not in a good position but under vigorous urging was moving up fast. Brevity, however, was back in the pack, where he either had to go around his field or try to skin through on the rail. Jocky Wright, who had piloted Top Row to a rodeo finish triumph in the Santa Anita handicap, He Did in the Santa Anita Derby, and Brevity in the Florida Derby, elected the inner course.

Forced to Slacken Speed.

These tactics proved ill advised. Brevity, carrying more than half of the $472,750 wagered on the Derby, could not get through, and Wright was forced to slacken speed to seek an overland opening.

After one-half mile He Did was on top by two lengths. Coldstream was second, bunched with Grand Slam, Bien Joli was fourth and The Fighter fifth. Bold Venture was eighth with Brevity ninth.

After another quarter mile down the backstretch, Bold Venture, running sturdily, had moved from eighth to first by a length. He Did was second with Indian Broom in third place; Coldstream was fourth and Grand Slam fifth. Brevity, now on the outside and moving up rapidly, was sixth.

Brevity Moves Up.

As they rounded the home stretch turn, a quarter mile from the finish, Bold Venture still was first with Indian Broom second. Brevity, coming on with true courage, was third, He Did fourth, Coldstream fifth and Bien Joli sixth.

As they straightened out for the stretch run Bold Venture still was in front by a length. Brevity, now second was showing that speed which on previous occasions had kept him in the van. Indian Broom was third and He Did fourth. Actually the race was over except so far as Bold Venture and Brevity were concerned. The odds-on favorite was closing so fast it appeared as if it would be a Widener victory, first for the head of the Belmont Park and Hialeah Park tracks.

Bold Venture was on the inside and Brevity on the outside. Here entered another unusual angle to a Derby of angles. Jocky Wright is a left handed whipper. From their positions he was so close to Bold Venture he could not draw the gad. So just when it seemed Brevity, the best colt in the race, would get the nod, Bold Venture, careening on with true courage, received the verdict by a head. The rest of the field, in turf parlance, nowhere.

Gay Apparel of Chicago Women Emblazons Derby

Louisville, Ky., May 2.—[Special.]—Chicago came to the Derby today—and Chicago was never smarter. The feminine members of the Chicago delegation welcomed the sixty-second running of the Kentucky Derby with the fervor of true sportswomen.

And their costumes were in keeping with their enthusiasm. Never have women been more beautifully attired than the feminine fans from Chicago. Apparently Chicagoans, and all the feminine world, put their Derby money on tailored suits and well cut sports ensembles, Derby winners from the fashion standpoint. Prints ran a close second.

Every color was represented. Luggage tan, that new favorite, was seen everywhere combined with gray, blue, beige, and rose, while navy blue, that hardy perennial, also was popular. Black and white, always in evidence, was seen on some of the best dressed spectators, while gray, Chanel red, and a new chocolate brown were noted here and there.

Derby Day Wagers Total $1,269,880

Louisville, Ky., May 2.—The Derby crowd at Churchill Downs wagered a total of $1,269,880 this afternoon. On the Derby $472,750 was wagered. Last year $1,131,076 was bet on Derby day and $412,000 was wagered on the Derby.

The almost unbelievable short odds against Indian Broom were due to the high regard in which his owner, Maj. Austin C. Taylor, millionaire mining man from Vancouver, held him. Thirty minutes before the race was to be run Maj. Taylor stepped up to the betting windows and wagered $25,000 on his colt.

Everybody missed Charley Levy of Chicago, who because of a broken leg, missed his first Derby in many years. So did a lot of guys who were broke after Brevity was beaten. In recent years Charley has been buying tickets back home for many folks who failed to bet on the winner.

There seemed to be almost as many governors in the Derby crowd as there were Kentucky colonels. Sir Bede Clifford, governor of the Bahamas, and Lady Clifford were early arrivals. Gov. Alfred of Texas was in the throng. So were Gov. McNutt of Indiana, Gov. Davey of Ohio, Gov. Kump of West Virginia, and Gov. Harry Chandler of Kentucky.

A lot of Illinois Democrats arrived in time to see the Derby. After their convention adjourned at Springfield yesterday they chartered a special train which brought them to St. Louis and then on to Louisville over the Louisville and Nashville rails.

One group which seemed to be highly prosperous included Swifty Morgan of New York, Joe Benjamin of California, and Senator Jocko Hartford of Chicago. They played all the winners. One-Eyed Connolley had not crashed the gate fifteen minutes before Derby post time.

Helen Morgan arrived early and was betting on Coldstream even before the first race had been run. So many people sought autographs of Jack Dempsey that he got shut out and didn't have a nickle riding while the big race was being run.

Just as soon as the Derby betting windows opened Ed Hughes, secretary of state in Illinois, stepped up and with great confidence bought himself a ticket on the Bradley entry. John Enright of the Union League club tried to buy a ticket on Dick O'Hara but found out he raced in Mr. Joyce's silks some years back.

Joe Bennett, former purchasing agent for the Illinois Central in Chicago, now a coal baron in Kentucky and southern Indiana, fancied the Bradley entry. Those who were in line early betting on Brevity included Babe Ruth, Joe and Mrs. Brown, Gus Van and Hal Roach. Hunt Stromberg, the movie producer, bought his tickets on Indian Broom.

C. K. G. Billings of New York fancied Granville. Col. Bradley bet on his own entry but still thought at post time that Brevity would win. Dale Shaffer, son of C. B. Shaffer, owner of Coldstream, was an early arrival. He did a lot of rooting for Coldstream but didn't wager.

Regulars at all renewals of the Derby who came back again included George H. Bull, president of the Saratoga association; P. A. Markey, William du Pont Jr., Morton L. Schwartz, Herbert Bayard Swope, George [Pete] Bostwick, Charles Denny, Postmaster General James Farley, Col. Marvin H. McIntyre, secretary to President Roosevelt; Senator and Mrs. Alben H. Barkley, Assistant Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, and Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. J. Monroe Johnson.

BOLD VENTURE, in close quarters immediately after the start, began to improve his position fast on the outside after about three-eighths, took an easy lead approaching the final half mile and, holding on with fine courage under strong handling, withstood BREVITY'S bid. Latter, probably best and knocked to his knees within a few strides after the start, had to race wide thereafter, improved his position gradually and, closing resolutely, was wearing down BOLD VENTURE. INDIAN BROOM, badly blocked in the first quarter, raced to a contending position quickly when clear, made a bid entering the stretch and weakened in the last three-sixteenths. COLDSTREAM lost ground while showing speed and failed to keep up. BIEN JOLI was jostled about on the far turn and did not threaten thereafter. HOLL IMAGE began slowly. HE DID had speed for a mile. TEUFEL showed nothing. GOLD SEEKER was outrun. MERRY PETE was bumped when swerving soon after the start THE FIGHTER began well but failed to stay after about three-quarters. GRAND SLAM crossed to inside approaching the first turn and showed speed for about five-eighths. GRANVILLE unseated his rider when in close quarters shortly after the start.

Jocky Wright Says Bumping Beat Brevity

drive to victory. Bien Joli, from the Bradley barn, was the chief sufferer in that brush.

Hanford, a bright faced kid, is 18 years old and comes from Omaha, Neb. His brother, Buddy Hanford, one of the finest riding prospects to come up to the big tracks in many years, was killed in a spill in Maryland three years ago, a few days before the Derby in which he had a mount.

Two months later Mrs. Hanford went from Omaha to Chicago. At Arlington Park in July of that year she introduced her two younger sons, Ira and Carl, to horsemen and urged them to make jockies out of them. Horsemen, remembering the brilliant riding feats of their older brother, Buddy, put them to work. They served their terms as stable boys.

Max Hirsch, trainer of Bold Venture, put Ira under contract.

"He gets pretty close to $5,000 for winning the Derby," Hirsch told friends tonight. "I haven't had time yet to take up that very important item with Mr. Schwartz."

ARMY BOXERS DUE TODAY FOR GOLDEN GLOVES

Olympic Trials Open on Thursday.

of the colleges and universities. From the National A. A. U. tournament in Cleveland will come 32 boys who fought their way to qualifying positions in the largest tournament ever held by the A. A. U. This meet was sponsored by the Cleveland Plain Dealer, an associate of THE TRIBUNE in Golden Gloves history.

From the army, as you have read, will come ten champions. From Chicago, the hub of a Golden Gloves circle which this year embraced 17,000 contestants in 16 states, will come eight champions, and from Detroit will come a team of champions representing three states and led by Milton Shivers, a double winner, for he already holds the Golden Gloves honor.

They'll Get Warm Welcome.

From Boston to Los Angeles and San Francisco; from New Orleans to Detroit and Cleveland; from plains and mountains, from college and slum these boys are coming. They will find stern competition. That they expect. They also will find a warm welcome, a city which appreciates and applauds sportsmanship.

The two nights of the tournament this week are more than preliminaries. The word does not adequately describe the possibilities of the tournament. Champion will meet champion in progress toward a national championship.

Each match will last three rounds of three minutes each, the Olympic route, unless a fast flying fist writes an end sooner. For months all the boxers have thought in terms of this tournament. For it boys have taken leave from work, have begged permission to be excused from their class rooms. They are anxious only to prove they are the best of all the best, to earn the right to fight for Uncle Sam at Berlin.

Two Score Are Champions.

Nearly two score of the participants this week at the International Amphitheater are champions. The other lads reached the semi-finals in the tournaments from which these champions were named. So close will be the competition that you cannot afford to miss at least one night of the bouts at the International Amphitheater.

All tickets are reserved. Many excellent seats remain. Prices are 55 cents, $1.10, and $1.65. If you have not bought your tickets, visit the Tribune Public Service offices at 1 South Dearborn street and in the lobby of Tribune Tower. If you wish call the Golden Gloves ticket manager, Tribune Tower.

Wilson and Brown to Fight.

Among the leading amateurs you will see are Jackie Wilson, Golden Gloves champion and champion of the National A. A. U.; Johnny Brown, Chicago Golden Gloves champion from the Catholic Youth organization, an intercity victor this year over New York's bantamweight king; Joey Church of Batavia, N. Y., who hitchhiked his way to Cleveland and rode back with the featherweight title; Ted Kara of Cleveland, Golden Gloves 126 pound victor in one of the closest series of fights ever held in Chicago; Tommy Pallatin of South Bend, Ind., A. A. U. lightweight ruler, and Pete Lello, Golden Gloves champion; Danny Farrar of Duke university, best of all college welterweights, who may draw Chicago's Chester Rutecki, Golden Gloves titleholder, or Johnny Barbara of South Bend, who qualified in Detroit's tournament.

The list might be extended indefinitly. Jimmie Clark, A. A. U. middleweight, who knocked out five opponents at Cleveland, all in the first round. How about Milton Shivers, the Golden Gloves middleweight, a knockerout with a record to equal Clark's?

Heavyweights Are Rugged.

Ray Matulewicz of Duke, one of the best of 175 pound fighters. What will happen when he meets Carl Vinciquerra of Cleveland, or the army champion? Tom Pontecarvo of Western Maryland, the college champion; Jim Brown 220 pounder from Syracuse; Jock Wooford of Los Angeles, winner of a hundred bouts on the coast. There are other heavies, all worthy of victory where only one can win.

The boys arrive today, tomorrow, and Tuesday. They will finish training at the Catholic Youth organization gymnasium and at Trafton's gymnasium. Thursday afternoon they weigh in. Thursday night they start the battle for the survival of the fittest.

FIRST TIME PAST CLUBHOUSE IN 62D KENTUCKY DERBY—Coldstream, No. 15, leads momentarily as the field of 14 gallops past the thousands massed in the stands at Churchill Downs. At this stage, near the quarter mile mark, Bold Venture was eighth, but by the time the half mile was reached the Morton L. Schwartz representative was in front, never to be headed, although Brevity, the favorite, almost snatched victory in the thrilling stretch drive. Bold Venture paid $43 for $2, the largest price on a Derby winner since Exterminator won in 1918.

Both Bill Walker, on the mound for the Cards, and Fred Frankhouse, pitching for Brooklyn, allowed only six hits. It was the second time in as many games that the Dodgers had failed to score. They now have completed 23 scoreless innings. Score:

PIRATES, 6; BEES, 1.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 2. — (AP) — Johnny Tising, erstwhile American association strikeout king, combined careful nine hit pitching with timely Pirate hitting to open his major league career with a 6 to 1 victory over the Boston Bees, today.

Tising fanned only six opposing batsmen, but stayed out of trouble over the entire route.

Gus Suhr clouted a triple to score two Pirate runs in the first inning and a third counted on Bill Urbanski's error. Young Bill Brubaker tripled home two more runs in the eighth to clinch today's victory. Wally Berger hit a homer for the Bees. Score:

Cincinnati, O., May 2.—(AP)—Bucky Walter, infielder who turned pitcher, held Cincinnati to eight hits today and batted in the winning run to give Philadelphia a 4 to 3 victory and even the two game series.

The Phillies batted Al Hollingsworth, the Reds' leading pitcher, from the mound to score all their runs in the sixth after Walter had permitted Cincinnati to score all of theirs in an unusual third inning.

Walter struck out three Reds in the third, but between the first and second strikeouts permitted two walks, three singles, and a double to give the Reds their runs. Score:

Whitehead to Open Athletic Series Today

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

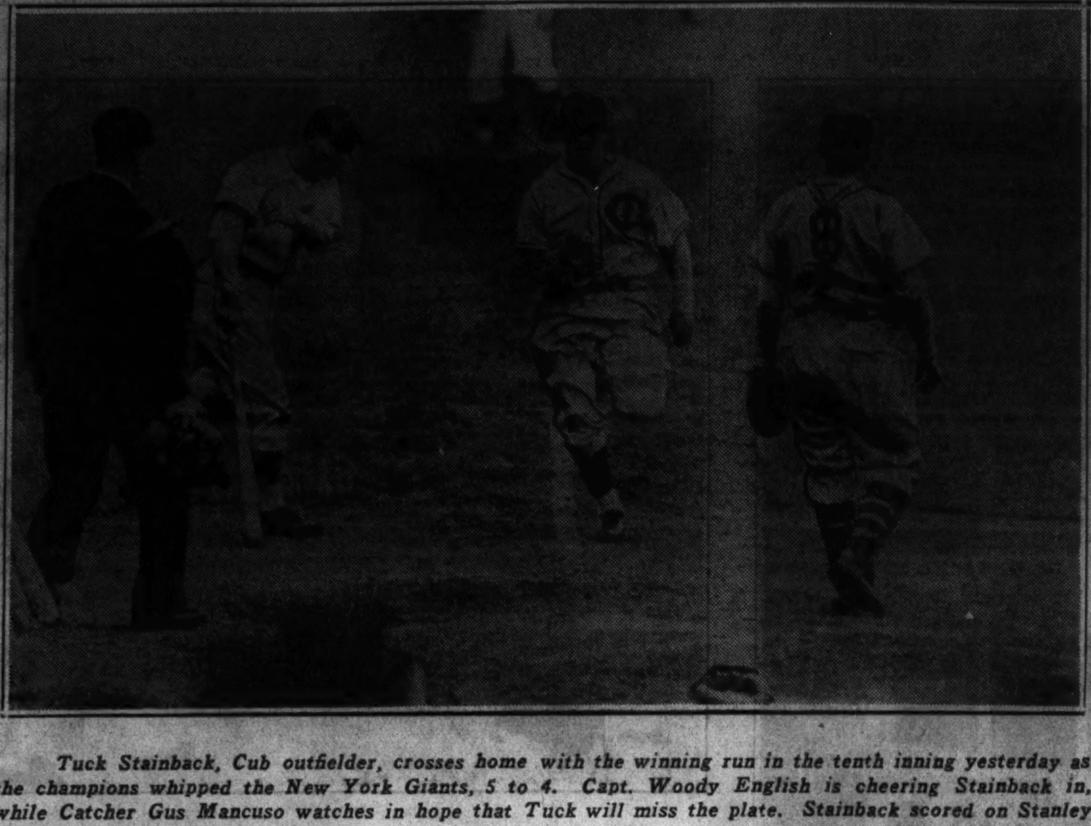
New York, May 2.—John Whitehead of the White Sox, will make his sixth start of the season in Philadelphia tomorrow. He will be seeking his second victory. He has failed to survive the first inning in his last two starts.

The fact that Dixie Walker married Miss Estelle Shea of New York, as soon as possible after learning he'd been sold to the White Sox, had nothing to do with his not being placed in the lineup today. Manager Jimmy Dykes had announced Dixie would not play before he heard of the nuptial. Dykes plans to send Walker to center tomorrow and switch Kreevich to left. Haas will remain in right.

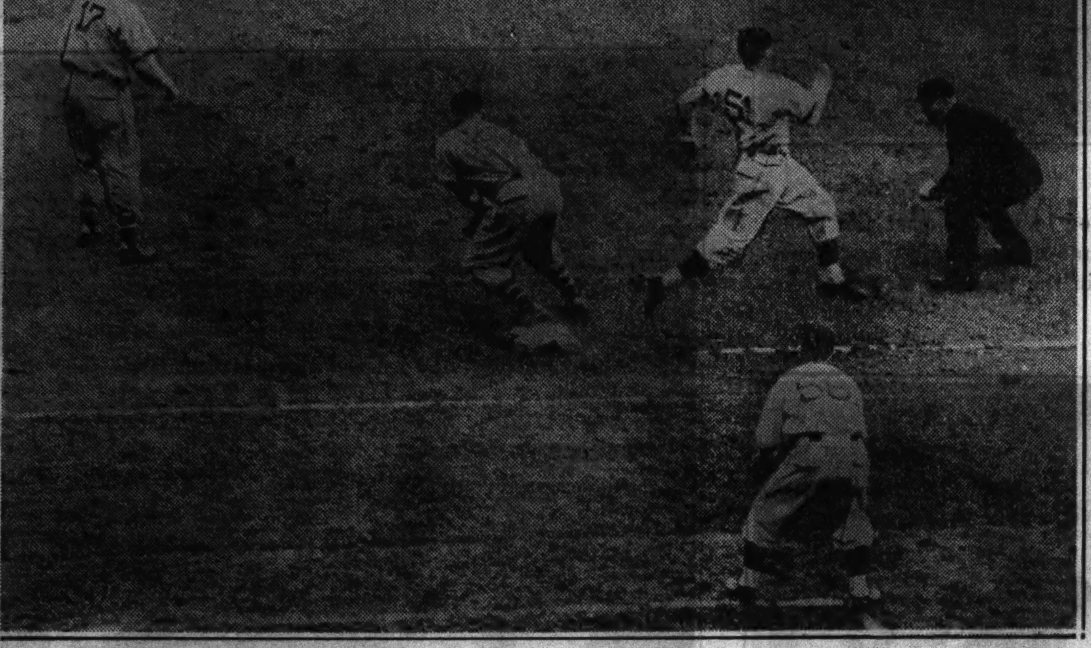
Most of the 25,000 customers gave Mike Kreevich a hand for his swell catch of Bill Dickey's liner with two on and two out in the first inning.

The Yankees made seven runs in their two games with the White Sox, and Frank Crosetti, No. 8 man in the New York batting order, drove in the last six of them.

OVERTIME, BUT IT WAS WORTH IT



Tuck Stainback, Cub outfielder, crosses home with the winning run in the tenth inning yesterday as the champions whipped the New York Giants, 5 to 4. Capt. Woody English is cheering Stainback in, while Catcher Gus Mancuso watches in hope that Tuck will miss the plate. Stainback scored on Stanley Hack's single with the bases full.



The Giants' attempt for a double play failed in the third inning when Augie Galan grounded to First Baseman Sam Leslie of the Giants yesterday and Leslie threw to Shortstop Dick Bartell to force Larry French. Bartell relayed the ball back to Leslie, but the speedy Galan was there ahead of the ball. Pitcher Hal Schumacher had come over to cover first, but let Leslie do it. The Cub coach is Red Corriden and the umpire Bill Klem.

Sox Win, 6-4, Over Yanks on Phelps' Double

in the ninth Gehrig singled to center. Then the game and losing streak ended when Dickey hit into a double play.

Sox Take Lead.

At the end of the first three innings, the Sox were leading 2 to 0 on two runs scored by Stumpf, who was passed in the first and third innings and driven in in each instance by Bonura. In their first three innings, the Yankees' offensive consisted of an awarded interference single by Johnson in the third.

Stumpf's first pass came after Ruffing had tossed out Kreevich. He went to third on Haas' single to right, then scored on Bonura's long fly to Johnson. Appling singled to center and Haas could have made third easily had he kept running. However, Mule paused at second, then started running again. He was sunk, Chapman to Rolfe.

Stumpf's second pass came after Kreevich had opened the third with a fly to Johnson. He went to second on Haas' roller to Gehrig and scored on Bonura's single to left. Appling's second hit was a double to left on which Bonura stopped at third. The inning ended with Piet's fly to Chapman.

Yanks Take Lead.

In the latter half of the third, Ruffing was called out on strikes and Rolfe walked. Johnson then got credit for the first hit off Stratton when his grounder hit Rolfe for the second out. Appling threw out Selkirk.

The Sox were held to a single socked by Stratton in the fourth. Then came the home fourth and the grabbing of the lead on Crosetti's homer after the side should have been retired. Dickey walked with one out and stopped at second when Chapman singled to left for the first legitimate hit off Stratton. Lazzeri shot a cinch double play grounder to Appling and as usual in such an emergency Luke juggled the ball. He recovered in time barely to force the rapid Chapman at second, Dickey stopping at second. Before he could recover from his chagrin over the continuation of the clown theme, Stratton pitched the homer to Crosetti, who scored behind Dickey and Lazzeri. It was Frankie's first home run of the year. Ruffing filed to Haas.

Then The Tie.

Appling's further confusion helped the Yanks to their fourth run after two were out in the sixth. Gehrig and Dickey were infield victims but Chapman doubled to left. Lazzeri walked. Crosetti next sent a pop to short left center. Appling shooed Stumpf and Kreevich off the play, then quit on his try for the catch. Chapman scored and Lazzeri pulled up at third on the spurious single. Crosetti stole second but Ruffing bounced to Bonura.

Here's the way the Sox tied the score in the seventh. Radcliff batted for Stratton and singled to right. He stopped at second on Kreevich's single to right. Rip and Mike moved up on Stumpf's sacrifice and came home with the tying runs when Haas shot the ball past Gehrig into right field. Gehrig did not get his hands on the ball, but the official scorer, with others, figured he should have, and Lou was given an error.

Then came the aforesaid victory splurge in the eighth.

What a Finish!

Aron, Halper Top Marigold Boxing Card

Aron, 1932 sectional Golden Gloves flyweight champion, winner of the featherweight sectional crown the following year, meets Lou Halper of Newark, N. J., in a ten round main bout tomorrow at Marigold Gardens. He has had 28 matches in his two year pro campaign, winning 25, losing two and boxing a draw.

The 20 year old boxer scored his best accomplishment March 16 at Marigold by stopping Pete Nebo in five rounds. Other prominent victims include George Engel, whom he beat Jan. 20; Puggy Weinert, Nov. 18; Billy Miller, Dec. 2, and Aubrey Martin, who was beaten Sept. 30.

Two grand old men of the prize ring—Tony Canzoneri, who has been boxing ten years, and Jimmy McLarnin, entering his eleventh as a boxer—will meet Friday in a ten round bout at Madison Square Garden in New York.

Both these veteran boxers are past their prime and each is financially independent. They are believed to possess about a million dollars in cash between them. In addition Canzoneri owns a large farm near Marlboro, N. Y., and an exclusive haberdashery business near Broadway in New York City. Jimmy holds title to a soap factory in Oakland, Cal., real estate in various parts of the country, and valuable fishing grounds in Alaska.

Then why do they continue to ply their profession?

To add to their financial resources, of course, but that is not the chief reason. Their main cause appears to be a desire to earn a welterweight title bout with Champion Barney Ross. Ross has defeated Canzoneri on two previous occasions, both times with the lightweight crown at stake, and McLarnin in two of three 147 pound championship battles. Canzoneri, who regained the 135 pound throne after Ross abdicated, still thinks he is a better man than Barney. So does McLarnin. Hence their burning desire to acquire a return bout.

John Henry Lewis cut short a tour in this section and returned to his home in Phoenix, Ariz., giving as his excuse a hand injury sustained while defeating Izzy Singer of New York at the Chicago arena April 22. This match grossed less than $1,500 and a prior battle at Buffalo, N. Y., with George Nichols, which was called a draw, attracted less than $1,000.

Billy Treest, Batavia, Ill., heavyweight youngster, tomorrow expects to undergo an operation for the removal of a nasal obstruction. . . . Bud Saltis, former Chicago middleweight challenger, created a stir in the loop recently by slugging a pedestrian who struck him for no apparent reason.

Vosmik Leads Attack with Two Homers.

Boston, Mass., May 2.—(AP)—The Cleveland Indians ended their four game losing streak and Boston's string of four victories today by defeating the Red Sox, 7 to 3. Rallying in the eighth, the Indians battered five Boston hurlers for six runs in the last two innings.

Jos Vosmik, Cleveland left fielder, who turned in a near-perfect day with two home runs and two singles in five trips to the plate, led the attack.

With Cleveland trailing, 2 to 1, as the game went into the eighth, Earl Averill began the rally by lifting a ball over the left field fence. When Harold Trosky, next up, singled, Jimmy Henry relieved Fritz Ostermueller on the Boston mound. Then Vosmik hit Henry's offering into the bleachers for his second home run, scoring Trosky. Vosmik's first homer was in the fourth inning. The Indians scored three more runs in the ninth: Score:

Mills to Open Season Today Against Coals

The Mills baseball team officially will open the Chicago semi-pro baseball season this afternoon against the Spencer Coals in a double-header at Mills stadium, Kilpatrick and Lake streets. The first game will start at 1:30 p. m.

The only other game in which a member team of the Chicago league will take part, is the Duffy Florals contest with the Colored All-Stars at East Chicago, Ind.

The Mills have Hippo Vaughn, Bill Holabird, Capt. Elmer Olson, Gordon McNaughton, and Swede Erickson, ready to take the mound. All except Erickson, already have proved themselves in semi-pro company. Erickson, however, is regarded as an outstanding prospect.

The Spencers, one of the strongest clubs in the Chicago league are forced to go on the road at present due to the resodding of their home park. Manager Nate Shyer, in today's contest, plans to use Pete Beam and Al Macek, Marvin Carlson or Jake Sommerfield as starting pitchers with Joe Witry and Harry Lucas or Paul Richards behind the plate.

New faces in the lineups of the teams will include George Chervinko, third baseman and Clarence Finucane, catcher in Mills regalia while Tommy Marshall, first baseman and Joe Desiderato, third baseman will wear Spencer uniforms for the first time.

CUBS TRIUMPH OVER GIANTS IN 10TH INNING, 5-4

Hack Drives In Stainback to End Game.

catch up on themselves. French got them under control before they could get across more than the tying run. Moore opened with a single to right and stopped at third on Whitehead's double to right center. Ott filed to Klein on the first pitch, Moore scoring and Whitehead taking third. Leiber then popped to English and Hack threw out Leslie.

Cubs Take Lead.

The fourth in which the Cubs picked up two runs for a temporary lead, started with Hartnett doubling into the right field corner. Demaree singled to right, but Gabby doesn't move with much speed so stopped at third. Cavarretta bounced a single past Bartell who looked as if he were nailed to the spot he was standing on, Hartnett scoring. On Hack's bunt Demaree was forced at third. English bounced to Schumacher, whose toss to Bartell forced Hack but in trying for a double play Bartell dropped the ball and Cavarretta rode home on the error. French forced English to end the inning.

French was so wabbly in the fifth that the first four Giants reached base, but even with this flying start only two scored, knotting the count at 3 apiece. Jackson singled, Mancuso walked and Bartell filled the bags on a scratch hit to Hack. A free ticket to Schumacher forced Jackson to register. Mancuso counted while Schumacher was being forced on Moore's grounder to Herman. The best Whitehead could furnish was a pop to Herman and Ott was set down on a fly to Galan.

The Giants were after French again in the sixth. Singles were produced by Jackson and Mancuso after two were out and Bartell fouled to Cavarretta who reached over the grand stand rail to make the catch. The seventh was even more strenuous for the Cub southpaw. With one out he hit Moore on the right shoulder and Whitehead followed with a double, Moore halting at third. The menacing Mr. Ott was fanned. Leiber was purposely passed, loading the bases and the strategy worked out satisfactorily when Leslie hoisted to Galan.

Galan Makes Leaping Catch.

The run that put the New Yorkers in the lead for a few minutes in the eighth started with Jackson's third single. Mancuso bunted and this was where French blundered. He tried to force Jackson at second but the throw was faulty. Bartell sacrificed the runners to second and third. Schumacher hammered a long drive to left center and Galan, leaping at the end of a sprint, staged the prize catch of the season, locally speaking. Jackson scored on the play. Moore's tall fly to Klein concluded the inning.

Recovery of the tying run in the Cub eighth started with Klein's double to right. Stainback ran for him and went to third on Hartnett's bunt. Demaree joined the revolt by doubling, Stainback scoring. Schumacher's troubles piled up when he plunked Cavarretta and gave a pass to Hack, filling the sacks. Coffman was rushed in to pitch to English and had to throw only one ball to get out of the jam. English slapped it back to Coffman and a double play was perpetrated by way of the plate.

Only one hit was produced off French in the ninth but it was enough to bring about his banishment. The hit was a bunt by Whitehead who took second on Ott's sacrifice. Leiber was presented with another intentional pass. After Leslie had forced Leiber, Manager Grimm decided French wasn't the man to pitch to Jackson who had previously harvested three hits. Root stepped in and dispatched Jackson on strikes. Root also kept them in check in the tenth.

WARNEKE TO PITCH

The Phillies will have Curt Davis on the mound today when they open a three game series at Wrigley field. Just to make sure that the Cub pitching job will be in good hands, Manager Grimm has nominated Lon Warneke.

Bill Jurges, member of the ailing squad reported his right arm greatly improved after one day of rest, but the eminent Doc Andrew Lotshaw says the regular shortstop will not be able to resume work inside of a week.

Augie Galan contributed a life saving catch but experienced another miserable day at bat. Hits were plentiful, but his only contribution was a single.

CASTERS READY TO OPEN TOURNEY AT SHOW TODAY

Tribune Offers 13 Trophies to Winners.

Chicagoland casters are in readiness for the annual casting tournament sponsored by THE TRIBUNE which opens tomorrow night at the National Boat and Sports show at Navy pier. The show itself opens at 1 o'clock this afternoon, but no casting competition will be held until tomorrow night.

Thirteen silver trophies will be awarded during the week to the winning casters in the various classifications. The tournament is being held in coöperation with the three Chicago casting clubs and the National Association of Scientific Angling clubs. H. J. Butler of the Shedd aquarium will be the official in charge, assisted by Grove Walters, local casting expert and fishing lecturer.

Each Club Has Night.

Each of the three local clubs will have one night of competition among themselves, with the three high scorers from each club competing against the three men who score highest in the fishermen's event for the Chicagoland championship.

The Lincoln Park Casting club has entered 26 casters to compete in their intra-club event tmorrow night. They follow:

G. B. Almy, Bill Anderson, C. F. Riley, A. J. Naugle, Joseph Nystrom, Joseph Nystrom Jr., Harold Knapp, Robert Hamilton, Harry Leininger, Clarence Sigwalt, A. E. Grunert, Eric H. Carlson, Adolph Goldberg, Charles Stuart, J. L. Caplinger, A. C. Churchill, D. W. Hartzell, C. L. Wheeler, Dr. M. C. Purcell, J. Bonnel, Ernest Lambert, Dr. W. H. Becker, F. P. Steinhauer, Dr. L. G. Maison, C. L. Cooper, and Walter Brewer.

Brewer will enter the competition as one of the favorites. He defeated all of his teammates last year at the pier to win the Lincoln park title, then went on to place third in the final compeition for the Chicagoland title. He scored a 98 to win his club event and a 97 in the final competition.

Casters Will Get Instruction.

Grove Walters will be at the pier each afternoon and night to instruct casters. There is no charge for instructions.

Entries are still being accepted for the fishermen's event, as well as for the women's and boys' and girls' competition. Entries should be sent to the outdoor editor, CHICAGO TRIBUNE. There is no charge for entering any of the events. All entrants will be admitted free to the boat and sports show.

Any fishermen who are not affiliated with a Chicago casting club are welcome to use the facilities of any of these clubs today, according to the cub officers. The Chicago Fly Casting club meets in Garfield park, the Illinois Casting club in Washington park, and the Lincoln Casting club in Lincoln park. Men or women who wish to get in their final practice for the tournament may do so at any of these three clubs after 10 o'clock this morning.

Chicagoans who are unable to decide on where to go for their summer vacations will be able to get many suggestions at the boat and sports show. Many of the fishing resorts of Wisconsin, Michigan, Minnesota, Canada, and other districts will be represented, as will most of the state conservation departments.

One of the features today will be the attempt of Andy Gantner, speedboat driver, to set a new Milwaukee to Chicago water record. The boat will be refueled by plane off Kenosha, Wis.

Fishing Season in Wisconsin to Open on May 15

BY BOB BECKER.

Only a few days more and the fishermen in Wisconsin will begin to unlimber their tackle. The Wisconsin law flashes the "go" signal for angling, starting May 15 of this for angling, starting May 15. On that date the trout fishermen may try to outwit the trout and the lake fishermen also can go after wall-eyes, muskies, pickerel, and other game fish except black bass. May 15 also is the date of the big white bass carnival at Oshkosh, Wis., a fishing party that should interest many fishermen. Thus the middle of May is important on the Wisconsin fisherman's calendar.

There are several trout streams not too far from Illinois that ought to give a trout fisherman some fun. We have in mind the Pine river between Poysippi and Saxeville, for brown trout especially. Also the streams that we fished above Briggsville, Wis. Briggsville is just a few minutes' ride above Portage. We drive to this region from our home in about 4 hours.

Of the streams we fished we liked the Oxford the best. You can fly fish the Oxford. It's one of those trout streams that sometimes meanders through open meadows making it easy to cast a fly. The big Roche-a-crie is another worth fishing. Of course, these trout waters northeast of Briggsville and near Friendship, Wis., are not to be compared with some of our larger Wisconsin brook and rainbow streams in the northern part of the state. But one can usually pick up a mess of brooks or browns up there, and the country is not very far from northern Illinois.

Just as soon as conditions are favorable following the opening date we are going to float down the Wisconsin river to see if we can connect with some of the wall-eyes in that stream. There are several one day fishing trips possible in the Briggsville-Portage territory—below the Dells. We have had our eyes on that stretch of water for some time since. There are some dandy wall-eyed pike holes in the river and the scenery is beautiful.

Exposition Opens Tuesday at Amphitheater.

Six thousand athletes representing more than 100 organizations will compete during the exposition of youth at the International amphitheater for six days starting Tuesday night. The list of sports includes basketball, volley ball, wrestling, badminton, archery, track, weight lifting, fencing, and gymnastics. Boxing emphasizes the National Golden Gloves Olympic tryout on Thursday and Friday sponsored by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Fifty thousand square feet of space has been set aside on the second floor of the building in which is being placed two basketball courts, two volley ball courts, a wrestling ring, badminton court, an archery range, and playroom for checkers, chess, and other table games.

Organizations Have Night.

Each evening the floor will be taken over by such organizations as the Catholic Youth Organization, B'nai B'rith, Chicago Boys' clubs settlements, Chicago Park system, public schools and Y. M. C. As. Harry Berz, assistant state director of the National Youth administration, in charge of the exposition, claims it will be the greatest athletic program ever held in one building during a six day period.

The central states Olympic tryouts in weight lifting, to be held next Sunday afternoon, will bring together the champions from Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, and Iowa. Saturday afternoon will be turned over to the novice committee of the A. A. U. for the holding of a track meet claimed to be the largest ever held indoors. According to Nick Malloy, chairman of the committee, more than 3,000 will take part.

SCOUTS STUDY ENGINEERING AND HISTORY ON HIKE

Boys Follow Course of Old Canal.

BY BOB BECKER.

Starting at the little village of Romeo, Ill., a few miles below Lemont, 17 Boy Scouts from Oak Park and vicinity yesterday hiked down the Illinois and Michigan canal, thereby combining the healthful sport of cross-country walking, bird study and interesting exploration of another part of the historic old canal that helped build Chicago after the big fire.

It was the third Saturday morning hike sponsored by THE TRIBUNE to investigate the broad, picturesque valley in which the Des Plaines river, the Illinois and Michigan canal and the more modern drainage and ship canal are located. Our route yesterday called for about seven and a half miles of walking and included the huge locks of the drainage and ship canal so that the Scouts could see this interesting engineering project.

Romeo Is a Quiet Spot.

The village of Romeo makes an ideal start for the hike into Lockport and beyond to the outskirts of Joliet. The old Illinois and Michigan canal is beautiful at Romeo because the banks of the waterway are well groomed and there are many trees now fresh and green with their spring foliage bending over the rocky walls that confine the historic waterway.

After a short pause at Romeo we led the party to the old towpath along the canal and squared away for the hike to Lockport. It's about a four mile walk to that city, once known as Runyontown. Arriving at Lockport around noon the party took time out for lunch along the canal and there the Scouts heard the story of Lockport; how the banks of the canal once were lined with docks and warehouses, how the old waterway boomed Lockport, and how barges made in that city carried rock to rebuild Chicago after the fire.

After the luncheon hour we inspected the crumbling ruins of the locks just out of Lockport.

Inspect Canal Locks.

From this lock the Scouts hiked across the rock strewn valley about a half mile to the locks of the drainage and ship canal so that they might see the contrast between the old small I. and M. locks and the modern arrangement of the canal now in use. E. P. Callahan, lockmaster, played host to the Scouts and showed them how powerful machinery is used to operate the locks.

WOODLANDER IS VICTOR IN $1,500 AURORA HANDICAP

Favorites Finally Come Through.

The public choices, which had been none too successful in the opening program of the Illinois season, began to find the winner's circle yesterday as the Aurora turf meeting moved into its second day.

With a larger crowd—estimated at 8,000—on hand than appeared opening day, three of the first six winners were well backed. Butsey Hernandez scored a double when his 5 year old Woodlander won the $1,500 Aurora handicap at a mile and seventy yards, paying $8.80, and his 6 year old Indiantown scored a nose decision in the fifth race at six furlongs.

Lonmeg Scores by 5 Lengths.

Another short priced winner was the Mayfield stable's Lonmeg, which came from behind in the stretch to gallop to a five length victory in the third race at six furlongs.

Pat C. made all the early pace in the handicap, under urging from Understand, but the pair ran each other into the ground by the time the field of seven had reached the stretch. Woodlander came wide into the stretch, and once he began to cut down the leaders he did not leave the result in doubt.

Macks Pal Returns $21.60.

The same parade of long shot winners that prevailed on opening day began yesterday's program when Charles Weber's Macks Pal, which once figured in the largest daily double ever paid at Aurora, won the five and one-half furlong first race to pay $21.60.

Rex Regent, which carried the silks of H. H. Chopin to victory in the second, was well supported, returning $10.40 after he had run a mile in 1:50 2-5. The race was the first over the mile distance which has been run at Aurora since 1929.

Lonmeg paid $9.00 to win the six furlong third, and the winning daily double combination of Rex Regent and Lonmeg returned $119.60.

It's Shady Gate by Nose.

Close finishes marked the fourth and fifth races. In the fourth, at a mile and a sixteenth, Frank Abbate's Shady Gate triumphed by a nose over Baboo, with Miss Flip third. The winner returned $17.60. In the fifth, at six furlongs, Indiantown had a nose the better of Odd Blue, with Linden Tree third. Indiantown paid $5.60.

The racing strip was heavy, due to the rains of the last few days, but it is expected to be fast tomorrow.

MICHIGAN GOLF TEAM DEFEATS OHIO STATE, 16-2

Columbus, O., May 2.—[Special.]—Rain halted two of the events scheduled on the Ohio State campus today when the Ohio-Michigan tennis match and the Notre Dame-Ohio baseball game were washed out by showers. The Ohio-Michigan golf match was completed.

The Wolverines defeated the Buckeyes on the links, 16 to 2, with Charley Koscis leading the way.

"Weak" Major League Clubs Show Power Review of Week's Events in Sports

Preliminary skirmishing in the major leagues over, teams of both circuits started out last week on their first sectional invasions with results that were more or less surprising. Clubs figured to drop to or near the bottom and to stay there after the first week or so of the season assumed a perverse attitude and continued to make a fight as though they intended to have a voice in the settlement of championships.

In the National league, the Boston Bees, almost unanimously elected to spend the entire season in eighth place, opened its invasion of the west with three consecutive victories and was still bobbing about near the top of the second division. The Cincinnati Reds, considered only slightly better than the Bees, were still in the first flight.

In the American league Washington, which might have been battling for the cellar position without surprising any one, met the invasion of the western clubs with better than .500 baseball. On the other hand, Chicago's White Sox, who might have been considered a contender for a first division berth, spun through consecutive defeats, and dropped perilously near last place.

Sox Move Back Plate.

To stop the skidding Sox officials took two steps. First they started remodeling the playing field at Comiskey park to make home run hitting by visiting clubs a little more difficult. Two years ago, in an effort to help Al Simmons' batting, the Sox had moved the plate fourteen feet nearer the fences, with the idea that Simmons would drop innumerable long flies into the stands for home runs. Simmons did nothing of the kind; instead he dropped to a new low batting average, and the opposing batters took full advantage of the shortened field to fatten their batting averages. With Simmons gone, the plate will return to its original spot, making right and left field foul lines 352 feet long, center field fence 436 feet away from home plate.

Secondly, the Sox began bolstering their lineup by buying Dixie Walker, an outfielder, from the New York Yankees for a price reported to be $25,000.

While the Sox were having their troubles, Detroit's Tigers, on the trail of their third pennant in a row, took two severe jolts. Off to a slow start, they had just started winning regularly when they reached Washington. On Wednesday a Senator outfielder named Jake Powell hit a grounder to the infield, tore toward first in an effort to beat the throw to Hank Greenberg, the Tigers' star first baseman. The throw was wide. As Greenberg reached for the ball, Powell collided with him, knocked him to the ground, twisting his left arm. Greenberg arose with a fractured left wrist.

Bruise Puts Cochrane Out.

Next day, Powell, at bat this time, hit a foul ball which struck Manager Mickey Cochrane, Tigers' first string catcher, on the leg, bruised it so severely that Cochrane will be out of the game for several days. Then in the ninth inning, Powell drove out a single, won the game for the Senators.

With limited reserves, the Tigers immediately made a deal with the St. Louis Browns, giving cash and Pitcher Elon Hogsett for First Baseman Burns, in an effort to plug the infield gap caused by Greenberg's injuries.

Ill luck also beset the Cleveland Indians, whose chances for two consecutive years have been ruined by sickness and injury. On Friday, Bruce Campbell, capable outfielder, was taken to a Boston hospital suffering from a recurrence of meningitis, a disease which last year invalided him for the greater part of the season.

Minors Protest Radio.

While defeats and injuries were worrying major league clubs, curtailed attendance was bothering minor league owners. On Monday through their president, W. G. Bramham, the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs appealed to Commissioner K. M. Landis to prohibit broadcasting of major league games on the grounds that minor league fans remained away from games to listen to major league broadcasts. Landis ordered all clubs, major and minor, to make no further commitments with radio stations, although they may continue to broadcast as at present.

The week's record of games won and lost in the major leagues:

Shikat Loses Title; Suit Loses Interest.

His claim to the world's heavyweight wrestling championship having been snatched from him by Ali Baba, a Persian, there was little interest in the case of Dick Shikat of Germany when it came up for a hearing in the federal district court at Columbus last Monday. Joe Alvarez, who claims he is Shikat's manager, and who was suing to get control of Shikat's earnings, didn't even attend court.

Consequently Judge Mell G. Underwood continued the case until May 12 and gave Shikat permission to fill all of his engagements in the meantime.

In doing so, he also cracked the record for one kilometer at 159.099.

GOLF SCHOOL TO STRESS PUTTING IN FINAL LESSON

Tribune Classes Set a Record.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Entering the third and final week of its curriculum, the fourth annual free golf school of THE TRIBUNE finds itself possessor of a record for group instruction in any sport, having given a total of 55,200 lessons during its first two weeks.

No other instructional plan in any sport where the individual is taught its fundamentals can point to such a total, particularly in such a short space of time. On April 21, the first night of the school, 10,000 women and girls, undaunted by temperatures in the low thirties, attended the classes on the courses of the Chicago park district and the Chicago Daily Fee Golf association. On April 23, a class of men and boys, augmented by several hundred women students who had missed the first lesson, reached a total of 16,200.

Second Lesson Sets Record.

The second lesson last week attracted a new weekly high mark in attendance for the four year history of the school, a total of 29,000. The class for women and girls brought out 12,000 for the lessons by P. G. A. professionals on Tuesday, and for the lesson for men and boys on Thursday the turnout reached 17,000. Practically all lessons have been given in the face of threatening weather.

Professionals in charge of the lessons have made no effort to make 70 shooters out of their pupils in one night. Aware that any sound golf game is based on the simple rudiments, they have concentrated on fundamentals, as have the tournament stars who have aided them with exhibitions. Although a majority of the classes have been composed of beginners, a number of golfers who have played the game previously have praised the school for ironing out kinks in their play by gettiing them back to the fundamentals.

Will Name Prize Pupils.

The first two lessons have concentrated on grip, stance, pivot, and backswing. The final lesson this week will stress the finish of the swing from its top, the short irons, and the putter. In addition, the four prize students in each division at each course will be named by their respective teachers for the graduating exercises to be held next week at a central location to be announced later.

The man, boy, woman, and girl named at each course this week will be eligible for one of a list of prizes to be awarded on the final night, which also will witness an exhibition by such stars of the game as Lawson Little, Jimmy Thomson, Horton Smith, Tommy Armour, Harry Cooper, Johnny Revolta, Frank Walsh, Ky Laffoon, Dick Metz, Orville White, and Tony Penna.

Among the prizes will be two playing memberships, one for the boy winner, and one for the best girl, at Olympia Fields, made possible through the efforts of Jerry Glynn, professional in charge at the big south side club.

Men to Meet Wednesday.

This week's class for women and girls will be held Tuesday night, and for men and boys on Wednesday night. The latter class, originally scheduled for Thursday, has been moved up because of the opening on Thursday of the National Golden Gloves tournament at the International amphitheater.

All pupils are asked to be present by 7 o'clock each night, since the third and last lesson will start promptly at 7:15 o'clock.

The list of courses where lessons will be given, together with the names of the teachers in charge, follow:

Motor Gypsies Ready to Take to Open Road

BY HAL FOUST.

The first squadron of tourist trailers will cruise out of Chicago this month, initiating a new form of vacation motor travel. The plan makes trailer travel available to persons who do not wish to purchase a trailer, and who may not own even an automobile.

Here is the way the method works: You select one of several cross-country tours. The day before the start a new streamlined trailer is parked at your door. You load your wardrobe into lockers, stow your cameras, fishing tackle, and other outdoor equipment.

The next morning you lock your home and, free of suitcases, board your trailer, turn on the radio, lean back on upholstery and relax. A 1936 sedan, with competent chauffeur, couples onto your trailer, and you are off for the trip of your choice free of all cares of car operation, meals, and sleeping accommodation en route.

Onto the Open Road.

Your trailer joins up with others, and the squadron moves to the open highway. A kitchen trailer brings up the rear to serve those members of the squadron who are leaving even cooking cares behind.

This new form of motor travel is sponsored by the Chicago Motor club, which reports a growing popularity of trailer cruising. According to Bert Vanderwarf, touring manager, there are now more than 150,000 trailers less than three years old. He estimates that there will be more than 500,000 American men, women, and children spending 1936 vacations in privately owned trailers.

8 Days to 9 Weeks.

Private ownership of a trailer, which may be used for only a few weeks out of the year, has represented an investment too large for many persons who, nevertheless, are eager to try the gypsy life.

Tours being offered under the C. M. C. plan vary between eight days and nine weeks. Two eight day trips have for their goals South Dakota's Black Hills, and Colorado's Rocky Mountain National park. Another trip goes to Wyoming to a dude ranch and includes an optional side trip to Yellowstone National park. One two week tour goes east by way of Niagara falls, Montreal, and Quebec and returns through Boston and New York. A four week tour travels to California with stops across the Mexican border. Seven and nine week trips take vacationists to the northwest, and then by steamer to Alaska.

OWENS WINS FOUR EVENTS AS OHIO BEATS MICHIGAN

Columbus, O., May 2.—[Special.]—Capt. Jesse Owens and his Ohio State track teammates today administered a 72½ to 53½ defeat to Michigan and thus became the second Buckeye squad in history to whip the Wolverines in track.

Owens, making his first out door appearance of the season before an Ohio State crowd, turned in a time of 9.4 seconds to equal the world record in the 100 yard dash, despite a muddy track.

Owens also coasted to victory in the 220 yard dash, the 220 low hurdles, and the broad jump to win his usual four events.

WISCONSIN WINS.

Madison, Wis., May 2.—[Special.]—One Camp Randall record was smashed, seven meet records were established and another was tied as the University of Wisconsin track team defeated Iowa and Northwestern this afternoon in their annual triangular meet.

Wisconsin scored 81½ points, Iowa was second with 53, and Northwestern was third with 28½ points. The meet was run in weather so cold that many athletes were forced to compete in sweat clothes.

INDIANA BEATS ILLINOIS.

Bloomington, Ind., May 2.—[Special.]—Indiana University opened its Big Ten outdoor track season here this afternoon by defeating Illinois, 85 to 46.

Despite a leg injury, Bob Grieve, Illinois dash star, won the 100 yard dash but did not compete in any other events. Bob Collier, Indiana speedster, set a new stadium record of 21.2 seconds in the 220 yard dash, beating the former mark of :21.3 held by Cave of Illinois.

Dan Caldemeyer of Indiana equaled the stadium mark of :14.6 held by Hatfield, former Indiana star in the 120 yard high hurdles.

VOICE OF TRAFIC

PASSING STREET CAR.

Chicago, April 20.—I wish to commend A. C. Johnson for inquiring why automobiles cannot pass a street car on the left. This law is one of the most insipid of all the many asinine laws in Chicago. I have never heard of any one being arrested for passing on the left a huge trailer-truck riding the tracks, although this is more dangerous than passing a street car, as trucks have a habit of cutting off cars.

If any one knows of any reason why autos cannot pass street cars on the left please notify the Voice of the People so I may learn. C. PICK.

DUNDEE ROAD.

Chicago, April 21.—I travel Dundee road daily and it is now in such terrible condition that driving over this road has become a hardship and an annoyance. The state apparently needs to be told that this road is in bad shape and needs immediate repair, and in the near future repaving.

If your department calls the attention of the state to road conditions you will find Dundee road, west from Glencoe between Skokie boulevard and Wheeling, one which needs attention immediately.
ARTHUR G. WIENECKE.

LOS ANGELES' SYSTEM.

Chicago, April 25.—Many accidents will be avoided if the city of Chicago would adopt the stop and go system that Los Angeles has. There, when the light changes, three things happen, viz.:

1. A bell rings.
2. An arm extends horizontally with the words "stop" or "go" painted on it.
3. And the red or green lights light up.

I'm sure when these three things happen the motorist will know exactly when the lights change and it will be of great benefit to those who cannot see or hear very well. EARL A. SCHULTZ.

AUTO MASSACRE.

Chicago, April 23.—No greater service does THE TRIBUNE render than its campaign against the automobile massacre. In this day of super machines we cannot stress safety measures enough. In this state of Illinois, which is considered a very progressive state in having the finest network of highways in the country, we should be able to set a striking example in having the least number of casualties. We cannot allow these terrible tragedies to continue.

I believe that every one that considers himself a citizen of this state would not object to our legislature passing a bill giving this state, that which many of our sister states already have, a rigid driver's license. If the number of casualties could be reduced to insignificance by building elevated roads, no matter what the cost, then that should be carried out. If these projects would reduce the possibility of sudden death on the highways then the legislature of Illinois should unanimously pass these bills for the sake of humanity and civilization no matter what the cost. BUSY LINCOLN HIGHWAY NOW A DANGEROUS ROAD

4 Lane Pavement Sought to Mississippi.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

De Kalb, Ill., May 2.—[Special.]—The Lincoln highway, a pioneer road in modern cross-country motoring facilities, has become a rapidly disintegrating and dangerously antiquated pavement through this commercial and agricultural center 52 miles west of Chicago. Here and in Dixon, Sterling, and other cities farther west on the route, civic leaders are seeking a reconstruction of U. S. 30 as a four lane highway to the Mississippi river.

Leaving Chicago on Roosevelt road or on North avenue, there is now a forty foot slab to the Fox river. Thereafter following the U. S. 30 markers the route is on a tortuous alignment with dangerous curves, crumbling concrete, and perilously narrow stretches.

Other Hazards.

The Lincoln highway is the most heavily traveled east and west route across Illinois. It is used by cross-country tourists, by industrial and agricultural trucks, and by a large volume of passenger cars and buses. The nature of the country, gently rolling hills, adds to the hazards and inconvenience of the inadequate pavement.

Just west of De Kalb is a section about 10 miles long that was resurfaced with brick four or five years ago over the protests of the Chicago Motor club. It was inspected recently by the Tribune roadster and was found to be breaking apart.

Concrete Base Cracked.

This brick resurfacing, which cost as much as it would have cost to have widened the road to four lanes, was undergoing extensive repair. Maintenance crews were replacing bricks that had been tossed by tires into the roadside ditches. Where bricks were removed for relaying, the old concrete base was seen to be badly cracked. After relaying the bricks were again coated with soft asphalt that made the resurfaced job slippery when new.

The original concrete on the Lincoln highway was laid on an alignment selected by teamsters in moving their wagons westward. It followed the ridges, avoiding mudholes in lower ground. This accounts for the many curves and for the excessive mileage.

Not Too Much to Expect.

"It is not too much to expect of Illinois," said Glen W. Reynolds, secretary of the De Kalb Chamber of Commerce, "to build a four lane road from the Mississippi river to Lake Michigan, since other states in the east have modern highways of this length. However, if funds are not available for the complete job this year, the logical first step would be to extend the forty foot road on a modern alignment from Geneva through De Kalb."

In urgency of trafic demand there is perhaps only one other rural widening project of comparable import. This is the widening of Joliet road, U. S. 66, south of Joliet at least to Pontiac, 96 miles from Chicago.

Philadelphia, Pa., May 2.—(AP)—Yale came from behind to defeat Pennsylvania, 73 to 62, in their annual dual track meet at Franklin field today. Penn won nine first places, but Yale had a better balanced team.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Election of Harry J. Kennedy, formerly general sales manager, to the vice presidency of Continental Oil company in charge of the marketing department was announced in Ponca City, Okla., last week following a meeting of Continental's board of directors. He succeeds E. S. Karstedt, now of Denver, Colo., who retired a year ago after having served Continental for forty-two years.

Chevrolet's field executives have returned to their home offices here after having attended a meeting of the company's entire national field organization of regional, zone and city managers, at Detroit. The gathering, held under the direction of W. E. Holler, vice president and general sales manager, was the first meeting of the entire field executive personnel since the announcement last November of the 1936 models.

Attending the session from this territory were R. W. Hill, zone manager; E. S. Graham and G. P. Barry, city managers. All nine of Chevrolet's regional managers, all 47 of its zone managers, and 21 city managers, heard central office executives discuss the spring selling program.

Efficient spark plugs constitute a first line safeguard of both driving economy and driving security, according to M. C. Dewitt, vice president of the Champion Spark Plug company, sponsor of the twelfth annual national "change week" which starts tomorrow.

"New spark plugs improve the efficiency of the ignition system and therefore raise the fuel mileage developed by their cars," says Mr. Dewitt. "Motorists know, too, that new plugs usually eliminate such motor 'bugs' as hard starting and loss of power."

That the average automobile driver is "safety conscious" and ready to lend his individual effort toward a reduction of trafic accidents is evidenced in an announcement by the Buick Motor company that more than 100,000 car owners throughout the United States have become members of the Buick safety legion and pledged themselves to safety on the highways and observance of trafic laws.

This membership has enrolled since the safety legion was launched Jan. 1, according to company records.

To further raise the standards of service offered America's motoring millions, a nation-wide technical school for service men, with their own shops as classrooms and "talkie" screens for blackboards, was announced this week. In preparation for record travel on American highways this summer, the new plan launched by the Plymouth division of Chrysler is designed to carry into dealers' repair shops new technical information developed by factory experts.

"If you are one of those who are somewhat careless in the matter of regular inspection and servicing of your automobile, you might take a tip from car owners who are out to get the full measure of the carefree service that has been built into their cars," says W. R. Bamford, service director of the Dodge division of Chrysler.

"Now, for instance, is the time to change your car back from its winter condition to the proper condition for summer driving. This seasonal conditioning is very important. Unlike the human body which nature has provided with the ability to adapt itself to extremes in weather and temperatures, the car requires certain adjustments, if it is to keep working smoothly and economically."

One hundred and sixty-six prizes will be given away by Pontiac company in a nation-wide economy contest during the month of April and the first half of May, according to H. A. Wehmeier, vice president and general manager of Community Motors, Inc., Chicago distributors.

A new motor oil that provides instant lubrication in starting, but still holds its body at high speeds and high operating temperatures, has been developed by Shell engineers to meet the requirements of modern motoring, according to a recent announcement.

Ethiopian War.

Haile Selassie, emperor of Ethiopia but no longer "Conquering Lion of Judah," reappeared on Thursday in his capital, Addis Ababa, and found his subjects fleeing in fear of bombing or the arrival of the Italian army. Yesterday the emperor apparently decided to do likewise and boarded a train to French Somaliland with his family, leaving Addis Ababa to be looted and burned by his own wild men. [See main news section.]

With one of the three advancing Italian columns reported from 30 to 62 miles north of Addis Ababa, Haile Selassie's departure foretold the collapse of all defense. On Friday he had said: "The Italian advances are important in length but insignificant in width. Even the occupation of Addis Ababa does not signify destruction of the empire." Then he issued a call for every man to join the regular troops going north to meet the Italians.

But yesterday it appeared that the emperor's cabinet, his tribal chiefs and troops had denied him support. They were said to have demanded surrender to the Italians and his abdication. Thus deserted, Haile Selassie left, supposedly to take refuge in Palestine. The emperor's whereabouts had been secret since the Italians crushed his imperial guard at Quoram April 5.

News of his departure and the subsequent rioting in Addis Ababa was radioed to London by Sir Sidney Barton, British foreign minister. He said the natives were inflamed with hatred for all foreigners. The 3,000 whites, including about 53 Americans, took refuge in Britain's legation, fortified by barbed wire and guarded by 250 Sikh soldiers from India. The imperial palace was ransacked. Other buildings were fired. Mayor Blatta Hawariate had said he would preserve order until the Italians arrived. In grave danger, foreigners hoped they would hurry.

Reversing the custom, war dispatches to Rome were less optimistic. While Italian crowds celebrated an "armistice" prematurely, Marshal Pietro Badoglio's troops were delayed by the Ethiopians' dynamiting of the mountain roads, bringing avalanches down in some places and leaving gaping holes in others. Rain, already torrential on the southern front, increased the mud the Italian trucks had to churn through. Rome officials said it might be a week before Addis Ababa was taken.

On the southern front, Gen. Rodolfo Graziani's troops were reported to have taken Sasa Baneh on Thursday after a week's seige. The Italian advance there was stubbornly resisted by Ras Nasibu's army, which Fascist officers praised highly. Both sides lost heavily in the battles which began two weeks ago. Mud and physical exhaustion slowed the Italians, it was said, but the Ethiopians presumably are in flight along the caravan route to Jigjiga. Beyond is Harrar, the Italian objective.

British Diplomacy.

Predictions in London were that Ethiopia would lose Great Britain's moral support when the league of nations council meets again on May 11. In an about-face upon its demands three weeks ago for stiffer penalties against Italy, Britain may ask the league to abandon the trade embargo of Italy as a failure in stopping the Ethiopian war. The house of commons will debate the question this week.

The British cabinet's postponement of sending peace questions to Adolf Hitler was taken as an indication that Britain wants the league meeting devoted to settling the war. Efforts to gain an armistice failed at the last meeting. The questioning of Hitler on how he would guarantee European peace was demanded by France after its action to punish Germany for sending troops into the Rhineland was balked.

German and Austrian troop maneuvers in the Alps on their respective sides of the German-Austrian frontier gave Britain a new chance to "view with alarm." Both the Berlin and Vienna governments insisted the troops were merely going through the usual spring drills. Britons expressed fear that the Nazis might attempt to seize the Austrian government and thus make Rhineland negotiations an idle gesture.

On May day Hitler boomed back oratorically: "They lie when they say that Germany will invade Austria or Czechoslovakia." [May 1, chosen in 1889 as the day for international celebrations of workers, passed quietly although communists everywhere paraded and orated.]

Earlier in the week Prince Ernst von Starhemberg, Austrian vice chancellor, warned his political enemies [monarchists, clerics and Nazis] that any attempt to dissolve his private Fascist "home guard" army would mean trouble, like the bloody defeat of the Socialist rebellion in 1934. Von Starhemberg said his army would continue to guard the existing dictatorship.

Disclosure of the business and political leaders who received money from the Phoenix Life Insurance company threatened to shake the Austrian government. A shortage of $47,500,000 in the company's premium reserves was disclosed five weeks ago. Prosecution for fraud is expected against at least eight persons. A German newspaper reported that Starhemberg and his army had received bribes of more than $10,000,000. Carl Vaugoin, a member of the federal diet and federal railway president, resigned. The shortage also led to two suicides.

Spartan Nazis.

Adolf Hitler on Monday appointed Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, minister of air and Nazi "strong man," as supreme controller of raw materials and foreign currencies. This meant that Goering was given full control of solving Germany's shortage of food and raw materials by putting agriculture and industry on a wartime basis.

Goering's promotion, however, did not eliminate Dr. Hjalmar Schacht as economic dictator. Hitler appealed to Schacht, who is also president of the Reichsbank, to retain his post. Schacht agreed to stay after Hitler expressed his faith in the former's economic and financial policies. Schacht's "capitalistic policies" previously had provoked Nazi authorities. [See main news section.]

Goering's right hand man, Paul Koerner, secretary of state, announced that Germans must live in Spartan simplicity rivaling the self-sacrifice of the Italians. Capitalists are now being denounced by the secret police for opposing police supervision.

The League of German Industries announced its fund for improving foreign exports would be set at $400,000,000 for the year. Goering at the same time decreed that imports must be reduced to army and civilian needs.

Radicals are expected to command a majority in the French parliament in runoff elections today as the result of last Sunday's election. The Popular Front of Socialists, Radical Socialists and communists brought a major swing to the left. The record 4,817 candidates running for 615 seats in parliament, however, left only 183 with clear majorities. More than two-thirds of the chamber of deputies thus remains to be filled in runoffs.

But the election of 63 leftists, 63 center politicians and 57 rightists was taken as an indication that the new government will be led by a radical party. In France the party that commands the most seats in parliament generally controls the premiership and cabinet. The vote was the heaviest in the history of France, 8,500,000 of a 10 million electorate going to the polls. The communist vote of 1,500,000 doubled that of four years ago. The gain of the communists was at the expense of the other two parties of the Popular Front.

Since the Popular Front campaigned against big business, the first reaction was a drop in the price of government bonds and removal of capital funds from France. [See main news section.]

Japan vs. Russia.

Soviet Russia last week agreed to Japan's proposal that joint commissions settle Manchukuo-Siberia border disputes. Meanwhile the alliance of Northern China with Japan against communists was reported.

The settlement agreement in Tokio did not include Outer Mongolia-Manchukuo frontier clashes, but tension was said to have lessened. Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita of Japan apparently told Konstantin K. Yurenev, soviet ambassador, that the Japanese army in Manchukuo has strict orders not to enter soviet territory.

The North China alliance, it was reported in Shanghai, provided for Japan's construction of three new railways in Inner Mongolia, Shansi province and northern Honan province. Prince Teh Wang of Inner Mongolia, previously pro-Chinese, is expected to head a Mongol-Japanese government.

At Kalgan, Inner Mongolia, Japan has cut the main caravan route between Peiping and central Siberia. Control of Inner Mongolia would give Japan a solid front against Russian controled Outer Mongolia. Meanwhile Manchukuo signed a trade agreement with Germany at Tokio. Resentful Chinese regarded this as a preliminary to a Japanese-German military alliance against the soviet.

The first session of the Japanese parliament since the military revolt Feb. 26 was called Friday. The parliament's principal task is to approve a 1936-'37 budget of $669,000,000, 45.8 per cent of which is devoted to army and navy. This percentage only represents a first instalment on Japan's greatest military expenditures.

Congress.

As expected, the New Deal sponsored tax bill, which proposes to raise 803 million dollars in additional revenue, was passed by the house Wednesday by a vote of 267 to 93. The bill was sent immediately to the senate. On Thursday the senate finance committee opened hearings. Principal witness of the day was Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, whose testimony appeared to be cut and dried. Questions were read to him by Senator Pat Harrison [Dem., Miss.]. Mr. Morgenthau read his prepared answers. He estimated the deficit for the fiscal year ending this June 30 at 5 billion 966 million dollars. He said there would be no need for new taxes if the Supreme court had not voided the AAA with its processing taxes and if congress had not passed the soldiers' bonus. [See Business Section.]

The senate committee began hearing pointed criticism of the tax bill Friday. E. H. Lane, a small town business man of Altavista, Va., made many pungent observations on the harm the tax bill would do to small businesses. At one point he nearly broke up the session with the remark, "If you fellows would only get off our backs for just a little while! I'll be so glad when you fellows adjourn and go home." Lane had the spotlight for most of the day's session, although other witnesses who condemned the bill were heard.

From the attitude of the senators who questioned witnesses it appeared that the committee would recommend the bill to the senate in virtually the same form as it was passed by the house. It was indicated by Chairman Harrison that the only change to be made by his committee would be to simplify the language of the measure.

Administration leaders in congress were agitated Thursday. A petition to force a vote May 11 in the house on the Frazier-Lemke three billion dollar currency inflation bill received the necessary 218 signatures. For nearly a year house leaders have tried to prevent a vote on the bill which would, for the first time in American history, bring huge currency inflation and its certain consequences. [See Business Section.]

The bill provides for printing 3 billion dollars in greenbacks with which farmers can pay off mortgages on their lands, having forty-seven years to repay the government. The forcing of a vote was caused by William Berlin, Democratic representative from Pennsylvania. He was defeated in a recent primary and accused New Dealers of withdrawing their support in his campaign.

Defense.

Consideration was begun in the house Thursday of a bill appropriating 531 millions to build up a "navy second to none." The bill, known as the Vinson-Trammel act, was introduced in 1934. The house appropriations committee has recommended an expenditure of $531,068,707 on the nation's sea defenses, an amount which would set a peace time record for naval appropriations. The house passed the bill without a record vote Friday.

One provision of the bill is for funds for starting construction on two battleships of the capital class—35,000 tons—if any of the signatory powers to the 1930 London treaty starts capital ship replacement activities. The high command of the navy recently requested an appropriation for such a purpose. Another provision of the bill would boost the navy's enlisted strength from 95,000 to 100,000 men. The marine corps would be increased from 16,000 to 17,000 men.

Col. Joseph I. McMullen, veteran officer in the judge advocate general's department, was convicted Thursday in the District of Columbia Supreme court of having accepted compensation illegally from a private firm.

The war department announced Thursday the appointment of Maj. Gen. Stanley D. Embick as deputy chief of staff of the army to succeed Maj. Gen. George S. Simonds.

The bulk of the nation's sea power steamed southward in the Pacific Monday from San Pedro, Cal., harbor for six weeks of maneuvers. The fleet numbered 150 ships and 450 airplanes.

Black Inquisition.

The United States Supreme court was asked Thursday to uphold the contention of W. R. Hearst, publisher, that the senate's inquisitorial committee headed by Hugo L. Black [Dem., Ala.], violated the constitution in seizing the private telegrams of individuals.

The petition was filed in the high court by Attorney Elisha Hanson, who cited the committee's alleged violation of the constitution in several instances.

"If this petitioner's constitutional rights are not to be violated in the same way in the future," the petition read, "the courts must take jurisdiction over the Black committee and restrain the members of that committee from making any further disclosures of petitioner's private papers and messages which the committee illegally obtained through the connivance of members of the federal communications commission."

President.

After two days of seclusion at his country estate, Hyde Park, N. Y., early in the week, President Roosevelt returned to the capital Tuesday for several days of routine business. On Friday he conferred with Walter J. Cummings, treasurer of the Democratic party, whose resignation has been rumored. Cummings has been the target of senatorial criticism because of his multiple jobs. He draws a combined salary of more than $90,000 a year from appointments dictated by the RFC. He refused to discuss his conference with the President, other than to say that they had talked of the general political situation.

At his Friday press conference Mr. Roosevelt said he favored early enactment of a new food and drug bill and new ship subsidy legislation.

Capital Notes.

Senator W. Warren Barbour [Rep., N. J.] demanded a senate committee investigation into Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell's Resettlement administration, a socialistic effort of President Roosevelt to modernize farms and finance various community projects. Senator Barbour charged that the Tugwell agency was a superburocracy requiring 27 buildings, employing 13,000 persons and consuming $196,070,000 with no responsibility to congress. Senator Robert D. Carey [Rep., Wyo.] wanted to know if the 13,000 did not exceed the number of resettled. Senator Barbour said the administration had started work thus far on only four projects. His previous resolution for an inquiry was smothered.

The senate passed a new vocational educational bill providing for federal expediture of more than $14,000,000 a year. Senator William H. King [Dem., Utah] warned that the bill marked a trend toward control of press, education, and of thought. He said that education was a responsibility of the states and no proper concern of the central government. He said the bill like the New Deal's national youth movement was dangerous to democratic institutions. The bill authorizes distribution of $12,000,000 to state education on a matching basis, as well as salaries and traveling expenses for federal vocational teachers.

Mrs. Emilie Arslanian, 27 years old, was given a divorce at Newark, N. J., when she testified that her husband, C. Melkin Arslanian, 53, oriental rug dealer, on the day they were married in 1928, left on a trip to Europe, but refused to take her on the "honeymoon."

Oscar A. Johnson, 50, a miner of Wallace, Idaho, had novel ideas about suicide. He put a stick of dynamite into his mouth, then lit the fuse. The method was successful.

Residents of the exclusive Kingswood section of Weehawken, N. J., complained that blasting on the Jersey approach to the Midtown tunnel was robbing them of sleep. The tunneling company acknowledged the complaints. Now, a shrill fire siren is blown to warn of each blast so that residents will not be awakened by the explosions.

William Jugis, 60, a farmer of Newtonville, N. J., was found in bed with a three inch gash in his throat. He said he had inflicted the wound to "let the soreness out," and then had closed the gash with a darning needle and coarse black thread. He was expected to live.

Melvin Hoffman, 14, was playing near his home in Los Angeles. He became wedged in a 19 inch culvert. His body dammed a trickle of water and he was drowned.

Felix de Santis filed suit in the New York Supreme court for $100,000 against a physician. He charged that following an operation for hernia he has been developing "female characteristics." The physician was absolved.

The old theory that "lightning strikes but once in the same place" was upset near Michigan City, Ind. In the course of a few minutes a model home under construction in a subdivision was struck five times.

Returning to her home in Kansas City, Mo., from a date, Miss Jane Miller, 16, found herself locked out. She called the fire department. A hook and ladder crew entered a second story window and opened the front door from the inside.

Bathtub Lothario.

The addition of a bathtub to their Norwood Park home was the turning point in the married life of Michael Farber, 32 years old, a shipping clerk by day and a shoe clerk by night, and his wife, Georgia, 30. Without the bathtub it is doubtful that Charles E. [Pop] Parker, 62, a widowed ironworker from Maywood, would have taken a bath there on a hot evening in July, 1934, or that Mrs. Farber would have scrubbed his back.

This event was a big point in the $25,000 alienation of affections suit, Farber vs. Parker, which Judge Michael Feinberg of Circuit court heard last week.

During the year he knew the Farbers as man and wife, the jovial Parker bought them a new sink, kitchen linoleum, a water heater, and clothes for their two children, now 12 and 6, he testified. Parker stayed at the Farbers' home when Farber went to the hospital in October, 1934. Then in November Mrs. Farber took the children and went to live with Parker and his redheaded son, Charles S., 24. Last February Farber obtained a divorce.

The details of the bathtub incident differed. Farber said he went home, found Parker enjoying a good back scrubbing and told him to get out. Parker testified that it was all good-natured fun at a party and that Farber dared his wife to do it. One way or another, Judge Feinberg ruled that Parker had alienated Mrs. Farber's affections in tub and home. He criticized Farber, however, for not hauling Parker out of the tub and driving him from the premises. After calling Parker a "gay Lothario" [Lothario was the notorious lover of Rowe's drama, "The Fair Penitent"], the judge awarded Farber $250. Parker was relieved that it wasn't $25,000 and afterwards asked, "What is this Lothario business?"

Cutten's Income.

Arthur W. Cutten, wealthy grain speculator, was charged with a second evasion of income taxes in an indictment returned last week to Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson.

On March 10 the government charged that Cutten, now recovering from a heart ailment, evaded payment of $414,525 on his 1929 income. The gross earnings were set at $4,354,223. The second indictment accused him of dodging $229,944 in taxes on his 1930 and 1933 incomes. The grosses were set at $703,850.31 and $568,891.12 for those years. William E. Gatewood, tax consultant and former revenue agent, is charged in both indictments with aiding Cutten in the tax evasion.

In Washington, the United States Supreme court indicated it would rule against the government's efforts to bar Cutten from the grain markets for two years. Chief Justice Hughes told Cutten's attorney he need not reply to the government's complaint.

Johnson on Politics.

Mrs. William S. Hefferan, the only school board member to vote against electing Dr. William H. Johnson new superintendent of schools recently, gave him her place as speaker at a City club meeting last week.

Said Dr. Johnson, who succeeded the late William J. Bogan: "If strife has been the watchword of the superintendency of Chicago schools it might be a worthwhile experiment to try four years with the board and the superintendent working together.

"I am not a politician. . . . Since I took office as assistant superintendent last July not a single politician has ever . . . asked a favor. However, I am happier to work with a politician who lays his cards on the table than with the sly members of the teaching staf who attempt to gain promotions because they are acquainted with me."

Dr. Johnson said his aim was to give Chicago the best educational system it can afford. He said it would be just for the board to restore teachers' paycuts.

On Thursday a delegation of school patrons presented to Mayor Kelly a petition bearing 27,000 names, asking that he reappoint Mrs. Hefferan to the school board. Her term expired on Wednesday. Mayor Kelly took the petition under advisement.

City Notes.

The city council finance committee staf declared that there will be no more than four tag days this year. The first will be in the drive of the Chicago Federation of Aged and Adult Charities tomorrow. The poppy day sale sponsored by four war veterans' organizations will be held May 25. The Federated Charities and Associated Charities are expected to have a tag day in September and the Children's Benefit league in October.

After an attorney had searched 10 years for Fred Brown Jewell, a Chicagoan who in 1911 chose to become a Mexican revolutionary leader, Judge Francis B. Allegretti of Superior court on Friday declared Jewell legally dead. This permitted the division of a $33,338 estate which Jewell's uncle, David H. Keyes, a Chicago contractor, left him in 1921. Mrs. Jewell will receive one-third, the rest going to eight relatives. Apparently Jewell, who enlisted in the marines in 1910, deserted ship in San Diego with several others bored with drill monotony and attracted by offers of the revolutionists. It is considered probable that Jewell was executed after capture by Mexican federalists; also that he never knew of his estate.

Oscar W. Oschatz was surprised when he found workmen wrecking his vacant six apartment building at 4348 Champlain avenue on April 16, but he was completely confounded when a workman, James Gibson, colored, allegedly threatened to shoot him if he interfered. Oschatz charged Gibson with disorderly conduct. He said the National Wrecking association had mistakenly obtained a permit to wreck his building.

Cracks were found in the new asphalt paving laid in Ballou street and Wright avenue as a part of the WPA'S $32,000,000, 140 mile street repair program. "All I am interested in is having the flaw remedied," said Oscar Hewitt, city commissioner of public works. "I'm not going to say anything about whose fault it was," said H. K. Seltzer, Chicago director of WPA. Both Hewitt and Seltzer said such defects could be found in any large scale resurfacing program. "No one need fear that other streets will crack," said Seltzer.

After a suspension of more than four years, preparations for the erection of steel on the Outer Drive link bridge began last week. James B. Black, PWA project engineer, said the actual steel work would be begun in three weeks.

Politics

The candidacy of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas for the Republican presidential nomination was given a tremendous indorsement Tuesday in the Massachusetts primary. His majority was 5 to 1 over four opponents. The complete vote, announced Wednesday, showed: Landon, 76,710; former President Hoover, 7,214; Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, 4,342; Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, 2,117; and Col. Frank Knox of Chicago, 1,918.

In the Pennsylvania Republican presidential preference primary, also held on Tuesday, Senator Borah was unopposed. There were scattered write-in votes for Gov. Landon, Senator Vandenberg, and Mr. Hoover. In the Democratic primary President Roosevelt for the first time faced a candidate opposed to his renomination, Col. Henry Breckinridge. The President won easily.

Following the announcement of the Massachusetts Republican vote Edwin F. Parker, president of the state's Landon for President club, said:

"The Landon vote expresses to the nation in unmistakable terms that the voters of Massachusetts appreciate the importance of electing as President of the United States a man who will clean up the mess in Washington which has been brought about in the name of the New Deal."

Republican voters in California were the targets last week of appeals from two factions of the party seeking to elect separate slates of delegates to the Republican convention. Strangely, both factions favor the candidacy of Gov. Landon. The preferential primary is next Tuesday. One faction, headed by W. R. Hearst, publisher, and Gov. Frank Merriam, seek the election of a Landon instructed delegation. The other faction, strongly supported by the California Landon for President club, seeks the election of an uninstructed delegation. The last named faction has questioned the motives of the Hearst-Merriam forces.

A strong Republican reply to the speech of President Roosevelt in New York a week ago last night, was forthcoming Monday. Senators Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan and Lester J. Dickinson of Iowa, both mentioned as candidates for the Republican nomination, took issue with the economic theory advanced by Mr. Roosevelt. They characterized the Roosevelt address as a campaign speech which failed to measure up to the expectations of the Republicans and disappointed many Democrats who had hoped for a more pointed and concrete discussion of the issues of the hour.

On the eve of the Democratic state convention, which opened in Springfield Friday, the break between the regular party organization, headed by National Committeeman Patrick Nash and Mayor Kelly of Chicago, and the independent organization headed by Gov. Henry Horner, was patched. Mr. Nash conferred with the governor at the executive mansion. Mr. Kelly was in Springfield, but did not call on the governor. Party leaders expressed the opinion that no serious differences between the factions would develop. The convention was completely controlled by the Cook county delegation.

Strong criticism of the socialistic tendencies and continued squandering of the New Deal was expressed at sessions throughout the week of the chambers of commerce of the United States in convention at Washington. The business leaders charged that New Deal actions had crippled and retarded business rather than helped it toward a revival.

He said that "for obvious reasons, labor should avoid division, even in the pursuit of its political policies."

The dispute between Frank Knox of Chicago and Senator Borah of Idaho over the recent primary election of "advised" delegates to the Republican convention was sharpened Wednesday. Borah forces had charged that certain delegates "advised" for the senator had announced their intention of supporting Knox. On Wednesday Louis J. Meyers, a Borah supporter who was elected in a district carried by Knox, announced he would support Knox at the convention, provided that delegates elected in districts carried by Borah likewise followed the moral obligation of the "advisory" primary vote.

Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace, a leading New Dealer, officially became a member of the Democratic party Monday at Des Moines, Ia. His party affiliation until then had been Republican. A friend filed notices of the change for both Mr. Wallace and his wife.

Bitterness developed Friday in Ohio between Republican factions backing "favorite son" candidates for the presidency and the forces supporting Senator Borah. Ohioans will indicate their choices in a primary on May 12.

Flying

Maj. Jimmy Doolittle, holder of many air records, set a new one Tuesday. In a passenger airliner he flew from Chicago to New Orleans, a distance of 826 miles, in 5 hours and 58 minutes. The flight was a test of new equipment of the Chicago and Southern airlines, which opened a regular passenger and mail service between the two cities Friday. Doolittle piloted his plane against strong headwinds for the entire distance.

Elimination of carburetors in the engines of planes of the army air corps soon will be accomplished. It will increase the safety and range of the planes. This was announced Monday at Wright field, Dayton, O., by the material division of the corps. A device known as an injector has been perfected at Wright field in the last two years. The injectors will be substituted for carburetors in all army planes, following successful completion of a test program.

Directors of the Air Transport association met in Chicago Monday for the first time since it was formed several months ago. The members discussed airplane trafic control on federal airways and at terminal ports and safety measures in general.

Art Chester, stunt pilot, and Andy Gantner, amateur speed boat racer, collaborated Sunday in refueling an outboard motor boat from the air. They asserted it was the first time the stunt ever had been done. They made the successful contact in Lake Michigan, off Navy pier.

Prince Louis Ferdinand, grandson of the former German kaiser, and son of the former crown prince, received a private air pilot license Monday at Roosevelt field, New York. The prince, who is living in Queen's Village, said it was his second license, the first having lapsed.

Imperial Airways, which is a subsidiary of the British air ministry, began operations in connection with the proposed trans-Atlantic air service at Montreal, Que., Tuesday. In a specially built, six passenger plane, Capt. Douglas Fraser took off for the coast of Newfoundland, where he will make a series of test flights.

Mihail Vodopyanoff, soviet "hero" flyer, making an air expedition into desolate arctic wastes, sent word to Moscow Wednesday that he had discovered the remains of two American expeditions on Rudolph Island. He found huts used by the Evelyn B. Baldwin expedition of 1901-1902, and shelters erected by the Anthony Fiala expedition of 1903-1904. Both expeditions were seeking the north pole.

Igor Sikorsky, designer and builder of airplanes and flying boats, announced in New York Friday that his organization is prepared to produce giant air liners which will meet every demand of ocean flying. He said the giant seaboats would have a crew of 8 to 10 and would carry 30 passengers.

A small low-wing monoplane, designed to meet the demand for an inexpensive monoplane, was demonstrated in Chicago Thursday. The most unusual feature of the plane is its power plant, a standard production Ford V-8 engine, modified to drive a wooden propeller.

The China Clipper set a new speed mark Friday in flying 2,400 miles from Honolulu to Alameda, Cal., in 14 hours and 57 minutes. The previous record was 17 hours and 2 minutes.

Education

A strict code of behavior, formulated by Scott H. Goodnight, dean of men at the University of Wisconsin, was submitted to the various student organizations Tuesday. The students have until May 6 to register a vote on the proposed "commandments." Immediate opposition was voiced by the Daily Cardinal, student newspaper, which observed editorially that "unless students want the faculty committee to dictate what clothes they should wear, what food they should eat, or how they should comb their hair, they should indicate a definite disapproval of the proposed behavior code."

Several thousand mothers of University of Illinois students were guests of honor Friday, yesterday and today for the annual Mother's day week-end festivities. A meeting of the Illini mothers was held yesterday morning.

South Bend, Ind., public school teachers will receive $21,000 in pay increases and more liberal allowances for sick leave as a result of action taken Friday by the city board of education. The new minimum salary is to be $1,125. The old minimum was $800 for elementary and $1,000 for high school teachers. The distinction between the two teaching classifications was abolished.

Chancellor Harry Woodburn Chase of New York university announced early in the week that Prof. Thorndike Saville had been appointed dean of the college of engineering, and that Prof. John Musser had been named dean of the graduate school of arts. Both appointments become effective Sept. 1. Dean Collins Pechin Bliss of the college of engineering will become dean emeritus.

Hunger Sieges

New Jersey's bedraggled relief "army," which took possession of the statehouse as a protest against the failure of the legislature to provide relief funds, finally was dispersed Thursday. Many of the band had left voluntarily the day before. The "army" had been encamped in the assembly chamber for more than a week.

A haggard group of hungry unemployed staged a demonstration Thursday in the aldermanic chambers of the St. Louis city hall. They disbanded when they were assured by Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann that city relief would be continued at least until May 15.

The Illinois Emergency Relief commission, attempting to stretch dwindling relief funds, decided upon drastic curtailments Thursday. A statewide campaign was begun to eliminate all undeserving cases from relief rolls. The state legislature on Wednesday approved an extension of the Emergency Relief commission until July 1.

STREET SCENE.

While a crowd of spectators looked on in amusement, City Marshal David L. Lawlor of New York carried out an eviction order on the Cleopatra Beauty Culture academy in Gotham. A dozen women patrons with beauty treatments half completed were forced to leave as the marshal and his men moved the furniture and other equipment of the establishment to the sidewalk. Many of the patrons' faces were smeared with clay. Remarks of the patrons and of the proprietress, a Mrs. Coyle, greatly amused the throng of spectators.

Europe's Eyes Turn to Egypt

Medicine

Kill and Cure.

Two weeks ago at Princeton university, Prof. Rudolph W. Ladenburg, 53 years old, and Cletus C. Van Voorhis, 50, were engrossed in atom-smashing experiments. One was soldering a loose cap on a tube containing $4,000 worth of radium sulphate. The cap blew off and spattered radium on their faces. Terrified, because radium poisoning is known as a slow, incurable disease, they scrubbed themselves and used a radium detector to find invisible specks. Physicians were still uncertain, after making blood tests, of how much radium had penetrated the two scientists' bodies.

Last week Dr. Robley D. Evans of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology rose before the National Academy of Sciences at Washington and told how he and Dr. J. C. Aub of Harvard had cured radium poisoning. Since as little as one-millionth of a gram is sufficient to rot a bone, Dr. Evans said the first problem was a detector which could find the slightest amount of radium. Drs. Evans and Aub developed one. They found that the most elusive radium deposited itself in the marrow of the bones. Dr. Evans gave a woman with an infected jawbone as an example. By eliminating calcium from her diet they could eliminate most of the marrow from her bones and take the radium with it. When the radium could no longer be detected they fed the patient a diet high in calcium. After a year and a half her jawbone was apparently completely healed.

Dionne Diet.

Mrs. Oliva Dionne's resentment of government monopoly in the care of her 23 months old quintuplets gave Dr. Allan R. Dafoe, the babies' physician, new trouble. In Callander, Ont., Mrs. Dionne declared the babies were not getting enough to eat. She said the five girls ought to be getting meat stock soup, mashed potatoes and gravy, cooked vegetables and all the milk they can drink instead of "greenish mush." She referred to the mashed vegetables, principal item in their diet. Dr. Dafoe replied the babies get enough but their weight is kept down because overweight babies have less resistance to disease. Mrs. Dionne said the babies slept but little in the morning and were restless in the afternoon. Dr. Dafoe said the restlessness showed their abundant energy and that if they slept too much during the day they'd wake up too early. Furthermore, said Mrs. Dionne, the children "don't say a word that can be understood." Dr. Dafoe said the babies could use such French words as "le docteur" and "au 'voir." Dr. Dafoe was satisfied with everything which dissatisfied Mrs. Dionne.

Cancer Millions.

Harry Pelham Robbins, president of the Memorial hospital for the treatment of cancer, announced in New York that the Rockefeller institute had given the hospital $3,000,000 for the construction of the largest cancer institute in the world. Memorial hospital was founded by the John Jacob Astors and Elizabeth Hamilten Cullum in 1884. It is said to be the oldest special cancer hospital existing. It is affiliated with Cornell university.

EL TOREADOR.

The New York Court of Appeals agreed with Sidney Franklin, Brooklyn toreador and the only American bullfighter, that there is a difference between the words bullfighter and bullthrower. The court awarded Franklin $5,000 damages. He sued, originally for $300,000 after a sports commentator for Columbia Pictures had printed, "I want to introduce Sidney Franklin, the greatest bullthrower—I mean bullfighter—ever born under the sunny skies of Brooklyn."

FEMALE STOWAWAY.

Mrs. Eben S. Draper, who disappeared from a sanitarium at Katonah, N. Y., twelve days ago, and later was found to be a stowaway aboard the Cunard liner Georgic, bound for England, will be returned to the United States aboard the same ship next week.

Last September, a few weeks before Italy invaded Ethiopia, the Rome semi-official journal Colonial Action said: "If Italy is a danger to the British empire, Great Britain is also a danger to the Italian empire. For our own security we can very well demand Great Britain's expulsion from Egypt."

This is Italy's attitude toward Britain's jealous guarding of its "empire life line" through the Mediterranean sea and the Suez canal. This route to the East Indies is strained anew by [1] the Italian army's advance on Addis Ababa last week, [See Foreign.] [2] Turkish military reoccupation of the Dardanelles strait on April 17; [3] Jewish-Arabian riots two weeks ago in Palestine, a British mandate, and [4] the death at Cairo last Tuesday of Egypt's King Fuad I., 68 years old, of a throat infection.

The last event brought Crown Prince Farouk, 16 years old, British academy student, to the throne, and gave Britain anxiety for its control of Egypt. This little country is fourteen-fifteenths desert and populated by 14,000,000 Mohammedans and Coptic Christians, who are 90 per cent illiterate. But its control is vital to Britain because it contains the Suez canal, affords a naval base, and shares the Nile river's fertility with the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, Britain's chief source of self-sufficiency in the cotton market.

But keeping Egypt docile has been a vexing task ever since Britain overthrew the nominal Turkish control in 1914 and became Egypt's protector. The literate Egyptians, however, wanted an independent government and agitated the anti-British riots which have occurred ever since. In 1922 Britain gave Egypt its independence—except for reservations of power that almost nullified the self-government. Fuad, whose father Britain and France expelled for bankrupting Egypt, returned from exile in 1917 to become sultan and in 1922 was made king. Meanwhile the Wafd nationalist party was growing. Its acts have made Fuad's reign a perpetual struggle to keep peace between the nationalists and the ever present British army. The patriots wanted no British militia in Egypt. In 1923 Fuad was forced to concede his people a constitution. Fuad suspended the constitution to become dictator from 1928 to 1930 and again in 1934 because of insurrections. The assassination of Maj. Gen. Sir Lee Stack, Sudan governor general, in 1924 was typical of the rioting. A treaty in 1930 to settle British relations in Egypt was never put in force.

The present crisis dates from the beginning of Italy's "colonial expedition" last October. Either an Italian conquest or an Ethiopian victory meant trouble for Britain. The first would give Italy a strong hold on the Red sea and Lake Tsana, source of the Sudan's Blue Nile. An Ethiopian victory might inspire a general uprising of the barbaric blacks in Egypt and elsewhere. So Britain sent its fleet into Alexandria without notification. It increased its air strength in Egypt.

This angered the Egyptian nationalists and on last Nov. 14, sixteenth anniversary of the original demand for complete independence, they rioted. The violence resulted in restoration of the constitution last December. The next step of the nationalists was to demand a treaty with Britain to remove troops. Egypt, under the leadership of nationalists, is now negotiating with Britain for a treaty. Last week some Egyptians feared the death of King Fuad, pro-British, would endanger success.

Since 1925, when Italy won from Egypt the Jarabub oasis on the Egyptian-Libyan border, Egypt has not been friendly to Mussolini. Britons have accused him of agitating against Britain in Egypt. Last month Italy made a gesture toward Egyptian friendship. Since the boy king will govern through a council of three, and because of yesterday's election of a new Egyptian parliament, possible opportunities for Italian influence were foreseen.

Foreign Notes

Investigation by the Washington state department and the government of Chile has convinced the Chilean foreign office that it has uncovered one of the biggest deals in contraband arms since the United States imposed its embargo during the Bolivia-Paraguay war. A shipment of 2,190 aerial bombs from Miranda Brothers of New York to Carlos Koch, Chilean government dispatch officer at the port of Arica, Chile, led to the scandal. It was found that arms ostensibly consigned to Chile were being passed on to Bolivia. Shipments of American planes and German and Norwegian shells and arms were expected to raise the contraband trade into the millions. Koch and two other suspects were arrested.

Pershing hall, American Legion headquarters in Paris, is about $350,000 in debt. Col. Francis E. Drake, American president of the hall's board of directors, said he had sunk $100,000 in the building and demanded bankruptcy action to recover his investment. The hall's board set Thursday for the closing. To forestall this, most of the Paris post encamped in the building and refused to get out. Col. Drake called the French police. Finally it was agreed that the Legion leave a symbolic occupation of four members until the dispute is ironed out. [See main news section.]

To still recent uneasiness of the British parliament that Britain might talk colonial trade with Germany, Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin told the house of commons that the government has no such intention. Restoration of colonies ceded to Britain, France and Japan is generally considered out of the question. One peaceful method suggested was for Germany to buy some of Portugal's important possessions. Three other suggestions involve war: [1] follow Italy's course in Ethiopia and seize territory, possibly Liberia; [2] defeat France and deprive it of its world war gains; [3] invade the independencies of eastern Europe since Russian conflict may be unavoidable.

The British house of lords passed a bill, 62 to 35, to abolish the traditional privilege of peers to be tried by equals. Baron Wykeham Stanley Cornwallis led the opposition. He said that the bill would end a great principle of English justice.

The French liner Normandie made a test cruise from Havre after six months in drydock undergoing an overhauling to eliminate vibration. It was declared that the Normandie's power will be increased next winter to defend her trans-Atlantic record if the new British liner Queen Mary lowers the mark this summer. During the cruise the Normandie lost a new 35 ton propeller.

Paul Joseph Goebbels, German minister of propaganda, lifted the "disgrace ban" from Dr. Hugo Eckener, veteran Zeppelin commander. The ban was imposed for Eckener's alleged indifference to using the airship Hindenberg for Nazi election propaganda. Newspapers may again use Eckener's name. It is expected that he will supervise the airship's first flight to Lakehurst, N. J. The ship sails on Wednesday. [See main news section.]

It was a tense moment in the New York diamond cutting shop of Lazare Kaplan. He was about to split in two the million dollar Jonker diamond of 726 carats as a preliminary to cutting the stone into a dozen smaller ones. If the cleaving failed it meant the huge diamond was ruined. Kaplan began his work. A few minutes later he ran to a telephone and called his wife. "Mamma, it's a success!" he told her. Kaplan was employed by Harry Winston, present owner of the stone. Winston decided to have it cut into smaller diamonds when he failed to find a buyer for the large stone. The Jonker was found in 1934 by J. J. Jonker, a poor South African farmer.

Science

Shorter Waves.

The shortest radio waves now used by American broadcasting stations have a length of 650 feet. Below this are the short waves used by police systems, amateur operators, and in international broadcasts, further down the scale, are ultrashort waves which vibrate at exceedingly high frequencies. An invention by which this untouched field may be exploited was explained before an American Physical society-Institute of Radio Engineers meeting in Washington by Dr. Wilmer L. Barrow of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Dr. G. C. Southworth of the Bell Telephone laboratories.

Their invention is a hollow metal tube known as a "wave guide transmitter." It carries only electrical currents having a frequency of two billion cycles per second or higher. At such a frequency the radio wave is less than an inch long. The Southworth-Barrow tube carries the waves on its inside skin at a speed almost equal to light. It improves upon the million cycle coaxial tube [a small rod within a tube] developed last year by the American Telephone and Telegraph company.

Southworth and Barrow said their tube would probably be chiefly important to television although it can transmit all electrical communications from station to station. Television requires a wide band of waves. The congestion of the wave lengths in use forced the television engineers to concentrate in the ranges of a million cycles and up.

Universal Binder.

The intricate force which binds the universe together was explained for the first time by Drs. M. A. Tuve, N. P. Heydenberg and L. R. Hafstad of the Carnegie institute before the American Physical society.

According to the Coulomb law "like repels like" when electrical charges meet. This has been observed in the protons, positive charged cores of hydrogen atoms. But atoms heavier than hydrogen must contain more than one proton. From this Werner Heisenberg, Nobel prize winner, theorized that a greater force existed within the atom to bind it together. Several American physicists more recently have measured this force as 40 times that force which drives like electrical charges apart.

The Carnegie physicists were the first to prove the binding force experimentally. This they accomplished with a 1,200,000 "atom gun" which bombarded protons in a hydrogen chamber.

Amiable Apes.

Yale university chimpanzees display true generosity and friendship comparable to humans. This was demonstrated in a motion picture presented at the National Academy of Sciences in Washington by Dr. Henry W. Nissen and Dr. Meredith P. Crawford of the Yale primate biology laboratory. In one instance a caged chimpanzee had no food and one outside the bars had plenty. The free chimpanzee divided his grubstake almost equally with the other.

Philosopher Stone.

In days of old alchemists searched for a "philosopher's stone," an imaginary substance which would turn baser metals into gold. At the academy meeting Prof. Ernest O. Lawrence and Dr. J. M. Cork of the University of California described a new machine with which they turned platinum into gold, but not in sufficient quantities to affect the treasury.

The machine is a gun which bombards atoms for the first time in open air. It develops speeds of 15,000 miles an hour with energy of 11 million volts—more than double the power of any previous atom smasher. The "bullets" for the maximum energy are alpha rays particles [cores of helium atoms]. The energy in the beam equals that of about 250 pounds of radium, worth about 4 billion dollars and far exceeding in strength the world's entire supply.

The beam reaches a length of 10 inches, five times as strong as high voltage X-rays. Prof. Lawrence expects it to do better when he puts it in a vacuum tube.

Crime

Alvin Karpis, America's public enemy No. 1, was captured in New Orleans Friday night by federal agents. He was arrested in a downtown apartment with Fred Hunter, 37, wanted in a robbery, and a woman. The agents called on Karpis and the others to surrender and they were taken without the firing of a shot. Karpis was taken by plane to St. Paul yesterday. [See main news section.]

With only one slim clew, police of Chattanooga, Tenn., were attempting yesterday to solve the brutal assault which cost the life of Mrs. Lulu Mae McConnell, 23, wife of a Chattanooga theater manager. She was attacked in her fashionable apartment Friday. The only clew police had were the words "White man did it," which Mrs. McConnell mumbled before she died. She was the mother of 2 year old twin girls. She died of internal injuries, a broken jaw and head and face lacerations. Hospital officials said the young woman had not been raped.

Thomas E. Dugger, 31, was hanged Friday in San Quentin prison, Cal., the first person to be executed under various new laws designed to curb kidnaping. Dugger, called an "ape man" by police because of his record of abducting and assaulting women, was convicted and sentenced to death after he admitted abducting and assaulting three Los Angeles women.

Department of justice agents and police forces throughout Michigan were pressing a search Friday night for a gang of five gunmen who earlier in the day robbed the National Bank of Detroit of $50,000. The police were closing in on the Lake Erie shore section of Stony Point, suspected of being the location of the gang hideout.

Chicago police Thursday arrested Alfred Brady, 26, formerly a paroled Indiana convict, who tried to emulate the late John Dillinger. Brady told a graphic story of how he and three other men he recruited for his gang shot and killed a policeman in Indianapolis Monday. He also told how the gang had robbed jewelry stores in Lima and Dayton, O., of gems valued at $15,000. Brady was seized in the Sheridan Plaza hotel. Also in custody are two alleged receivers of stolen property, Jack Becker, 26, and William Geftman, 26, and three women, Margaret Barry, 21, alias Margaret Brady, former Lake View High school student; Mrs. Laura Becker, 21, and Mrs. Anna Geftman. Police in Indiana and Illinois continued the search yesterday for the three other members of Brady's gang.

Ellis Parker Jr., son of a New Jersey detective, was pictured during the week as the key figure in the kidnaping and torture of Paul H. Wendel, former Trenton attorney, whose "forced confession" of the Lindbergh baby kidnap murder delayed the execution of Bruno Hauptmann for three days. Parker, still at large, is one of five men who have been indicted in the Wendel case. On Wednesday District Attorney William F. X. Geoghan of Brooklyn, where Wendel was tortured, said young Parker not only originated the plot against Wendel, but furnished the "props" used by his confederates. These were toy pistols, handcuffs and badges. Three of five men indicted are in custody. One of them, Harry Weiss, attempted to commit suicide Thursday. The others are Martin Schlossman and Harry Bleefeld.

Indictments were returned by a New York federal grand jury Friday against a woman and eight men accused of being members of a gang that stole $590,000 in treasury notes from the United States Trust company in December, 1934. The woman, Amelia Linkovich, was accused of transporting the stolen notes to a safety deposit box in New Haven. Three of the men, Charles Hartmann, Walter O. Evans, and Theodore D. Crowley were charged with the actual stealing.

Douglas Burton, 30, London literary critic, who killed a young British novelist at a dinner party, was convicted of murder Thursday in London, but was adjudged insane and was ordered confined to a mental home. Burton struck Douglas Bose, 21 year old author, with a sculptor's hammer during a studio party. The critic became enraged, witnesses said, when Bose flipped a brazil nut at Sylvia Gough, 42 year old author, blackening her eye.

Labor

Protests from the state of New Mexico brought a sudden end Thursday to the border blockade against "cheap labor" which had been enforced since April 18 by the Colorado National Guard. Gov. Ed C. Johnson of Colorado said the protests of the neighbor state had proved the military barrier to be "unwise." Gov. Clyde Tingley of New Mexico had threatened trade reprisals against Colorado. Gov. Tingley pointed out that his state was Colorado's "biggest customer."

A strike of greenskeepers and other laborers at nine north shore golf courses was partially broken Thursday when some of the strikers returned to work at seven of the courses. The strike began Monday. The strikers demanded wage increases and shorter hours. On Tuesday officials of the clubs warned the strikers to return to work immediately.

Two men were shot in strike rioting Tuesday at the plant of the Northwest Metal Products, Inc., Seattle, Wash. Several others were severely beaten before police arrived and dispelled the rioters. The strike has been in progress two months.

Members of the Journeymen Barbers' International union walked out Tuesday in Brooklyn, closing 800 barber shops. The barbers demanded increased wages and improved working conditions. Union officials said the strike might extend to Manhattan and the Bronx.

May day, Friday, was quiet throughout the country. In Chicago, more than 2,000 members of the garment workers' unions, instead of parading, listened to symphony music and watched ballet dancing at Orchestra hall.

Check and Zioncheck.

It was a giddy week for Marion Zioncheck, Democratic playboy representative from the state of Washington.

On Tuesday he obtained a marriage license to wed Miss Rubye Louise Nix, 21, a PWA stenographer. Unable to find a minister, Zioncheck made a dash into Maryland, where he obtained a second license and was married.

Wednesday the couple started on their honeymoon but didn't get far. In Alexandria, Va., where Zioncheck once before was arrested for speeding, a motorcycle policeman arrested him again. Taken to the police station he was charged with driving 62 miles an hour and with disorderly conduct. A professional bondsman furnished $200 bail.

When the case was called Friday, Zioncheck did not appear. Judge James R. Duncan fined the congressman a total of $66 and forfeited the bond. The judge hinted that if Zioncheck appeared again in Alexandria he would be arrested on sight.

Yesterday the carefree representative experienced his first arrest in North Carolina. Sherif J. A. Russ of Brunswick county took Zioncheck and his bride to the sherif's office at Shallotte. The sherif said the congressman was driving seventy miles an hour. Zioncheck, unlike himself, was glum and silent while waiting for bail to be arranged. [See main news section.]

Millar, who died in 1926, left the money for the Toronto mother giving birth to the most babies in the ten years following his death. The contest will be decided this year. Mrs. Timleck has birth certificates for ten babies she has borne since Millar's death.

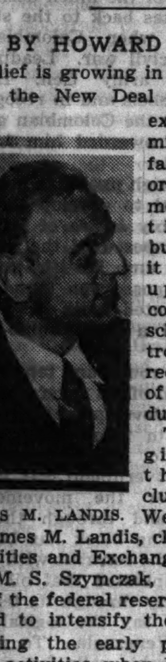
FEAR SEC TURNS TO CONTROL OF CAPITAL FLOW

Business Chiefs See Change in Policy.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

Belief is growing in La Salle street that the New Deal Securities and Exchange commission is going far beyond the original plan of merely policing the securities business and that it is embarking upon a more comprehensive scheme of controling and directing the flow of capital into industry.



JAMES M. LANDIS.

The addresses given here at the Economic club dinner last Wednesday night by James M. Landis, chairman of the Securities and Exchange commission, and M. S. Szymczak, Chicago member of the federal reserve board, have served to intensify these suspicions.

During the early period of the SEC's activities, when Joseph P. Kennedy was chairman of the commission, business men and financiers became convinced that the regulatory body's chief purpose was to clean up the securities business and, by the disclosure of important information, to prevent misrepresentation and fraud.

Kennedy's Attitude Recalled.

Kennedy's words and acts encouraged this belief. He made repeated administrative changes to render the securities legislation more workable and frequently emphasized his belief that the SEC should have two purposes in mind—first, the elimination of fraud, and second, the reopening of the capital markets so that there might be nothing to discourage the investment of new money in legitimate enterprises.

The idea of Kennedy, the former stock broker, that encouraging the flow of capital into worthwhile enterprises was fully as important as keeping it from flowing into fraudulent schemes, is not enough for Landis, the former Harvard professor. In his address here he said nothing about making financing easier for reputable concerns, and he did emphasize a new purpose—the "control" of credit to prevent undue speculation.

Kennedy had often spoken of manipulation of stock prices, but he had never spoken of the control of credit as a field of operation for the Securities and Exchange commission.

Kennedy and Landis Diverge.

In fact, Kennedy had specifically stated that the job of the SEC was to reopen the capital markets and that credit control was outside the province of the SEC.

Landis' remarks on the subject of the control of credit have stirred up much anxiety in La Salle street and also among executives of large corporations which do public financing. They are wondering whether "planned economy" is about to become a larger consideration in the program of the SEC and whether this regulatory agency will take it upon itself to pass upon the economic and sociological justification of such financing as they may want to do in the future.

"Even now," Landis said in his address here, "only the major outlines of the structure are apparent. As it stands today it is far from complete. The greater part of our equipment for the work of protecting the investor has yet to be developed. The commission today faces not the gentle task of polishing and refining, but the stern work of continued building."

Landis Hints at Control.

Later in speaking of the use to which new capital was being put he said:

"We have had too little experience to tell whether the flow of new capital into industry is reaching any new and less wasteful direction."

Inasmuch as the original purpose of the New Deal securities legislation, as interpreted by Kennedy, was the protection of the investor against fraud, Chicago business men are wondering how far the present management of the SEC expects to go in the direction of inquiring as to whether the flow of new capital into industry may be "reaching any new and less wasteful direction."

Landis, in the opinion of many, seems to be concerned not only with the manner in which new securities are sold and by whom but also with what they do with the money after they sell the securities.

Idle Estimates Are Too Large, Survey Shows

New York, May 2.—[Special.]—An independent survey of unemployment in the United States conducted by the New York Sun and made public today, indicates that estimates of idle workers made by the American Federation of Labor and other organizations are excessive. The federation places the unemployed total above 12 millions.

On the basis of returns from employers of 17 per cent of all workers in American industries, the newspaper estimated unemployment in industry at not more than 1,734,000. By industry is meant all companies engaged in the manufacturing and mechanical lines, and the figures include all their workers—mechanical, clerical, and executive.

For all forms of work in the United States, excepting agriculture, domestic service, and professional service, the Sun estimates unemployment at 3,085,000. In other words, of 30,000,000 possible workers in the fields under review, approximately 27,000,000 are employed. In professional service unemployment is fixed at 191,790.

Principal Employers Report.

The Sun sent letters to the principal employers in the United States and its figures are based on their replies as to the number of their employes in 1929 and 1935.

More than 3,000 companies are represented in the survey, including all the railroads, most of the automobile factories, and most of the larger employers in the country. They reported a total of 4,640,000 persons at work in 1935, against 5,498,000 in 1929. From these figures the estimates of national employment and unemployment were worked out on the order of the percentages set forth in the United States census.

"The figures in this survey are not held out as precise or conclusive," the newspaper said. "They are subject to revision, but it is the judgment of the compilers that they are substantially correct. It is doubtful that an exact count in all categories, excluding agriculture, professional service and domestic service, would surpass 3,500,000 unemployed, whereas the estimate in this survey is 3,085,000 unemployed.

How Employés Are Divided.

"Of the 51,000,000 persons gainfully employed in the United States today, of this number approximately 30,000,000 should be employed in the manufacturing and mechanical industries, in transportation and communications, in the extraction of minerals, and in trade. This 30 million figure includes 90 per cent of those workers which the census classes in the 'clerical' grouping, largely agents, stenographers, bookkeepers, etc. Thus the industrial and trade category takes in 58.7 per cent of all the employables of the country.

"The remaining 21 million employables, comprising 41.3 per cent of the total of 51 million, should be employed in agriculture, in forestry and fishing, in professional service, in public service [mostly state and municipal] and in domestic service."

Asserting that it was impossible to believe that 9,000,000 were unemployed in the groups not studied, the Sun characterized as "preposterous" the statement of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, that 12,184,000 persons are without normal work.

RAILROAD SEEKS RFC LOAN; ITS ONE ENGINE MAY BUST ANY TIME

Washington, D. C., May 2.—[Special.]—The Pioneer and Fayette railroad today reported that its one locomotive has degenerated into "a costly piece of machinery" and said it is in "dire need" of a new one.

In a bulky application of 40 pages, this intrastate carrier with headquarters at Pioneer, O., asked the interstate commerce commission to approve its request for a loan from the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

A resolution of the road's directors said "the only means of power may have a complete breakdown and cause a heavy loss to our earnings and a severe loss to all shippers and buyers who are depending on our locomotive for service."

The carrier said it wants to buy a shiny, new, 21 foot gasoline burning locomotive. To finance this acquisition the company proposes to use $1,350 cash on hand and a loan of $7,000 from the RFC.

BUSINESS DONE BY CHECK SHOWS DECLINE IN WEEK

Business transacted by check last week declined from both the preceding week and last year, banking figures indicated yesterday. Debits to individual deposit account in the 12 federal reserve districts of the country totaled $8,310,242,000 in the week ended April 29, compared with $8,745,414,000 for the week ended April 22 and $9,254,196,000 in the corresponding period of last year.

In the Chicago area—the seventh reserve district—volume amounted to $1,118,695,000, a slight gain over the preceding week's total of $1,114,394,000 and well above the $1,108,177,000 reported for the corresponding period last year. Debits in the city of Chicago aggregated $620,593,000, against $665,566,000 in the 1935 week.

Bank clearings in Chicago for the week ended yesterday totaled $300,000,000, compared with $294,500,000 a week earlier and $285,300,000 in the corresponding 1935 period.

New Gold Flow from France Tops 21 Million

New York, May 2.—[Special.]—An accelerating flight from the franc on the eve of tomorrow's "runoff elections" in France was disclosed today by the announcement that an additional $13,065,000 gold had been engaged in Paris for shipment here, bringing to $21,870,000 the gold engagements of the last two days.

Bolstered by these gold transactions and by the official support of the British exchange equalization account, the franc held steady within the range that it has been kept to all week. It dropped only to 6.58¾ cents and closed at 6.58⅛ cents, up ⅛ point both for the day and the entire week. The pound sterling, to which the franc is kept pegged, was similarly steady, and at its closing price of $4.94 it also showed no net change for the day, but was ⅛ cent higher for the week. The dollar was worth 100.73 cents against francs, compared with 100.75 cents yesterday.

13 Millions Gold Sold.

Of the gold engagements announced today at the federal reserve bank about $1,000,000 was actually taken on Friday, while the remaining $12,065,000 was purchased today. In addition to the gold taken in Paris the reserve bank announced the engagement of $284,000 gold in India for shipment here, making a total of $13,349,000 new gold engagements reported today.

The quickening flow of capital out of France in the last two days closely paralleled the developments at the end of the previous week when a total of $18,245,000 gold was engaged, $7,115,000 on Friday and the remainder on Saturday. France's "election crisis" has thus cost her $40,115,000 gold lost to the United States in the last two week-ends, in addition to large sums given up to the British equalization fund in connection with the latter's support of the franc.

Other Moneys Firm.

Other important foreign exchanges shared the outward steadiness of the franc and the pound today. The guilder was off 1 point to 67.84 cents, a gain of 1 point for the week; while Swiss francs at 32.53 cents showed a rise of 4 points in the day but a loss of 6 points in the week and belgas at 16.9 cents were unchanged for the day and down 1 point for the week. Italian lire and German marks also showed no change for the day or the week at 7.88 cents and 40.21 cents respectively, while Canadian dollars were up 6¼ points for the day at 99.81¼ cents, a gain of 25¼ points for the week.

Tomorrow's voting in France is expected by bankers here to confirm and extend the gains made by the left parties in last Sunday's election. In anticipation of such gains prices on the Paris bourse have been disturbed in the last week, particular weakness having been shown by shares of the Bank of France because of the expectation that a left government would demand changes in the charter ot that institution.

BUSINESS NEWS IN REVIEW

Stocks Slump Sharply in Last Week—Many Fall to New Low Levels for Year—Indices Indicate Further Business Gains—Building Activity Expands—New Tax Plan Assailed.

Stocks slumped sharply early last week, then rallied somewhat in later sessions. Explanations for the liquidation again were varied, with experts trotting out the pending Guffey coal bill decision, tax legislation, the French elections, and various other reasons. No two commentators agreed as to details or the relative importance of each factor.

Chart followers considered the selling a healthful sign, because the shakeout, they reasoned, would pare down a market top heavy with buyers. Many issues had gone too far ahead in relation to business, some said.

During the decline a long list of stocks sank to new lows for the year, on two successive days more than 200 issues touching new minimums. Such leaders as American Telephone, du Pont, and Bethlehem were hard hit and practically all groups participated in the decline. On the recovery, aviation issues were in the forefront. Motor shares were forced down along with others despite favorable reports by leading companies in the industry, but they rallied moderately later in the week.

The bond market was mixed. Rail loans and industrials eased under the same factors dominating the share market. Low yield issues were steady, aided by another gain in excess bank reserves. Foreign bonds, depressed by the new Polish exchange restrictions and other uncertainties, reached new lows for the year.

The specter of greenback inflation [See Washington; Review section] raised by the resurrection in congress of the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage bill, failed to cause a ripple in the market Friday or Saturday.

Control.

In a Chicago address Wednesday Chairman James M. Landis of the Securities and Exchange commission told a large audience that the real development of government regulation of finance was only beginning and that the commission faces "the stern task of continued building." His implied threat of a firmer grip by the government on business and financing was sandwiched between tributes to private financiers and brokers for their coöperation with the SEC, and some harsh words against the public utility industry because of its court tests of the public utility holding company act.

Landis made no reference to the sharp decline in stock prices which followed the elevation of margin requirements to 55 per cent, a move initiated by the federal reserve board, collaborating with the SEC. Earlier in the week the reserve board explained it had jacked up margins in an effort to limit the use of credit for speculation and at the same time not disturb business borrowers.

Indices.

Industrial indices indicated further gains last week. Steel and electric power production and railroad freight trafic moved higher, while automobile production held fairly stable around the 120,000 car a week mark. Quarterly earnings reports were encouraging for the most part.

"The second quarter should prove even better than the first in steel and automotive industries," said Business Week, "although no one should be surprised if the quarter ends with a usual seasonal tapering. The steel trade exceeded all expectations for a spring peak, and may be ready to curtail a bit shortly."

Unlike last year, "heavy" steel producers reported better first quarter results for 1936 than the "light" steel producers. Railroads and construction industries have aided the heavy field, but automobile makers have bought less light products.

Building.

March building figures for all cities of 10,000 population or more, latest available statistics, disclosed that construction of almost as many new family dwellings as in the entire first quarter of 1936 was authorized. In the three months 24,387 permits were issued, against 11,940 in 1935. Seventy-two cities reported new residential permits of $100,000 or more each for the month. Three cities started on programs entailing more than $2,000,000 each.

A fillip was given retail trade during the week by warm weather in most parts of the country, which brought out spring shoppers. Consumers had more money to spend and bought more goods, but demanded better quality.

Taxation.

Stiff corporate tax levies contemplated in pending legislation [See Washington: Review section] will bring domination of many corporations by banks, said E. G. Seubert, president of Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

Seubert told reporters his company is facing a good year, but singled out the corporation tax bill with its big levy on undistributed corporation earnings as a highly disturbing factor in the business outlook.

"After existing reserves and surpluses have been depleted it will be necessary to put ourselves in the hands of bankers," he asserted. "I want to emphasize, however, that this is not an immediate problem of our company inasmuch as existing reserves provide us with money needed for expansion."

The session with reporters was held prior to the company's annual meeting in Whiting, Ind. The meeting was attended by only fifteen persons, including three reporters, officials, stockholders, and tally clerks.

Handicap.

On another front taxation of undistributed earnings was assailed as the greatest handicap ever placed on business. E. H. McCarty, president of the Nash Motors company, which by virtue of its ample reserves has tided itself over periods of unprofitable operations, issued a statement denouncing the bill and citing his company's record as proof of his argument. He said:

"From 1930 to 1935, inclusive, although we incurred a loss during the last three years, we made a profit of slightly over $10,000,000. We employed, year after year, many thousands of men. We spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in advertising. We paid state and federal taxes during the six years amounting to $7,587,851. We were able to pay dividends totaling $33,666,100 for the six year period."

This was possible, he said, only because the company had on hand $42,011,403 on Nov. 30, 1929. On Nov. 30, 1935, the company's holdings of cash and government securities had declined to $24,520,514.

Oil.

Gift of a jungle tract by the Colombian government to Gen. Virgilio Barco in 1905 in return for military service was prominent in discussions of oil men when it was reported that Socony-Vacuum Oil Company and Texas corporation had completed details for purchasing the concession from the Gulf Oil corporation. Value of the concession was placed in some quarters at 15 million dollars.

To well informed financial men the "Barco concession" signified only a South American oil property involved in a current deal. Oil men, however, saw a greater significance in the transaction. It was said French interests had been quietly dickering for the concession for more than a year, and on this score some were quick to

APRIL FINANCING LARGEST SINCE OCTOBER, 1929

Several New Issues Due This Week.

Financing during April reached the largest volume for any month since historic October, 1929, when the stock market crash began, according to a compilation announced yesterday by the New York Journal of Commerce.

The total for April at $915,300,000 compared with $980,000,000 in October of 1929, and the previous recovery peak of $534,000,000 set in July of last year. Last month's volume also compared with $460,000,000 in March and $455,000,000 in April of last year.

For the first four months of 1936 financing has totaled $1,970,000,000, compared with $879,000,000 in the corresponding period of last year.

New Issues This Week.

Among the securities scheduled for public offering this week upon completion of the twenty day period since registration with the Securities Exchange commission are $20,000,000 in bonds, $10,000,000 in debentures, and an undetermined number of $15 par common shares for conversion of debentures by Oklahoma Natural Gas company.

The bonds will be first mortgage, series A, with an interest rate of 4½ per cent, and will be due May 1, 1951. The convertible debentures will mature May 1, 1946.

Net proceeds from the sale of the bonds and de[illegible]ures will be used to retire first mortgage 6 per cent gold bonds, 5 per cent first mortgage gold bonds, general mortgage extended 5 per cent bonds, 5 per cent serial notes, and other note[illegible].

Stone & Webster and Blodget, Inc., New [illegible] City, is the [illegible] underwriter.

Stock Issues Offered.

Among other offerings expected this week is an issue of 13,000 shares of H. A. Montgomery company $5 par value common stock. The company is located at Detroit and manufactures chemicals such as cleaning compounds, anti-rust oils, and other crude oil products. Link, Gorman & Co., Inc., Chicago, is expected to offer the stock at $9.50 a share.

Scott Paper company plans to issue 31,669 shares of no par common stock and 253,357 warrants entitling the holder to purchase one-eighth share of common. Proceeds from the sale will be used to retire the company's outstanding 7 per cent preferred.

Other New Securities.

Pickford-Lasky Productions, Inc., Hollywood, Cal., headed by Jesse L. Lasky and Mary Pickford, will be qualified to offer 20,000 shares of no par preferred and 12,750 shares of no par common. The preferred is to be offered publicly at $100 a share and the common will be offered to purchasers of the preferred at $1 a share on the basis of one share for each four shares purchased. Proceeds will be used for liquidation of current loans and to provide working capital.

General Capital corporation plans to issue 300,000 shares of no par capital stock and [illegible] Imports, Inc., will be qualified to issue 300,000 shares of $1 par class A common.

MORE CLOSED BANK PAYMENTS ARE EXPECTED

Three more closed Cook county state banks may soon make 5 per cent repayments to depositors, according to a report on 10 closed banks issued last night by State Auditor Edward J. Barrett. These banks are the Marquette Park State bank, Melrose Park state bank, and the Morgan Park Trust and Savings bank.

The report said that 5 per cent repayments were made last quarter by the Marshall Square State bank, Maywood State bank, and the Mid-West State bank.

Detailed analyses of sixty closed banks with the best available estimates of ultimate repayments to depositors are published today in the Metropolitan section of THE TRIBUNE.

PROFITS TAKEN ... in MARCH!

A January Forecast of the April Top and Decline

"A FURTHER advance becomes the logical expectation... Frequently a rise of approximately 10% can be expected after an Intermediate confirmation. From 148.44, the previous Industrial top, this would mean a rise to approximately 163 ... (The market subsequently rose to 163.07!)...The eventual Intermediate corrective decline should cancel one-third to two-thirds of the advance since March. If, for instance, the Industrials should rise 10% further—equivalent to slightly over 160—this would mean a subsequent decline of 20 to 40 points, or roughly back to between the 120 to 140 levels"

STOCKS DROOP; TRADING ALMOST AT STANDSTILL

Late Buying Flurry Cuts Earlier Losses.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, May 2.—Scattered week-end selling gave the stock market a rather droopy appearance in today's dealings. Business was extremely light, the market coming about as near to a standstill as it has at any time since Jan. 29, 1935. Turnover was around 400,000 shares.

A few of the more volatile issues sagged as much as 3 points at their worst. Losses in the main list, however, held within a point for the most part and final figures were a little better than the lows of the day, partly due to a flurry of precautionary covering just before the end.

More than the usual number of bid and asked quotations were printed on the ticker and the breadth of the spreads in most cases fitted into the general picture of trading activity.

News Has Little Influence.

What little news the wires brought in was not calculated to change the general market picture either way. Traders seemed satisfied with the majority of first quarter statements, as well as with reports of activity in heavy industries and retail lines. Brokers believed the prospects of further victories for the leftists in tomorrow's run-off elections in France might have influenced some selling here and there.

Board room comment also showed considerable interest in Monday's Supreme court session, which may bring forward a ruling on the Guffey coal case. A ruling against the government would provide a stimulating effect on market sentiment, brokers believe.

The market opened today in an uncertain mood, but selling orders began to gain the upper hand after the first few minutes and dribbling sales continued to bear the list gently downward for the better part of the two hours.

Case Breaks 3 Points.

One of the outstanding early weak spots was J. I. Case, which tumbled more than 3 points, about half of which was later recovered. American Telephone also found the sledding difficult, due partly to agitation for rate cuts growing out of the Washington investigation of the corporation's affairs.

In the motor division Chrysler dropped more than a point but snapped back to within a shade of its previous closing price. General Motors swung in about the same arc in spite of popular anticipation of a dollar dividend to be declared at Monday's board meeting.

Railroad shares eased with the rest of the list in spite of the sharp rise in car loadings figures.

Oils fared a little better than most divisions, Standard of Indiana breasting the tide for a net gain of a point. Steel, merchandising and utility issues were generally on the defensive. Some of the mining stocks looked up a bit.

point to war threats distressing Europe. Premier Clemenceau, they recalled, in an appeal to Woodrow Wilson in the third year of the world war, stressed the importance of oil in naval and military operations.

The history of the much desired oil concession dates back to the start of the century when Colombia was riddled with civil war. Leading the government's army Gen. Barco crushed the rebels and in recognition of his services the Colombian government in 1905 awarded him 1,250,000 acres of jungle.

Barco, although unable to command enough capital to develop the territory was keenly aware of its value. In 1916 he disposed of the property to American and British interests, who once in possession found themselves confronted with a problem which is still a sore thumb—transportation.

The terrain, rough and tangled with jungle growth, offers severe obstacles to hauling development materials which have to pass through Lake Maracaibo and along rivers. The Venezuelan government has granted permission for the movement of materials inland through the lake, but a stumbling block has been encountered in the contract with Colombia which stipulated that oil should move out solely through its territory.

Oil experts say the logical outlet is through Venezuela. To send it through Colombia calls for construction of a 250 mile pipe line over a mountain of 4,000 feet altitude.

U. S. Financing.

Business, expecting stimulus from payment of the veteran's bonus, has known it will foot the bill in increased taxes. Last week Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau explained just how this will be accomplished.

Weekly borrowings by the government on short term bills will be increased from 50 million to 100 million dollars. The veterans will receive their "baby" bonds in lieu of their adjusted service certificates during the last two weeks in June. The bonds are cashable on demand and Morgenthau estimated that if all were cashed the drain on the treasury would amount to approximately 2 billion dollars.

Instead of the bills carrying a 9 month maturity, as they have in the past, the new offerings will all mature Dec. 15, which some observers believe means a major financing operation.

New Deal.

The New Deal took another step in its attack on "bigness" when the senate on Thursday passed, with only perfunctory debate, the drastic Robinson-Patman anti-chain store bill. The fundamental purpose of the bill is to curtail the activity of chain stores by prohibiting quantity discounts to large scale buyers. It is sponsored by independent grocery and drug retailers and wholesalers in the belief that it will end real and imagined grievances against the chains, but is so broad in scope that if enacted it might change the sales practices of almost all lines of business.

Opponents of the bill declare that the two greatest evils of chain store operation which the bill seeks to eliminate—secret brokerage, by which a chain store man poses as a middleman, and the club of volume sales to force down prices paid manufacturers—could be eliminated if published prices were posted by manufacturers. Secrecy would thus be removed.

As legislative consideration of the matter advanced, more and more arbitrary curbs on price differences were proposed until in its present form the Robinson-Patman bill is likely, according to its opponents, to stifle legitimate competition in merchandising, freeze retail prices, and channelize distribution.

ECONOMIST HITS SPENDING AS AID OF PROSPERITY

Tax Bill Is Denounced by Yale Professor.

Washington, D. C., May 2.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt's theory that the road to prosperity is spending, not saving, was denounced as "fallacious and pernicious" by Fred Rogers Fairchild, Yale professor of political economy, at the senate finance committee's hearing on the New Deal tax reform bill today.

Prof. Fairchild, who appeared as the spokesman for the Manufacturers' Association of Connecticut, was one of half a dozen representatives of American business and industry who attacked the so-called 800 million dollar tax measure. This professor, who denied in response to questioning that he had ever been a member of the brain trust, said it was imprudent to consider any revenue measure except in connection with efforts to balance the budget and termed the pending bill unsound and unjust.

Makes Attack on Theory.

"One theory rather widely held in America today is that we have had too much saving and too little spending, that in consequence productive capacity has outgrown consuming power and so caused industrial depression, and that the way to recovery involves discouragement of saving and encouragement of spending," Prof. Fairchild declared.

"Those who hold this theory may look with favor upon the pending bill as tending to force a larger distribution of earnings of industry into the hands of the stockholders, who, it may be presumed, will be inclined to spend at least some of the resultant dividends representing funds which would otherwise be saved and reinvested in the corporation.

"That this would be the consequence of this bill, I think, is true. That economic recovery would thereby be promoted is, on the other hand, precisely contrary to the truth.

Sees Threat to Recovery.

"Economic depression is not brought about by too much saving. Economic recovery will be retarded, not hastened, by any measures at this time which tend to check saving and investment, especially in the products of the so-called heavy industries."

Prof. Fairchild said the existing policy of deficit financing was "unsound and fraught with great danger" to the future of the nation. The present bill, he declared, indicates no intention of balancing the budget, even if the estimates of its yield in revenue should prove to be correct.

"The people would have the increased load of taxation and they would still have the deficit, both imposing heavy drags on economic recovery."

Replies to Connally.

Senator Tom Connally [Dem., Tex.] remarked sarcastically that if the professor could tell members of congress how to balance the budget without increasing taxes they would be glad to enact such a plan. Prof. Fairchild replied that such balancing would require attention to expenditures, which he said could be greatly reduced.

The witness declared that the pending bill instead of accomplishing President Roosevelt's asserted purpose of removing inequities and inequalities between corporations and partnerships, large shareholders and small shareholders, would create greater inequalities.

"Whatever it might accomplish along this line would be entirely overshadowed by the unfortunate consequences which would follow from the discriminatory tax upon undistributed earnings," he said.

In general, Prof. Fairchild added, the consequences of the bill would be less harmful in the case of the large and prosperous corporation than that of the small, young and struggling concern. He emphasized the importance of "plowing back" into the business a substantial part of current earnings.

Chicagoan Makes Protest.

John W. O'Leary of Chicago, president of the Machinery and Allied Products institute, also told the committee that the bill would strike at new and small corporations.

"New corporations normally evolving out of small businesses will find it impossible to gain a foothold under the proposed tax measure," he declared. "New patents will be sold to old corporations, and the field covered by the big companies will grow broader than ever before, which is in direct opposition to the American principle of free competition and the encouragement of individual enterprise."

Mr. O'Leary also maintained that the bill would play havoc with the capital goods industries, and, over a period of years, tend to substitute federal financing and control for private enterprise due to its weakening effect upon corporations.

"Scores of capital goods manufacturers who are weathering the depression, which is still severe in their business, on reserves set aside during more prosperous years, would have been forced into bankruptcy had this measure been in effect in the past," he declared. "We can ill afford to experiment with further barriers and retardants, which place a penalty upon thrift and sound management, build upon shifting sands and leave our major problems for future advertence."

Harold Eckhart to Head Trust Officers' Group

Harold Eckhart, vice president of the Harris Trust and Savings bank, has been elected president of the Capital Corporation Fiduciaries association, an organization of trust officers of Chicago financial institutions, it was announced yesterday. Chester Davis, vice president of the Chicago Title and Trust company, has been elected vice president and L. L. McArthur, vice president of the Northern Trust, has been named secretary and treasurer.

Federal Revenues Rise in April But Deficit Nears 3 Billions

Washington, D. C., May 2.—(AP)—The treasury wound up the month of April with receipts still on the increase, but with a deficit growing toward $3,000,000,000.

It had collected during the first ten months of the fiscal year total revenues of $3,330,624,850, as compared with $3,090,000,000 in the same period last year, had spent $5,967,997,515 as compared with $5,859,078,116, while the excess of expenditures totaled $2,637,372,665, against $2,768,461,126 last year.

Expect 6 Billions Deficit.

With but two months of the fiscal year remaining, the deficit, under latest estimates by Secretary Morgenthau, which presuppose charging up the cost of the bonus in that time, is scheduled to grow to $5,966,600,000, before the year's final figures are written on June 30.

The year's expenditures thus far consisted of $3,223,809,652 of "general" disbursements and $5,967,997,515 in the category of "recovery and relief." For the same period last year "general expenditures" were $2,974,600,649 and "recovery and relief" outlays totaled $5,859,078,116. The increase in "general" expenditures was due in part at least to the transfer of some items—notably farm benefits—from the recovery category to the "general" classification.

April Receipts 230 Millions.

For the month of April receipts totaled $230,645,011 as compared with $227,856,758 in April, 1935. Expenditures aggregated $630,887,166 against $796,618,915 in March last year. The deficit for the month was $400,242,154 for April 1936, and $568,762,156 for April, 1935.

The month saw the treasury borrow $279,074,176 and retire the same amount of federal securities. The treasury closed the month with $2,441,970,519 of cash on hand, or $424,153,878 less than when the month began.

WISCONSIN TAX ON PHONE LINES SETS NEW MARK

Madison, Wis., May 2.—[Special.]—The Wisconsin Telephone company, which is engaged in a contest with the state utility commission over a cut of nearly $1,000,000 a year in service rates, paid into the state treasury today the largest sum on record under the state income tax. The payment was $1,605,515, and covered the income tax assessed against the company for the years 1929-1935, and also the tax on nonoperating income for the years 1923-1931.

The receipt of the check closed a six year contest over taxes. Brought under the state income tax law in 1929, the company had contended that it could not separate its interstate income from its intrastate income and that the levy of the state tax was a violation of its constitutional rights.

Today's check included $850,580 in taxes for 1929 and 1930 under litigation before the state tax commission. That was made the basis for settlement of the taxes for the other years. In the tax is included interest and $229,181 under the teachers' retirement fund surtax.

AMERICAN CAR & FOUNDRY SUED FOR ACCOUNTING

Wilmington, Del., May 2.—(AP)—A suit was filed today in the United States District court asking the court to separate the corporate relationship of the American Car and Foundry company, The American Car and Foundry Securities corporation, the Brill corporation, and the J. G. Brill company.

The bill, filed by W. Richard Brill and G. Martin Brill, also asked appointment of a receiver for the Brill concerns to continue them in business independent of the other companies.

The suit asked the court for an accounting of profits alleged to have been withheld from the Brill companies, and a return of assets it contended were illegally transferred from the Brill companies.

The petitioner charged violation of the anti-trust laws and domination of the Brill companies by American Car and Foundry.

Alton Officials Silent on Meeting New Train Speed

Officials of the Alton railroad declined to comment yesterday on reports that the road will match the running time of 4 hours 55 minutes which the Illinois Central railroad is considering for its Green Diamond, when the streamliner goes into service May 17 between Chicago and St. Louis. H. B. Voorhees, vice president, could not be reached, but a spokesman asserted officials had nothing to say at present.

New Process to Utilize Pulp Waste for Fuel

V. D. Simons, Chicago industrial engineer, said yesterday that he has developed a means of utilizing as fuel the "black liquor" byproduct of the paper pulp manufacturing process. The development, he believes, will bring about a big economy in paper production by eliminating the present need for fuels and purchased energy. Power will be generated within the mill under the new process.

COMMODITY PRICES DECLINE; WEAKNESS IN STOCKS A FACTOR

Prices declined last week in the principal commodity markets. Crop news was a dominant influence in the grain market, but the losses extended to nearly all markets. The weakness in the stock market appeared to be an influence in the general selling encountered by commodities. In the rubber market the increase announced in the export quotas brought a decline in price. Cotton, hides, lard, and hogs closed the week with moderate losses.

The following table shows yesterday's closing prices on a representative list of commodities as compared with quotations prevailing a week earlier and the high and low figures for the season:

COTTON CLOSES LOWER WHEN TEXAS GETS RAIN

Better cables than expected from Liverpool and short covering and trade buying in the old crop futures resulted in a small advance in the cotton market early yesterday. However, reports of good rains in parts of Oklahoma, which had been suffering from dry weather of late, led to increased pressure later and the close in leading markets was at losses of 2 to 8 points on the active futures except at New York where the May was unchanged. [A point is equal to 1-100 cent.] Spot cotton closed unchanged with New Orleans and Houston, 11.40 cents; Galveston, 11.35 cents and New York at 11.60 cents per pound. Prices follow:

RAISERS OF HOGS GET MORE SINCE ENDING OF AAA

Sell Fewer Swine, Receive Larger Total Return.

The readjustments of live stock and meat markets, which have been in progress since the death of the agricultural adjustment act and its processing tax on hogs early in January, continue to favor hog raisers.

During April growers received $1,085,000 more for 9,729 fewer hogs marketed at Chicago than in the same month last year, while cattle men were paid $1,198,000 less for 9,010 more animals and sheep men obtained $97,000 less for 108,046 fewer lambs. These figures do not include the processing taxes on hogs collected by the government a year ago, which amounted to more than $1,000,000 in April, 1935.

Cattle Receipts Increase.

Cattle receipts for April showed an increase of 4.6 per cent, but money returns were down 9 per cent. Hog receipts were down 3.5 per cent and lowest for April since 1883, but returns to farmers increased 18.3 per cent. Sheep receipts were down 33.5 per cent and money 4.4 per cent lower than a year ago.

There has been a steady decline in the markets for beef and cattle since the processing tax was removed from the pork industry. This is attributed partly to the swinging of some beef demand over to pork, as well as to the growing imports since the duty on foreign beef cattle was lowered on Jan. 1, 1936.

Steer Prices Average Lower.

The April steer average at $8.45 per hundred pounds compared with $9.35 in January and with $11.05 a year ago, and top steers last month sold at $11 compared with $15 in January and $15.85 in April, 1935.

Of the total money paid out by packers for meat animals at Chicago in April 57 per cent went for cattle and calves, and 33 per cent for hogs. A year ago cattle men got 62 per cent and hog men 27 per cent. Aggregate returns were $21,135,000, compared with $21,345,000 a year ago and $16,324,000 two years ago.

SHARP CHANGES IN LIVE STOCK FEATURE WEEK

Lambs Soar, Then Lose Part of Advance.

Sharp price changes occurred in live stock and meat last week, with the rise and fall of the lamb market the feature. Live costs of lambs at the Chicago stockyards soared 90 cents to $1.10 in three days, but a severe break followed an influx of stock attracted by the phenomenal rise, and final quotations were only 25 to 35 cents higher than a week ago.

At the high point in midweek, farmers obtained $12.85 for the best wool lambs, the highest price since June, 1930, and freshly shorn stock sold up to $10.90, highest since May, 1929, for stock without fleece. At the close top grades of wool stock fetched $12.10 and shorn, $10.

Lamb Meat Rises Sharply.

Cuts of lamb meat advanced sharply in wholesale channels and in butcher shops. Lamb loins brought $26 to $28, a rise of $2 to $3, and saddles advanced $1 to $2, to $24 to $25. Hotel racks soared $4 to $5 in a few days and stewing lamb sold $3 over a week ago, packers reported. This rise carried lamb meat to the highest level in six years and relatively above all other meats.

Beef cuts closed steady to $1 lower than a week ago and fresh pork declined 50 cents to $2.

Packers bought cattle at new 17 months' lows, the steer average at $8.25 being lowest since December, 1934, and $3.15 under a year ago. Receipts at the yards were heaviest since early in January, the six day total at 44,100 being larger than for the same weeks in 1935 and 1934.

Hogs Drop on Big Supply.

Hog receipts last week were heaviest in almost three months and average prices were the lowest since middle of March. The break in the market was uneven, young new crop stock under 200 pounds being scarce and off only 24 to 40 cents, while others closed 50 to 65 cents lower, the sharpest reductions being in heavy butchers over 300 pounds. Most sows were off 30 to 45 cents. The average at $10.25 showed a decline of 40 cents.

Practically all live stock received yesterday was billed directly to packers. The trade carried a nominal list of quotations in all classes.

WHEAT RECEDES ON RAINS OVER PARTS OF BELT

Additional Precipitation Forecast for This Week.

Wheat prices dropped about 1 cent early yesterday to a new low level for the week as the result of heavy rains over the eastern part of Oklahoma and Kansas, and a forecast for considerable precipitation this week over the greater part of the winter and spring grain areas.

Week-end evening up operations resulted in part of the early decline being recovered, but final trades were at net losses of around ½ cent on the Chicago Board of Trade, with the May delivery at 97⅝ cents per bushel, or 11⅜ cents premium over the July option.

Winnipeg wheat futures developed independent weakness and with scattered liquidation under way all deliveries sold at new lows for the season, the close being ½ to ¾ cent lower. There was a noticeable lack of support on the way down.

Outside Markets Lower.

Minneapolis lost a cent in sympathy with Winnipeg, with the May option at a premium of 22⅜ cents over the same future in the Canadian market. Kansas City lost a major fraction.

Heavy rains fell over a considerable part of the winter wheat belt but were confined largely to the sections which have received ample moisture during the last few days. The western parts of Oklahoma, Kansas, and the Texas panhandle reported no rain. With spring wheat seeding completed in southern Minnesota the heavy precipitation in that section was regarded as highly beneficial.

Uncertainty regarding developments over the week-end, especially in Europe, was said to have been largely responsible for the rally in wheat toward the last. The trade is looking for a fairly large reduction in the domestic visible supply in Monday's statement.

Prices on July Futures.

Closing trades on the July delivery of leading grains, with comparisons, follow:

	Yesterday.	Friday.	Wk. ago.
Wheat	$0.86¼	$0.86⅝	$0.94⅛
Corn	.60⅞	.61⅞	.62
Oats	.26	.26	.27½
Rye	.50½	.50⅝	.52⅞

Corn eased on scattered selling and closed about ½ cent lower despite continued limited country offerings of cash grain to arrive and the prospect that local stocks would show a material reduction during the last week. Heavy rains over part of the main corn belt are expected to result in curtailing field work for several days.

Field Work Later than Usual.

Despite favorable weather for field work recently, the season is later than usual, according to a report by Nat C. Murray, the Clement, Curtis & Co. statistician. In Minnesota and North Dakota the season is 10 days late, and in South Dakota nine days; while in Nebraska, Kansas, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, and Ohio it ranges from one to seven days late. The average for the country is 8.2 days later than normal and only twice in the last eleven years has the season been later than this year.

Little net change was shown in oats, rye, and barley prices yesterday, with oats rallying after an early decline. July and September rye sold at new lows for the season.

New York, May 2.—[Special.]—The bond market was extremely dull today, prices drifting aimlessly within narrow limits on the smallest turnover for a two hour period since Aug. 31, 1935. Total transactions amounted to only $3,630,000, compared with $4,731,000 last Saturday. Trading in United States government loans was virtually at a standstill at times. Sales were only $270,300, against a turnover of $646,400 a week ago.

Dealings in domestic corporation bonds was without feature, even the more volatile issues attracting little trading interest as prices held, for the most part, within fractional limits.

Undertone of Market Firm.

The undertone was firm with many of the secondary railroad liens responding to a fair demand with fractional gains. The market for the more speculative industrial loans was dull with price movements mixed.

A sharp rally in Polish government obligations on a few sales featured otherwise quiet trading and mixed trends in the market for foreign dollar bonds. The Polish issues rose 2 to 6 points. Their strength was attributed to short covering after an oversold condition had developed following the currency restrictions decreed by the Polish government early in the week.

Joint Stock Land Issue Drops.

Dealers in joint stock land bank bonds were taken somewhat by surprise today by the break of 23 points in the 5 per cent issue of the Oregon-Washington bank following receipt of information that a receiver had been appointed as a result of the default on the bonds. The bonds were quoted today at 72 bid, 77 asked.

U. S. governments ranged 3-32ds higher for treasury 3¼s of 1944 to 7-32ds lower for the 3⅜s of 1943. Indirect obligations were the most active, but changes were extremely small in all issues except Home Owners Loan 2¾s, which dropped 5-32ds on a single sale.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

[Copyright: 1936: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Inflation II.

To define in practical terms the problem of the investor facing a period of inflation one may profitably review the record of previous inflation periods.

Col. Leonard P. Ayres, vice president and economist of the Cleveland Trust company, in reviewing the record, concludes: "One of the clearest of the lessons to be derived from the European experiences with inflation is that there is no good hedge against it."

Ayres made a study of the trend of stock prices in relation to living costs in the United States, France and Germany during periods of commodity price inflation.

"During the war and just after," Ayres says, "we had in this country a real commodity price inflation during which wholesale prices rose by 1920 to about a level 250 per cent as high as that prevailing when the war began."

Ayres found that stock prices in the United States declined in terms of the cost of living during the period of inflation of commodity prices. Using indices of stock prices and living costs, with the 1914 averages as 100, Ayres traces the movement of stocks in terms of living costs. The index fell sharply in 1917 from 100 to about 65. From then on the trend was down until 1920, when the index touched a level of approximately 50.

The results in Germany and France in the war and post-war inflation periods follow closely the experiences in this country.

In France the index of stock prices in terms of living costs fluctuated around the 50 level from 1919 through 1926. Similar computations for Germany show that the person hedging in stocks had an even unhappier experience. The index fell to 10 in 1922 and was at 35 late in 1923 when Germany's money finally became worthless.

What actually happened, Ayres points out, was that stock prices did not advance nearly so rapidly as the cost of living.

"Clearly the purchase of common stocks," he says, "did not afford a good hedge against price inflation in this country at that time, for the primary purpose in buying stocks in such a period is to seek protection against the advances in the cost of living."

Notwithstanding the impressive evidence presented by Ayres, the fact remains that common stocks do mount considerably on an inflation movement. That they do not, as Ayres shows, fully protect the holder against inflated living costs does not mean that they do not afford some hedge. As was pointed out in a preceding article, the problem of the investor is to put himself in a position in which inflation will do him the least harm. With the best available hedges he still will suffer from inflation.

WAR MATERIAL SUPPLY OF ITALY REPORTED LARGE

Accounts for Recent Big Cut in Imports.

Washington, D. C., May 2.—(AP)—Official advices to the commerce department today revealed that far from suffering a shortage of essential wartime materials due to sanctions and other trade restrictions, Italy had, in fact, built a big surplus accumulation of such stocks.

This factor was cited as the principal cause of a recent decrease in the quantities of such materials imported by that government to support its war in Ethiopia. American exports to Italy for March were nearly a million dollars less than in the same month last year.

Oil Stocks Are Large.

"The principal change in the Italian situation during March," the department said, "was the slackening of the importation of essential war materials, notably petroleum products, due to the accumulation of heavy stocks in earlier months. Petroleum storage capacity is reported to be well filled with increased capacity under construction.

"Industries are fairly well sustained and official attention is being devoted to the development of new substitute materials to take the place of imported products."

The decrease in Italian buying abroad has not been accompanied by any lessening of the rigid governmental control of foreign exchange. Faced at the outset of hostilities in Ethiopia with the necessity of making large purchases abroad the government commandeered all foreign credits by Italians.

Unable to Pay Agents.

Italian exporters were still reported unable in numerous instances to pay commissions due their foreign agents because they could not obtain the necessary governmental consent to use for that purpose any part of the foreign exchange acquired by their shipments to other countries.

The commerce department said military supply industries, "though operating on full schedules, are less feverishly active than in the closing months of 1935."

Unemployment "is growing in textiles, except in the rayon industry, and in the building and construction trades; in many businesses employés are working on a staggered plan for a certain number of days a week in order to spread the available jobs," it said.

Deliveries of 750,000 pounds of lard and 30,000 pounds of bellies were made on May contracts. Packing interests were bidding for clear bellies [salt pork] with the close unchanged to 10 cents higher. Cash lard closed at $10.95; loose, $10.35; leaf, $10.37½, and clear bellies at $14.00 per 100 pounds. Prices in dollars per 100 pounds follow:

BUTTER AND EGG FUTURES ADVANCE TO NEW HIGHS

Butter and egg futures advanced to new high levels for the season on the Mercantile exchange yesterday. November butter gained ¼ cent and closed at 27 cents per pound, while October eggs were up ¼ cent, with the close at 23 cents per dozen. Sales of butter futures were 15 cars and eggs 59 cars.

An active demand for spot butter and eggs and a steady undertone in the cash market had some effect on futures. There was further moderate buying of butter by the government. Since April 22 purchases in the local market have aggregated 985,000 pounds, or 13.5 per cent of the total receipts. It was reported yesterday the government had asked for bids on 3,000,000 pounds of butter for relief purposes, with the business to be confined to 11 western states. Prices follow:

"I'm sorry I waited so long to get a good late-model car!"

"The price was remarkably low for a car of its model and condition."

MILTON T. FOWLE, 2446 Smalley Court, tells how Tribune want ads helped him solve his transportation problem

"I AM the head of a concern which packs box lunches and delivers them to factories within a radius of 35 miles of Chicago. Our cars have to reach their destinations promptly or the load is a total loss. We use a fleet of 32 cars, each of which runs about 20,000 miles a year.

A Close Call

"The car I was driving was one of the worst in the whole outfit. It was six years old and had gone close to 80,000 miles. I had had several breakdowns with it. One day, when I had to shift the entire load to a taxi to make a delivery on time, I decided to look in the Tribune to find a more reliable, late model car.

"As the amount of money I had to spend was limited, I had to find a big bargain. I read the Tribune and in a couple of days I saw a 1935 de luxe Ford touring sedan advertised by Larry Burns, 2107 Irving Park Blvd.

"I went over to their show rooms and J. C. Monaghan, used car salesman, showed me the car and demonstrated it. The price was remarkably low for a car of its year and condition. They made me a fair allowance on the old car and we called it a deal.

Sorry He Waited!

"I have been driving the new car every day for some time now, and it runs fine. I am sorry I waited so long to get a good, late-model used car."

COMPASSION IS GUIDE AND RULE IN BABY CENTER

A Healthy Child Is Doctor's Reward.

(This is the second and final article on the work of the Chicago Maternity center, the first having appeared last Sunday.)

BY DORIS LOCKERMAN.

There is a word that explains the success of the Chicago Maternity center, Maxwell street's famed dispensary, over and above its deft care and thorough training. The word is compassion.

In a sense, these young doctors who have made Chicago's tenement mothers safer by six times than child-bearing women the nation over are idealists. Their job is to face fundamentals, it is true, and the realities they encounter are harsh. But they believe that the women in any society face their babies' birth with the same fear and joy in motherhood, and they exclude no color or creed.

That motto of theirs, "A healthy child and a happy mother," is not an idle one. They live by it.

Must Live for Baby.

A woman, struggling in labor, mumbles: "Doctor, I have to live for my baby." Children whimper softly because "Mom is awful sick. Fathers who cannot be providers stand by, mute and strained, or timidly thrust out a hand to grasp the doctor's own.

These things happen, and center people see them. When a poor father smiles they know it as happiness. When the next call comes from another father, they remember.

The infant mortality rate at the center is 3 per cent. That figure is uncorrected, which is to say that in it are included all those babies born after seven months' development, whether they are syphilitic, victims of toxemia, or stillborn. The uncorrected rate throughout the United States is 6 per cent.

Saving Life Their Job.

It cannot be said, these doctors are convinced, that the great number of indigent families scattered throughout Chicago represents in every case the lower classes. But if that were true the center personnel does not question their right to propagate their kind. The sociological question is an entirely separate concern.

These doctors are called day and night to answer birth alarms where there is no food for the children already born. The fact that they are called indicates that the family's budget cannot stand added responsibility. But it is not for them to argue whether life is needed. It is on its way, and their aim is to see that these children of the poor get a fair start, uninjured and well.

Records at the center are jammed with stories that have had a happy ending because of the sympathetic judgment of these young doctors. Take, for instance, the case of Arthur and Beryl, one of the multitudinous couples making up Chicago's poor. Arthur was 21 and his wife 18. They lived far out on the western edge of the city in a little clapboard shack. Just an ordinary shack, you'd say. But to the center people, who read signs intuitively, here was romance and happiness—and danger.

Wait for Normal Birth.

The details are one with all births, except that the little wife's labor was long drawn out, and the baby's heart tones grew weaker and weaker. There was the precise question of operating, here in this inadequate little room, bringing a baby that might not live, and permanently scarring the organs of the young mother, or watching every indication to allow a normal birth.

Everything was set for an emergency—but they waited, and here was an example of the experience and patience of these doctors. The baby was born normally. It lived and the mother lived.

Not all the cases on the center lists are as wholesome as this. There was the pasty-faced unmarried Helen, already in the first stages of labor when she was reported to the dispensary by the police. Helen cursed her way through delivery, her drugged nerves impervious to anesthesia. She was 29 years old, a narcotic addict and a prostitute.

Tragedy of Motherhood.

Her thin, wizened baby was a yellowed addict at birth, its cells having been fed with morphine during its development. It was sent to the Sarah Morris station for premature babies, then at A Century of Progress, for a short time. And when thirteen days after her confinement, Helen went to the Bridewell hospital for a narcotic cure, her baby, with no place else to go, went with her—to jail.

In spite of the center's enviable leadership of all birth statistics, Dr. Beatrice Tucker and her corps of doctors and nurses are not satisfied with their record—not entirely. Of the 16 women who have died in the center's history, there were four who died of tuberculosis. Such deaths would be discounted elsewhere, but not at the center. The mother died, and there was a reason.

If—and here is the question of money again—there had been money for X-ray, these women, early in pregnancy could have been given the

Badminton, the nineteenth century sport recently revived, has found favor with this group of students from the Faulkner School for Girls, photographed on the courts of the Shoreland hotel, 5454 South Shore drive. Sandy, the dog, is probably the only canine shuttlecock retriever in existence, according to his mistress, Miss Jane Weary (kneeling). Others in the group (from left to right) are Miss Kay Griffin, Miss Bee Wood, and Miss Janice Roberts. They are members of the student committee of the Faulkner school which is selling tickets to the Alec Templeton piano recital, to be held next Sunday at Mandel hall. Proceeds will go to the school scholarship fund.

ENGLEWOOD RED CROSS EXHIBIT TO SHOW ACTIVITIES

Junior Division to Open Display Tomorrow.

Local Red Cross activity will be depicted in the exhibit the junior division of the Englewood unit will sponsor this week at Wieboldt's store, 63d and Green streets. Opening tomorrow, the exhibit will continue through Saturday under the direction of Miss Isabelle Thomson, chairman of the division, and Miss Wynogene H. Fargher.

The downtown staf is coöperating with the local unit in preparing the display and an important part of the show will be a first aid demonstration, given by an instructor. The Braille method of transcribing books for the blind will be exhibited by Mrs. William E. Gimbel and Mrs. Nora Dineen.

A Red Cross sick room will be set up in miniature to show the best methods of caring for a patient. Inexpensive sick room equipment, such as a wheel chair made from a kitchen chair, will be included.

A fourth display unit will be a demonstration of home hygiene and nursing. The production department of the Chicago chapter will show how high school pupils and others are taught to make dresses, layettes, and other items of wearing apparel for Red Cross use.

Included will be clothing made by Englewood High school pupils, members of the Park Manor Woman's club, the Englewood Presbyterian church, Englewood Baptist church, Emerald Avenue Presbyterian church, Park Manor Congregational church, and the Daughters of the British Empire.

VICTORY IN PLEA FOR BUS STOP WON BY TOWN OF LAKE

Parade Will Celebrate Achievement Sunday.

A ribbon cutting ceremony and parade next Sunday afternoon will celebrate the successful completion of the Town of Lake Chamber of Commerce campaign to obtain a station on the Joliet bus line for the community.

The victory ends a 25 year transportation battle, begun when the association attempted to get the old Chicago and Joliet interurban to stop its car in the district.

Mayor Kelly has been invited to participate in the ribbon cutting ceremony, which will be held at 47th street and Ashland avenue at 2 o'clock. Afterward the officials will enter a special bus and join the parade forming on Ashland avenue.

The line of march will be south to Garfield boulevard, west to Damen, and north to 47th, thence to the starting point. Three drum and bugle crops, those of the Commonwealth Edison, the Zintak, and the Stockyards posts of the American Legion will lead the procession.

Local civic organizations will march and the merchants will be represented in the parade by floats. R. J. Auge is general chairman of the celebration committee, Peter Klug is parade marshal, P. O. Peemueller Jr., master of ceremony, and Irving Fenzau, official host.

The officers of the association are: Stephen Witmaski, president; Mr. Iglow, vice president; Mr. Klug, second vice persident; Harry Wiste, third vice president; Mr. Auge, secretary; F. M. Covert, treasurer, and A. B. Mazurk, advocate.

$145,000 Structure to House 450 Pupils.

Work is scheduled to start immediately on the construction of a new 10 room, $145,000 school building at 54th street and Oak Park avenue, James B. McCahey, president of the board of education, announced last week. The financing of the construction is made possible by a $2,000,000 PWA loan and grant to the school board last year. Financed by the loan and grant, 13 new schools and school building additions are now under construction.

The new southwest side school, in a neighborhood that is badly in need of such a building, will replace 12 portables and accommodate 450 pupils. The building will consist of 10 classrooms, a kindergarten, a principal's office and other special facilities.

It is designed by John C. Christensen, school board architect, to conform to the board's program of erecting small school buildings to which later additions can be made.

Pupils who will attend the new building, when it is scheduled to open in September, are now attending branch No. 2 of the Mark Twain elementary school.

Mr. McCahey has indicated for some time that along with his hope to house all Chicago pupils in modern buildings has been the desire to provide a modern school building for the neighborhood around 54th street and Oak Park avenue.

As a part of the present building program the school board is eliminating 76 portables from use and providing properly constructed school buildings for approximately 3,500 children.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

THIS week seems like Youth week to Our Town. From colleges and schools throughout the country a flood of letters telling of the honors heaped upon Our Town's sons and daughters has been pouring in to this desk. It's no surprise, however, because on the campus and in the classrooms Our Towners have a way of walking off with the highest awards.

ANDREW WHITEFORD.

At Beloit college, Beloit, Wis., for example, students have voted Andrew Whiteford, 9004 Throop street, the most popular man on the campus. Last week he was installed as vice president of his fraternity, Beta Theta Pi, and last year he won first prize in the Frank G. Logan essay contest, an all expenses paid trip with the Beloit archæological expedition to the southwest.

From Eureka college, Eureka, Ill., comes word that Miss Virginia Penrod, 8121 Merrill avenue, has been elected secretary treasurer of the junior class for next year. Miss Penrod, now a sophomore, is a member of Phi Omega sorority.

THREE south siders have been elected to associate membership in Sigma Xi, honorary scientific fraternity and four others to membership in Torch, woman's activity group, at the University of Illinois. The Sigma Xi group includes E. C. Chamberlin Jr., 6815 Chappel avenue; J. W. Luce, 6641 University avenue, and W. S. Wormser, 4716 Ingleside avenue. The Torch members are Miss Mollie Mae Phelps, 516 West 61st street; Miss Jeannete Rhein, 7710 Phillips avenue; Miss Mary Jane Ryan, 4631 Ellis avenue, and Miss Helen D. Smith, 7256 Luella avenue.

John Ryan, 1152 West 80th street, and Bert Wood, 7868 Constance avenue, freshmen students at St. Benedict's college, Atchison, Kas., are continuing the theatrical career they began while at Mount Carmel High school. Ryan played leading rôles in two college productions and Wood acted as stage manager and electrician.

A LAUGH for you and a wry smile for its subject, Fay S. Berry, popular member of the Hyde Park Lions club, is contained in this bit of doggerel, clipped from the club bulletin:

Some men smile in the evening,
Some men smile at dawn,
But the the man worth while is the man who can smile
When two of his front teeth are gone.

Mr. Berry, it need not be pointed out, has lost several of his ivories.

From Smith college at Northampton, Mass., we hear that Miss Eleanor Reid, 4810 Ellis avenue, has been elected historian of next year's senior class. Miss Reid is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard C. Reid. And another note from Beloit college carries word that Philip Vogt, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Von Ogden Vogt, 5101 Woodlawn avenue, has been elected president of the local chapter of Sigma Chi fraternity. Philip and his brother Walter, are nephews of Dr. Irving Maurer, president of the college.

CONGRATULATIONS are in order for Girl Scout troop, No. 117, of the southwest district for having sold the greatest number of cookies in the recent "cookie week" fund raising sale. Their total was 1,090 boxes, some 300 more than the next highest number sold. The troop meets at the Seventh Presbyterian church, 86th and Sangamon streets.

Last Tuesday was the wedding day of Miss Kathryn Murray, daughter of Mrs. Edith B. Johnson, 4738 Winthrop avenue, and John C. McCullough, son of Mr. and Mrs. William McCullough, 8708 Union avenue. They were married at St. Killian's church, 87th and Aberdeen streets. Lares and penates will be set up at 8856 Lowe avenue after the honeymoon.

MR. and Mrs. Edward Hellman, 7052 Oglesby avenue, who came to the United States from Germany more than forty years ago, last week celebrated their fifty-fifth wedding anniversary. They were married in Stettin, Pomerania, Germany, on April 28, 1881, and came to Chicago in 1895. They have two sons, Carl of Chicago and Herbert William of Bayside, N. Y., and one daughter, Mrs. C. J. Wollheim of Chicago, and five grandchildren.

St. Thomas Club Will Hear Talk on St. Francis

Miss Helen C. White, associate professor of English at the University of Wisconsin and author of several books with a religious theme, will speak before the Study club of St. Thomas the Apostle church tomorrow evening in the parish hall, 55th street and Kimbark avenue. Her subject will be "The World of St. Francis of Assisi."

6 MORE SOUTH, SOUTHWEST SIDE REFUNDS SEEN

Slow Liquidations Delay Rebates.

Depositors in six more closed south and southwest side state banks may receive repayments of $200,000 in the next three months, it is indicated in State Auditor Edward J. Barrett's quarterly report. The report, which included seventeen south and southwest side banks, in addition to twenty-two banks listed last Sunday, indicated a general improvement in the banks' cash condition.

EDWARD J. BARRETT.

In the majority of cases assets are real estate or slow liquidating securities. Where funds have been advanced to protect assets it is hoped that with improved real estate and security markets these funds will be reclaimed before long. In several instances the banks still have the old, costly bank buildings to liquidate.

The six banks that may make repayments are: Equitable Trust Company of Chicago, First Italian State bank, Hegewisch State bank, Kenwood State bank, Marquette Park State bank, and the Morgan Park Trust and Savings bank. In several instances the possibility of repayment hinges on final approval of RCF loans.

Securities Improve.

Improvement of securities held by the banks is reflected in a general gain in collections for the quarter ending March 31 over the quarter ending Dec. 31.

Here are individual analyses of the seventeen south and southwest side banks. Figures used apply to entire period of receivership unless stated otherwise:

DEPOSITORS STATE BANK—Total receipts, $2,051,250, of which $113,050 were collected last quarter, an improvement over the previous quarter. Paid on prior claims, $883,850; paid on $264,550 RFC loan, $151,900; paid to depositors, $263,950, or 12½ per cent. During the quarter cash was increased about $20,000 and about $60,000 was repaid on the RFC loan. A fair return on real estate should pay depositors another 20 per cent or better. Costs: Receivers', $9,300; legal, $63,950; clerical, $91,300; interest paid on borrowed money, $36,350; advanced to protect assets, $462,300 [$349,250 refunded].

EQUITABLE TRUST COMPANY OF CHICAGO—Total receipts, $329,750, with $8,880 collected last quarter, an improvement. Paid on prior claims, $166,000; paid to depositors, $60,600, or 15 per cent. Cash increased about $6,000 to $10,250 during the quarter. About $12,000 more needed for another 5 per cent repayment. Costs: Receivers', $7,150; legal, $46,900; clerical, $40,300; interest, $2,300; advanced to protect assets, $22,150 [$9,850 refunded].

EXCHANGE STATE BANK—Total receipts, $373,600; paid on prior claims, $72,150; paid to depositors, $159,200, or 35 per cent. Five per cent more at the most may be paid depositors. Costs: Receivers', $11,700; legal, $39,300; clerical, $31,050; interest, $24; advanced to protect assets, $36,400 [$27,450 refunded].

FIRST ENGLEWOOD STATE BANK—Total receipts, $952,000; paid on prior claims, $369,300; paid on $178,600 RFC loan, $93,300; paid to depositors, $287,650, or 50 per cent. Repaid $18,000 on RFC loan in the quarter. Hope for some further refund after repayment of this loan. Costs: Receivers', $4,600; legal, $24,850; clerical, $37,800; interest, $15,050; advanced to protect assets, $86,050 [$70,650 refunded].

FIRST ITALIAN STATE BANK—Total receipts, $809,050; $57,400 collected last quarter, an improvement. Paid on prior claims, $378,360 and completed payment during the quarter on $40,750 RFC loan. Paid to depositors, $212,250, or 25 per cent. New application for RFC loan for $45,000 approved, which when completed will allow distribution of approximately 5 per cent. Fifteen to 20 per cent more may be paid. Costs: Receivers', $7,650; legal, $38,150; clerical, $46,050; interest, $2,000; advanced to protect assets, $50,950 [$56,850 refunded].

FIRST STATE BANK OF CHICAGO HEIGHTS — Total receipts, $568,350; $10,350 collected last quarter, an improvement. Paid on prior claims, $270,000; RFC loan paid in full; paid to depositors, $117,250 or 15 per cent. About $20,000 more needed to make possible next 5 per cent repayment. No immediate prospect. Indications are the bank ultimately should pay another 15 per cent. Costs: receivers', $6,000; legal, $17,400; clerical, $39,200; interest, $3,850; advanced to protect assets, $96,650 [$63,050 refunded]. Cash on hand applicable to future repayments, $16,900.

FIRST STATE BANK OF STEGER—Total receipts, $63,450; paid on prior claims, $17,250; paid to depositors, $21,800 or 25 per cent. Cash on hand, $2,000, is about half a 5 per cent repayment. No immediate prospect and little more, if any, can be expected after 5 per cent is paid. Costs: receivers', $1,800; legal, $3,200; clerical, $10,400; interest, $43.50; advanced to protect assets, $5,800 [$4,900 refunded].

HEGEWISCH STATE BANK—Total receipts, $221,000; $8,400 collected last quarter, an improvement. Paid on prior claims, $47,700; paid to depositors, $107,600, or 37½ per cent. Good liquidation increased cash about $7,000 in the quarter, half of a 5 per cent dividend. Eventually may bring total repayment to 50 per cent or better. Costs: receivers', $7,600; legal, $10,250; clerical, $19,000; interest, $400; advanced to protect assets, $17,350 [$13,600 refunded].

HOMEWOOD STATE BANK—Total receipts, $165,100; paid on prior claims, $70,300; $48,650 RFC loan repaid in full but no payments to depositors. Pending claims for village funds has restrained from use of RFC loan which would pay approximately 20 per cent to depositors. Costs: receivers', $2,500; legal, $6,200; clerical, $15,600; interest, $4,800; advanced to protect assets, $16,000 [refunded $7,550].

INDUSTRIAL STATE BANK—Total receipts, $205,050; paid on prior claims, $85,500; paid to depositors, $64,100 or 35 per cent. Although liquidation is slow, the bank has no bills payable or preferred claims. Mostly real estate assets, may pay up to 50 per cent eventually. Costs: receivers', $7,500; legal, $5,050; clerical, $28,000; advanced to protect assets, $5,100 [$4,500 refunded].

KENWOOD STATE BANK—Total receipts, $328,900; $5,800 collected last quarter. Paid on prior claims, $119,800; paid to depositors, $141,400 or 58 per cent. Costs: receivers', $6,500; legal, $10,600; clerical, $28,150; interest, $3,450; advanced to protect assets, $11,150 [$9,750 refunded]. Increased available cash slightly during the quarter.

LANSING STATE BANK—Total receipts, $242,900; paid on prior claims, $60,800; paid to depositors, $99,050 or 30 per cent. Liquidation is slow, but it is hoped the sale of the bank building and remaining real estate may bring the ultimate return to 50 per cent. Costs: receivers', $7,600; legal, $15,900; clerical, $27,700; interest, $900; advanced to protect assets, $26,000 [$20,000 refunded].

MARQUETTE PARK STATE BANK—Total receipts, $660,100; paid on prior claims, $127,200; paid to depositors, $218,600 or 22½ per cent. Pending an RFC loan the bank may make a small additional repayment soon. Final payment may bring the total to about 45 per cent. Costs: receivers', $9,500; legal, $33,000; clerical, $82,000; advanced to protect assets, $193,400 [$182,200 refunded].

MILLARD STATE BANK—Total receipts, $486,550; paid on prior claims, $37,000; paid to depositors, $290,300 or 40 per cent. Sale of remaining real estate and banking house must be relied on to realize an additional 5 or 10 per cent for depositors. Costs: receivers', $15,150; legal, $35,250; clerical, $30,050; interest, $383.

MORGAN PARK TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK—Total receipts, $677,700; $34,650 collected last quarter. Paid on prior claims, $106,550; $113,350 RFC loan completely repaid; paid to depositors, $179,700 or 32½ per cent. About 5 per cent available for distribution now, but pending RFC loan application, if completed, will allow this percentage to be increased materially. If loan is not forthcoming in a reasonable time will probably pay the 5 per cent available. Costs: receivers', $4,500; legal, $28,000; clerical, $16,300; interest, $5,500; advanced to protect assets, $157,150 [$146,550 refunded].

MOUNT GREENWOOD TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK — Total receipts, $38,600; paid on prior claims, $12,650; paid to depositors, $10,550 or 27½ per cent. No immediate prospects here for further repayment, but hopes to pay 5 or 10 per cent more ultimately. Costs: receivers', $1,150; legal, $3,700; clerical, $6,800; interest, $167; advanced to protect assets, $788 [$111 refunded].

NOVAK AND STEISKAL STATE BANK—Total receipts, $497,600; $13,300 collected last quarter, an improvement. Paid on prior claims, $175,500; paid to depositors, $154,200 or 27 per cent. No bills payable or large preferences. Increased cash approximately $9,000 in the quarter with fair liquidation. Remaining assets mostly real estate, no immediate prospects of further repayment, but with improved conditions should nearly duplicate previous 27 per cent. Costs: receivers', $7,900; legal, $26,600; clerical, $42,550; interest, $12.53; advanced to protect assets, $70,600 [$73,600 refunded].

BATHERS TO HAVE SAFE CROSSINGS ON WAY TO BEACH

5 Subways, Overpasses Planned at Drive.

South side residents between 12th street and 58th street will be able to get to the lake front this summer without risking their lives dodging outer drive automobile trafic. Last week the Chicago park board authorized William I. Bell, acting chief engineer of the district, to advertise for bids on the construction of two pedestrian passerelles and three pedestrian subways to be constructed above and beneath Lief Erickson drive and South Shore drive.

The two passerelles are to be of concrete and steel construction and will be constructed with the aid of park and federal funds and both skilled park labor and WPA labor. Their total cost is estimated at $46,000. One will be erected over Lief Erickson drive at 49th street and the other over South Shore drive between 57th and 58th streets.

Bell explained that the two passerelles will differ from the one now in use at 63d street and South Shore drive in that they will have ramp approaches instead of stairways. "We want to make the crossing easier for mothers who push baby buggies," he said.

The three subways, to be constructed under Lief Erickson drive at 12th street, 31st street, and 55th street also will be built with the aid of both park and WPA labor. They will be similar in construction to the subway constructed last year under Lake Shore drive at Oak street. It is the plan of the park board that all five projects be completed before the bathing season opens in July.

More Than 16,000 Ailing to Receive Blossoms.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Officials of Chicago's eighth annual share your lilacs campaign announce organization has been completed to gather and distribute bouquets to the bedside of more than 16,000 patients in the city. The coöperative spirit of Chicagoans and nearby suburbanites is manifested in this undertaking which is shared in by hundreds of men, women and children representing flower growers, garden clubs, schools, boy and girl scout organizations, Y. M. C. A. groups, country clubs, transportation agencies and others not affiliated with any organizations.

Cool weather is expected to delay the distribution dates in the campaign, which is sponsored by the Chicago Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild and THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Gardeners do not expect their lilacs to bloom for two weeks or more unless the weather changes and there are several warm days in succession this week. The lilacs likely will not be distributed until the latter half of this month. In former years they have been gathered and delivered between May 10 and 20.

All Will Get Chance to Aid.

With lilacs to be given to patients in more than 100 hospitals, social settlements and other institutions, the Guild later will select two days for distribution when the greatest number of blossoms are open. Officials are anxious to give every lilac grower in Chicago's flowerland an opportunity to share their blossoms this year. Hundreds coöperated in 1935.

Theodore V. Purcell, of Evanston, president of the guild, announced yesterday that 82 guild chairmen, representing the various suburban and community garden clubs, had been appointed to work with lilac growers in assembling the blossoms and delivering them to suburban railway stations. Railroads will transport the blossoms free to downtown terminal stations and from there the lilacs will be hauled in TRIBUNE trucks to the hospitals and other institutions.

Officers of Guild.

Other officers of the guild are Mrs. Charles G. Dawes, Evanston, honorary president, and Mrs. Robert G. McCormick, Wheaton, chairman, executive committee.

Mrs. William H. Schultz of Maywood, general division chairman, is in charge of the 1936 campaign. She is aided by the following eight suburban division chairmen who look after the gathering of the lilacs:

Mrs. A. W. Torbet, Deerfield—Skokie division, North Shore line.

Mrs. Herschel Missey, 8000 Dante avenue—Illinois Central railway division.

Mrs. Robert J. Pabodie, Maywood—Galena division, Chicago and North Western railway.

Mrs. Fred A. Record, Barrington—Wisconsin division, Chicago and North Western railway.

Mrs. K. Edgar Tholin, Downers Grove—Burlington railway division.

Others Aiding Campaign.

COMPASSION IS GUIDE AND RULE IN BABY CENTER

Healthy Child Is Reward of Young Doctor.

proper treatment, a rigid program of rest in bed, or the new lung therapy. Arrangements would have been made for them to go to a sanitorium, and to take special care that the baby did not contract the disease. Every pregnant woman should have an X-ray picture made of her chest, Dr. Tucker believes.

Hope for Transfusion Aid.

There also is the question of blood transfusion. Only two women have died of hemorrhage, but countless others have been weakened, their convalescence slowed up, from excessive bleeding. Dr. Tucker and her associates have a dream of a transfusion service free to all private doctors throughout the city. It would be manned by a capable doctor, with a list of universal donors in every section of the city, ready for instant use by all doctors faced with deaths in confinements. Perhaps soon they'll announce this additional life saving precaution. But not until its expense—estimated at around $2,000 a year—can be guaranteed.

The Chicago maternity center works in coöperation with the Visiting Nurses association, the Infant Welfare society, Chicago's health department, and hospitals in several sections which receive serious operative cases when they occur.

Income Never Enough.

The work has no endowment. Financial aid is received from month to month from its directors, and friends. The Mothers Service club, the South Shore auxiliary, the North Shore auxiliary, the Junior Service league, and its founder, Dr. Joseph B. DeLee contribute.

A small portion of its annual need, approximately $36,000, is received from relief funds. But even with the center's economy [and it can deliver a baby for fifteen dollars], there is never quite enough to balance its books.

ADVENTIST CHOIR CHORUS TO SING ORATORIO 'ELIJAH'

A chorus of 300 voices comprising choirs of Seventh Day Adventist churches of metroplitan Chicago will sing the oratorio, "Elijah", by Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy, next Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the People's church, 941 Lawrence avenue. Dr. Oliver Seth Beltz, a member of the faculty at Northwestern university and a veteran producer of oratorios, will direct. Four soloists, Miss Esther Hart, soprano; Miss Betty Powers, contralto; Arthur Kraft, Tenor, and William Russell, baritone, will assist the chorus. Accompanists will be Miss Mildred Hanson Dawson, pianist, and Harold B. Hannum, organist.

TRAFIC AT STATE STREET MARKET TO BE DISCUSSED

Meeting Will Be Held Thursday Night.

Another conference between produce merchants of the South State street market and members of community improvement organizations in adjacent territory, is to be held at 8 o'clock Thursday evening in the 17th ward Democratic offices at 6839 Wentworth avenue, Alderman William T. Murphy announced yesterday.

ALD. W. T. MURPHY.

Thursday's meeting will be devoted to the reading of reports by trafic engineers of the Chicago Surface Lines, the Chicago Motor club and City Trafic Engineer Leslie Sorenson, on trafic conditions in the market, from investigations they conducted at Mr. Murphy's request. All have concurred in recommending that trucks should be unloaded in the alleys behind the market, leaving the street clear for through trafic.

Coöperation Is Sought.

The trafic experts' findings will be recommended to the market merchants, with the suggestion that they voluntarily follow them, Mr. Murphy said. More stringent methods will be used if they do not, he added.

Acting on reports that retail stores, in the block between 71st and 72d streets, south of the market proper, have been violating health department regulations, Mr. Murphy last week assigned several investigators to inspect the sector. He also made a tour of the South Water street market to observe methods of operation there.

Civic Groups Aid.

Investigation of the market operation, against which various allegations concerning illegal hours of operation, anti-noise violations, infractions of health rules and disregard for trafic ordinances have been made, was brought about by the South Side Federation of Improvements Associations, through its local units, the Park Manor Improvement association and the East Hamilton Park Property Owners' association.

BOWLERS TREAT 'WIDOWS' TO RAIL TRIP TO NOWHERE

It's Reward for Those Weekly Nights Out.

Bound on "A Little Journey to Nowhere," a very special train left the Beverly Hills station last Friday evening with more than 150 friends and neighbors on board. The passengers were the members of the St. Paul's Bowling league and their guests and the trip was the annual award to the players' wives for their weekly "night out."

For the occasion, the reception room of the Beverly Hills Country club was transformed into a depot and the guests, upon arriving, were presented with railroad tickets and parlor car accommodations which admitted them to the train shed in the dining room, and they found their seats by the red and green light of railroad lanterns.

Follow Railroad Theme.

The railroading theme was carried out in the entertainment. Norman Beck, dressed as an engineer, led the promenade to the dining room; Reid Bennett, as a conductor on the Golden State Limited, was master of ceremonies; Ernie Huehner, song leader, wore the uniform of the "400" crew, and the program featured the Pullman Porters.

Harry Roebuck and William Bell, newsies, marketed their wares during the dinner and Edward McKay Jr., as a telegraph messenger, made it possible for the guests to communicate from table to table.

The banquet annually climaxes the league's season and planning for the event is the major problem of the president for the year. This season W. H. Bell was far thinking and when he named his 14 teams he gave them the names of famous trains and his captains became conductors.

Teams and Leaders.

Thus, the teams competing in the league were the Panama Limited, Karl Symons, conductor; the Capitol Limited, Oscar Nelson, conductor; the Dixie Flyer, Tom Miller, conductor; the Chief, Albert Roebuck, conductor; the Overland, Folger Fellowes, conductor; the "400," Robert Stanton, conductor; the Zephyr, William Bossi, conductor.

The Abraham Lincoln, Floyd Milligan, conductor; the Sunshine Special, Clayton Nichols, conductor; the Hiawatha, Earl Sauer, conductor; the Canadian, Guy Palmer, conductor; the Twentieth Century, Gale Swift, conductor; the Broadway Limited, David Mauer, conductor, and the Golden State, Ray Hathaway, conductor.

League Eight Years Old.

The league was organized eight years ago by a group of 60 men, members of St. Paul's Union church, 94th street and Winchester avenue, and 48 of the charter members continue to bowl weekly.

THE LILLIE LIFT, OR UP ELEVATOR WITH AUNTIE BEA

A Radio Ride with Bright, Buoyant Beatrice.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

"Is this a local, girl?" inquires Beatrice Lillie's foil, Vera Allen, stepping into the elevator which "Auntie Bea," in fancy is operating.

"No, I'm a Toronto girl," Miss Lillie retorts. "We had a local girl but she didn't make good."

Miss Lillie—like Mary Pickford—is a Toronto girl who made good, but in quite a different fashion from the Gladys Smith who was once her schoolmate.

Gazing upon Miss Lillie through a radio control room window as she is about to embark on a rehersal it sinks in on you that she is the complete antithesis of America's Sweetheart who also has made a place for herself in radio. Neither is Miss Lillie much like the picture conjured up when you say Lady Peel, which she happens to be.

"Auntie Bea" is completely relaxed at the moment. About her on collapsible metal chairs sit Miss Allen, John McCauley, Jack Hearn, and Tom Shirley on whose combined shoulders falls the task of putting the nation into stitches at 8 p. m. on this day through a little sketch which concerns the efforts of Miss Lillie to set a new altitude record in Upsey Daisy, a Wrigley building elevator. George Allen, an athletic looking young man, you decide at a glance is the representative of the advertising agency who must whip the show together. [He has that well-let's-get-going air about him.]

Boyish Bob, Blue Eyes, Brown Dress.

"Well, we'll run over it just to get the feel of it," he commands, and they take their places at several microphones. Miss Lillie, you observe, has slightly graying hair which her boyish bob tends to conceal when you see her from a distance in "At Home Abroad." Blue, gray eyes, a simple brown wool crêpe dress, one pocket bulging with a big packet of imported cigarets; shod in a pair of those sports slippers that tie around the ankle—don't they call them ghillies?

They get but a few lines into the script before you realize that there is going to be fun. Auntie Bea waltzes around the microphone, popping up with an ad lib line now and then—and usually it brightens the script. Bright is a word that presents itself naturally when discussing Miss Lillie. She uses a lot of material by Noel Coward, who is one of England's brightest young men, usually adapted by Nancy Hamilton, a bright young lady and another assistant or two. [Miss Hamilton has written a special song, too, for this program.]

Looks Like King Edward.

Standing there with a cigaret between her fingers, she looks enough like Edward VIII. to be his sister—make it twin sister. They are, incidentally, good friends. Miss Lillie is a blithe, buoyant, effervescent individual. She has a lot of spirit, verve, and all that sort of thing—items the new king is said to appreciate in women.

But to return to their physical likeness—it's hard to put your finger right on it—it may be the slender face, the way the hair is brushed back, the lift of the nose. Lift, that's a word that fits Lillie—she gives you a life! And today that fits literally. As stated earlier, Auntie Bea is playing elevator operator. So let's get back to the rehersal.

"Now, let's have a little noise right here," Mr. Allen suggests to the sound effects expert, "as if the elevator were starting."

"What kind of a noise?" the lad asks.

"O, make it—elevator noise," Auntie Bea cuts in. [That's the Lillie lift!]

Exceptionally good natured this afternoon, Miss Lillie exhibits considerable patience, reading her lines again and again in order to "point" gags to suit Allen. Her only complaint is a periodic outburst over the studio ventilation—or lack therefore.

"Frightfully hot," she exclaims from time to time. Whereupon one of her associates makes another futile attempt to open a window.

Right Through the Roof.

They get to that spot in the script where a foil says: "Miss Lillie is on her own—"

"On my own what?" Aunty Bea asks, then laughs, and adds: "I'm resting on my laurels." The script didn't call for that but it draws a lively laugh—so it is written into the continuity.

The scene moves—and how!

The elevator with Miss Lillie at the helm and fully loaded goes crashing [with the aid of a copper boiler full of junk in the hands of a sound effects man] through the roof and then falls back all the way into the basement with a resounding clatter.

Miss Lillie doesn't like to end the sketch on that note. No punch! It needs a Lillie line, a Lillie lift to top it off. A sort of studio editorial conference ensues with several persons taking a hand in suggesting a clever windup gag.

"Ceiling zero," is one offering.

"Upsey Daisy Landed Upside Downey," is another.

"We went up to break the altitude record—and we have broken SOMETHING" is still another.

Miss Lillie smiles but none of these suits her. She wants something a little more provocative.

"I can think of a lot of good endings," she says with a lift of the eyebrow, "but somehow they're a little naughty."

Auntie Bea Hates the Spring.

"Well, maybe something will pop up," Allen suggests, and they call in Billy Mills and orchestra to reherse a new Lillie song, "I Hate the Spring," it's called, a ditty in that varicose vein that suits Miss Lillie.

"I hate flowers, I hate birds," Miss Lillie carols. "If I had my canary 'Greasy' up here we could use him right now to give a little atmosphere," she says toward the control room.

Sounds like a good suggestion so the sound effects man is told to dig up a record that will sound like "Greasy." Seems to give the song just the turn it needs, too, at this point.

A loud voice cuts in saying, "The men are needed for the Nelson show and a batch of Mr. Petrillo's finest take their smocks and rush off in great haste, leaving Miss Lillie and Mr. Mills alone with a couple of fiddle players and a viola expert.

That is rather discouraging, so Auntie Bea settles down to rehersing her bedtime story which concerns the advent of daylight saving time.

And Now the Finished Show.

Allen asks Auntie Bea to report back at 6:30 for a final rehersal. Miss Lillie suggests 7. So they compromise and make it 7.

We go home and listen in on the finished production. Miss Lillie's portion is spliced neatly into the rest of the show with Lennie Hayton and Walter Woolf King and the Tavern singers coming in from New York. It moves at a sprightly clip.

"Where are we?" Miss Lillie asks after the elevator crash.

"No, wonder this elevator is all gummed up!"

ON MAGIC KEY

Gladys Swarthout is appearing as guest star on the Magic Key program to be heard over WENR-NBC at 1 o'clock this afternoon.

FRED ALLEN SAYS

Dear Larry:

Now that the circus is with us again Broadway sharpsters are probably readying a patent spot remover to sell to leopards. . . . Next thing you know a committee will be investigating the man who sold ammunition for the shot that was heard around the world. . . . Personally, I've always been curious about who threw the lemon in Boston harbor during the Tea Party. . . . Peter Van Steeden, "Town Hall Tonight" maestro, offers the one about the band leader who had amnesia. He was eventually identified by a fan—who recognized the back of his neck. . . . Then there was the shy business executive who was always grabbing his stenographer's notebook. He wanted to hold her short hand. . . . Portland says: "No wonder fools rush in where angels fear to tread. Angels don't wear any shoes."

Cordially,
FRED ALLEN.

MARIO CHAMLEE, MISS SWARTHOUT, ON "MAGIC KEY"

With opera stars Gladys Swarthout and Mario Chamlee as the featured vocalists, the magic key of RCA will officially open National Music week during its program over WENR-NBC at 1 p. m. today.

David Sarnoff, president of RCA, will speak.

GRIFF WILLIAMS TAKES MARTIN'S SPOT ON MUTUAL

West Coast Band Opens at Aragon Saturday.

Griff Williams, the 27 year old band leader whose fine orchestra was a favorite on the west coast, opens a limited engagement at the Aragon ballroom and over W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting system next Saturday. Williams' orchestra will be heard in all of the broadcast program spots on W-G-N and the Mutual network which are now occupied by the Freddy Martin orchestra.

Griff is a graduate of Leland Stanford university, where he became a member of Sigma Nu fraternity. He had every intention of some day becoming a famous physician, but, possessing unusual ability as a pianist, Griff found that he was devoting most of his time to playing in and directing and managing campus orchestras. He also was busy composing and directing innumerable campus musical shows.

Forms Own Orchestra.

Upon his graduation from Stanford Griff joined another orchestra, which was then appearing at the Mark Hopkins hotel in San Francisco, but after two seasons with the band was given the opportunity to form his own orchestra. As the leader of his own unit Griff made his debut in the baton waving field in the Edgewater Beach café in San Francisco.

Successful from the outset, Williams remained at the Beach for more than a year, following which he booked into the Mark Hopkins for a short engagement. But the short engagement was stretched out over a period of two years.

Never Uses Baton.

Williams features Buddy Moreno, the Nob Hill-Billies, Warren Luce, and Monte Kelly on the vocals. The Hill-Billies are composed of Moreno, Kelly, and Al Arnold. Williams composed his own theme song, "Dream Music," while attending Stanford. It was the hit song in a campus revue.

Although Griff is generally photographed with a baton, he never has one on the band stand with him, and directs his orchestra by a mere wave and nod of the head as he sits at his piano.

Chicago High R.O.T.C. School News

637 CADETS WILL RECEIVE MERIT MEDAL AWARDS

South Side Ceremonies to Open May 12.

Six hundred and thirty-seven cadets in Chicago high schools, recommended by their instructors and principals as honor students in military training for the second semester, will receive gold or silver medals from THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE at the series of federal inspections of R. O. T. C. beginning tomorrow and continuing for two weeks.

The merits awarded denoting efficiency and interest and recognizing achievement in the work of the R. O. T. C. as prescribed by the war department will be given as a feature of the annual review of local corps. Upon recommendation of reviewing authorities, further honor will be paid to the two outstanding corps in the presentation of stands of colors by THE TRIBUNE on Cadet day, May 22.

Dress Parades Outdoors.

Each review, highlight in the semester's activity, will be attended by students, teachers, parents, members of veteran and patriotic organizations and officials of the army.

Other individual awards in addition to THE TRIBUNE medals will be made by local posts of the American Legion and United Spanish War Veterans. The R. O. T. C. department will be represented by Lieut. Col. John D. von Holtzendorff, Maj. Wade C. Gatchell, Maj. John H. Ringe, and Capt. Richard H. Darrell.

Opening with the presentation at Senn High school, 300 TRIBUNE medals will be awarded this week to north and west side units. The review at Bowen on Tuesday, May 12, will open in the south and southwest side presentation of 280 medals.

Bowen and Phillips.

Before Maj. James R. Urquhart, inspecting officer, and Maj. Ringe, thirty Bowen cadets will receive TRIBUNE awards at 9 o'clock in the morning at the parade on the campus. Two hours later, at Washington park, thirty Phillips cadets will be honored similarly.

The other awards on that day will go to thirty students of the Tilden unit in one of the most colorful reviews planned. With the coöperation of the Stockyards post, No. 333, of the American Legion arrangements have been made to hold the inspection in the International amphitheater of the stockyards. This will be preceded by a dinner given by the post for the officers and guests at the review.

A combined review of the Harper and Lindblom corps will be held at 11 a. m. on Wednesday, May 13, at Ogden park, 64th street and Racine avenue. Ten cadets of Harper, a new corps, and thirty of Lindblom will receive TRIBUNE awards. Concluding that day's awards, at a campus review, the Englewood corps will be given thirty medals.

Three on Thursday.

The schedule Thursday is as follows: 9:30 a. m., Archer avenue and 42d street, Kelly; 11 a. m., school campus, Calumet, and 1 p. m., school campus, Hyde Park. Kelly cadets will receive 12, Calumet 30, and Hyde Park 30 of the honorary awards.

The closing presentations will be made Friday at two campus reviews at Fenger and Morgan Park. At 9:30 a. m. eighteen outstanding members of the Fenger group will be rewarded and at 11 a. m., concluding the presentations, fifteen gold and fifteen silver awards will be made to the Morgan Park corps.

While formal reviews are taking place north and west this week, six south and southwest side schools have scheduled practice reviews in anticipation of the final tests. The first, Phillips, Wednesday afternoon at Washington park, 52d street and Cottage Grove avenue, will be previewed by Maj. Ringe.

Other Practice Reviews.

Two preliminary reviews are listed for Thursday. Maj. Ringe, aided by Sergt. A. J. Cloutier, will officiate. Tilden will drill that afternoon at Bayer Athletic field, 40th street and Union avenue, and Kelly at the same time at Archer avenue and 42d street.

A Friday morning campus review at Morgan Park, inspected by Maj. Gatchell, another campus parade at Englewood, and a review of the Lindblom corps at Ogden park, 64th street and Racine avenue, will conclude the practice schedule for the week.

Light Walls and Modern Equipment Needed.

Mrs. Bargelt will be glad to answer questions on home building and home remodeling.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

There is a wide variety of laundry equipment available at the present time to meet the highly specialized requirements of modern American families. There is a laundry equipment for almost any size laundry room the home or apartment possesses. If there is no special laundry quarter, but the equipment must be included in the kitchen layout, then there is also a model of washer, ironer, or even drier to fit into the available space!

However, when home modernization is under way, or a new home is being built, the first question to decide is what space to give laundry, its wall and ceiling surfacings.

The modern trend, where space permits, inclines toward an entirely separate laundry room, whether it is placed in the basement or in some space conveniently close to the kitchen and a rear outside door. With a well equipped laundry room provided with a good washing machine, ironer, drier, laundry tubs, abundant hot and cold water, sorting table, and cabinets, gas plate burner and water softener, all the laundering operations of a well managed family wash may be accomplished in comparatively few hours, instead of being dragged out over Monday and Tuesday, and sometimes even a part of Wednesday.

Damp Basement Changed.

Architects and home building and modernizing experts are now giving careful attention to the design and layout of the laundry room.

Now that summer is close at hand and no one wants to spend more hours indoors than necessary, the question of labor banishing equipment, in every family where the laundry tasks are done at home, is more important than ever. And where spring decorations and summer improvements are under way, and the topic of conversation in a million and more odd homes, the possibility of converting some old, damp, ugly duckling of a laundry "corner" into a fresh, healthy, and easy to work in spot is an interesting one.

It is a basement room, and a glance at the photograph will show that ample daylight and sunlight has been provided by the group of east windows, with their potted plants and aquarium. At one end a door opens onto a concrete stairway that leads to the back yard. At the other end double doors open into the recreation and gameroom.

Nonabsorbent Walls.

The walls are of glazed yellow tile that is kept clean easily, and the floor is of dark colored terrazzo.

Beside the stationary tubs, which are given hot and cold running soft water, and also city water, there is a modern type of washing machine, cabinet type ironer, a gas plate burner for boiling purposes, and crow's foot clothes line for drying purposes. There is also a spacious cabinet at either end of the room with generous storage capacity for necessary laundry supplies and household linens.

In planning a laundry room attention should be given first of all to walls and floor, and they should be of materials that don't absorb moisture and the colors chosen should be light. White, ivory, cream, light pink, flesh, buff, or soft shades of pale gray, or green are good.

Wall board makes a splendid wall covering for a laundry room. The least expensive method of decoration is a coat of whitewash or calcimine. Next comes paint. It can be good quality interior paint, flat, eggshell, or gloss finish.

White Walls for Light.

If the walls of the basement are inclined to be damp a waterproofing or damp resisting paint should be used. There are special cement paints in attractive colors for a concrete basement floor that shows a slight tendency toward dampness.

The lighting and ventilation in a laundry room are of utmost importance. The windows should open easily and be well screened in summer. An electric fan on a shelf or an electric ventilator above a window is a big help in banishing musty odors and keeping cool in hot weather. Then, too, a laundry should have at least one "daylight" bulb and extra lighting over each working area.

It is interesting to note, in connection with the old, often asked query, "What color shall we use on the walls of a dark laundry room, bathroom, or kitchen?" the results of some tests recently conducted by research laboratories.

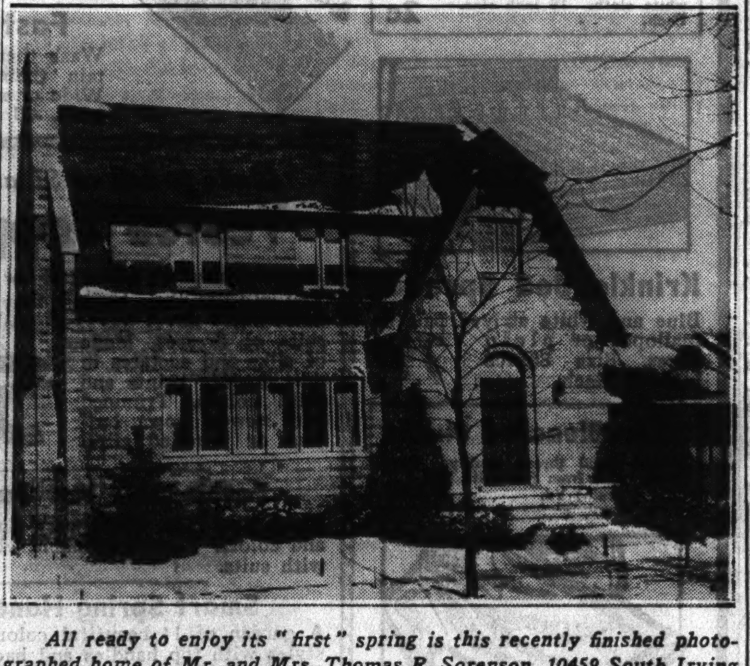
Planning Saves Steps.

In some experimental rooms equipped with indirect lighting [the walls being used as reflectors], a white room reflected approximately two-thirds more light than the same room in yellow, three-fourths more light than the same room in green, and seven-eighths more light than the same room in gray. This shows in no uncertain figures the value of white as a light reflecting surface. And in the experiments all the colors used were light tints!

Where the laundry work is done at home bright walls, dry floors, fresh air, and plenty of light will go a long way toward creating a cheerful atmosphere. Correct routing of laundry equipment will save steps. Good mechanical equipment, combined with modern tubs, tables, cabinets, and shelves will do much to take the wrestle out of the weekly washing and ironing tasks. A well equipped laundry room bears no resemblance to the antiquated washing corner of a score of years ago. It is a room with all the drudgery taken from it by new equipment and well planned, well decorated work areas and surfacings.

BASEMENT NO LONGER DRAB AND UNSIGHTLY

A modern basement laundry room in a newly built Peoria home. An idea for summer modernization! The walls are of glazed, yellow tile, the floor is of black terrazzo. Double doors lead into a basement game and recreation room. This room has an overall of 31x18 feet, and includes electric washing machine and ironer, spacious cabinet for washing supplies, and gas plate burner at one end for special boiling purposes. Ventilation is properly adequate. [TRIBUNE Photo.]



All ready to enjoy its "first" spring is this recently finished photographed home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Sorenson, 10459 South Irving avenue. The exterior walls are of softly toned yellow clinker brick. It is an all modern, six room home with tile bath and first floor powder room. Hetherington, architects and builders, 10153 Prospect avenue, designed and built the house. Note the careful window placement.

A "quilting bee," with each quilter pledged to conceal a coin beneath her patch, is one of the novelty features the Mothers club of St. John the Baptist parish is planning for its second annual penny social this afternoon and evening in the school hall, 933 West 50th place.

MRS. IRWIN V. WILEY.

The usual carnival attractions, grab bag, popcorn, taffy apples, handmade aprons and homemade cakes are included in the club's plans. Proceeds will go to the sisters who teach in the parish school.

Mrs. Irwin V. Wiley is general chairman. Her assistants are Mrs. Edward Breault, Mrs. Mary Casey, Mrs. Roy Costello, Mrs. S. E. Coules, Mrs. M. M. Dineen, Mrs. J. A. Finley, Mrs. M. M. WILL ASK PWA FOR NEW VIADUCT ON 103D STREET

Two requests for funds with which to construct two long sought south side improvements—a proposed viaduct on 103d street and a dock terminal on Lake Calumet, are to be filed shortly with the Public Works administration by Oscar E. Hewitt, city commissioner of public works, and Chester I. Inman, housing division director of the Illinois section of the PWA.

Filing of the requests will be in anticipation that the PWA will receive the additional $1,500,000,000 from the government that it has requested.

Cost of the viaduct, the site of which lies between Stony Island and Torrence avenues, is estimated at $950,000. The viaduct would traverse a large section of unimproved territory and the tracks of the Chicago and Western Indiana and Nickel Plate railroads.

City engineers, authors of the terminal plan, estimate the construction cost of the dock terminal at approximately $250,000. Half of this amount was appropriated by the city council last year, when it appeared the city would then obtain a federal loan-grant, and has been included in this year's city budget. The PWA is asked to supply the other $125,000.

OLD SACRED HEART PARISH WILL HAVE REUNION ON JUNE 6

The annual reunion of former Sacred Heart parishioners will be held on Saturday evening, June 6, at the Palmer house, according to the plans recently announced by the Rev. James A. Walsh, pastor of the parish and sponsor of the reunion.

Michael E. Boylan again heads the committee of 100 men and women who are assisting Father Walsh. Proceeds of the dance and card party, to be held in conjunction with the reunion, will be used in welfare work in the industrial community surrounding the church at 19th and Peoria streets.

Established in 1867, the parish once was the worshiping place of German and Irish families. Many prominent Chicagoans attended the church in their youth and annually return to assist Father Walsh in his community program, a feature of which is a nonsectarian summer school.

Brainerd Mothers' Club to Meet This Afternoon

A musical and fashion revue will feature the Brainerd Mothers' club meeting this afternoon at the home of its president, Mrs. John Lane, 10056 Damen avenue. Mae Doelling-Schmidt, pianist, and Miss Mary Gilmore, dramatic director at THE TRIBUNE's Camp Algonquin, will give the program. Miss Ella Cain will direct the style show.

DR. RUFUS M. JONES.

The basis of his book is the presentation of the fact that there exists an actual realm of spiritual activity with which we can have first hand contact if only the activities of the soul be intelligently cultivated. This thesis will be extended in Dr. Jones' forthcoming work entitled "The Friends of God," and is the result of two years research in the libraries of Germany on the lives of mystics living in the 14th century.

BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE'S PARLEY TO OPEN JULY 8

National Convention to Be Held in Chicago.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

"The Golden 45th" is the slogan for the national convention of the Baptist Young People's union which will be held at the Stevens hotel July 8 to 12. Mrs. Ola N. Crissey, 4065 Broadway, in making this announcement, explains it is derived from the fact the union was founded in 1891. Mrs. Crissey is chairman of the convention committee and president of the Illinois B. Y. P. U.

MRS. OLA N. CRISSEY.

"We want to show," said Mrs. Crissey, in defining the aim of the convention, "the exemplary life of Christ contains the answer to the problems of youth, and to demonstrate to young people that this answer, once found, will work in this modern world."

The theme chosen for the convention is "I am the Way" which will form the topic for the keynote address of the Rev. Carl S. Knopf, professor of Biblical literature at the University of Southern California.

Among those assisting Mrs. Crissey are John F. Singleton, associate chairman of Foster Park; Margaret Grobner, recording secretary; Lillian R. Samborg of Logan Square English church; Julia E. Tresidder of Immanuel; George B. Martin of La Grange; Judson S. Tyley of Oak Park, director of music, and Clarence W. Doll of Calvary Baptist church.

Among the subjects scheduled for discussion are the constructive use of leisure, marriage and home life, the liquor problem, being a Christian with other racial and cultural groups, and the possibilities of constructing a Christian economic social order.

The Most Rev. William D. O'Brien, auxiliary bishop of Chicago and pastor of Old St. John's church, 1800 South Clark street, has invited the Rev. Edward J. Harrison of the eastern province of the congregation of the missions, to conduct a week's mission which will begin tonight.

DON'T RISK YOUR CHILDREN'S HEALTH

by "skimping" on Orange Juice

¼ more juice from FLORIDA ORANGES

—the sweetest, richest juice you ever tasted

ECONOMIZE on orange juice and you may seriously endanger your child's health. For orange juice supplies highly important vitamins (four different kinds!) . . . calcium that aids teeth and bone development . . . iron for good red blood.

The juice of half an orange or even a whole orange a day is far from enough. Health authorities urge BIG glasses for everybody, at least two a day. You'll save on doctor's bills if you do it. And you can do it, even on a modest budget, if you buy FLORIDA oranges.

Floridas, by actual test, give a fourth more juice than other oranges at the same price. That's like getting every 5th glass FREE. And you'll like their flavor better. It's sweeter, richer. They're fresher, too—bound to be! For they grow nearer your home, reach you faster. Buy some Floridas today. See how little they cost, how much juice they give!

"I'VE used Rinso for years and have been delighted how white and clean it got my wash, how bright it kept the colored things. I've frequently tried several other soaps. But always I find something wrong. Either they don't get clothes so nice and sweet, or they're hard on my hands, or the like. So every time I'm glad when they're gone and I can come back to good, reliable Rinso. I don't wonder it's the biggest-selling package soap."

Rinso is grand in washers, too. The makers of 33 famous washing machines say, "Use Rinso for safety and for whiter, brighter clothes." Rinso gives rich, lasting suds—even in hardest water. Marvelous suds for dishes and all cleaning. Easy on your hands.

The first act deals with the period between 1600 and 1835, depicting the explorations of Marquette and Joliet. A featured scene will be that of the girls in the Orchesis club in an Indian war dance.

The land sales in Chicago, the organization of Will county an Jan. 12, 1836, and the formation of early religious and educational groups will be depicted in the second episode.

"My Son Gained 8 Pounds in 2 Months"

Writes Mrs. J. W. Eddy, Togo, Saskatchewan

OVALTINE is a delicious pure food concentrate first created in Switzerland and approved by thousands of physicians. Already it has gained world-wide recognition—and is particularly noted for the remarkable increases in weight and nerve poise which so frequently occur when it is added to the daily diet.

For example, Mrs. J. W. Eddy of Togo, Sask., Canada, writes: "My son was restless, thin and cranky—needed something to pick him up in weight and make him eat better. Now after taking Ovaltine for only 2 months, Warren is entirely changed—has gained exactly 8 pounds. Everyone who sees him asks what in the world we're doing to make him look so well."

Another mother, Mrs. Betty Ayres, 524 E. Martin Street, Roxborough (Philadelphia), Pa., writes: "My little girl is 9 years old, was very picky about her eating and had weighed only 51 pounds. Hearing so much about Ovaltine, I decided to get some for her. Now, in a little over 3 weeks, she has gained 7 pounds."

These letters, of course, cover only two individual cases. And we do not claim or guarantee that similar results will occur in every case where Ovaltine is used. But these two letters are so typical of thousands we have received, that we believe a thorough trial of Ovaltine is justified by every intelligent mother whose child is nervous and underweight.

Thousands of nervous people, men and women, use Ovaltine to restore vitality when fatigued ... Ovaltine is also highly recommended as a strengthening food for nursing mothers, convalescents, and the aged—also for sleeplessness when taken as a hot drink just before going to bed.

Ovaltine is very inexpensive to serve—and can be obtained at all drug and grocery stores. You simply give it mixed with milk—either hot or cold—and children love its delicious taste. . . Note special offer at the right.

With new and different colored pictures of Orphan Annie and Sandy on it. Our regular price 50c—now sent for only 10c (to cover cost of packing and mailing), and this aluminum seal from under the lid of a can of Ovaltine. (Be sure to send all of the aluminum seal.)

A WOMAN'S IDEA CREATED THIS OPPORTUNITY.
If you are between 28 and 45 years of age and know anything about children, read this ad fully. It may decide your future. Some years ago a mother sought for her child a way out of the confusion of ideas with which children have always been faced. She was surprised to find that such material as she wanted was not available—and, being herself an educator, she set out to compile a service which the world has since hailed as one of the greatest advancements in the moulding of minds for human progress. NOW, it has been placed within reach of all—and that gives you such an opportunity as you may never have presented to you again. To those who qualify we offer as a special, extra reward for success, a positive guarantee of $100.00 for the first three months work. We furnish a week's intensive training and pay a salary in addition for the training period. Commission and bonuses provide average monthly earnings of $135.00 to $200.00. If you want to meet interesting people, make a really good income, and carve a real future for yourself, an interview will be given you Monday between 9 a. m. and 4 p. m. by Miss Gillett, Suite 1000, 360 N. Michigan.

by taking your furniture out of storage? That is exactly what is being done by the two newest tenants at

The Bryn Mawr Apt. Hotel.

They pay $55 per mo. for a 2 rm. apt. that rents for $75 furnished. There's a saving of $20 a mo. and now that they use their own furniture they no longer pay storage. If your furniture is in storage—think this over—then let us help you work it out.

Day By Day Story of the Experimental Farms

By Bob Becker

Tom Moves In

THERE are two turkey hens on the Wheaton experimental farm that would like to know how to get rid of a too attentive wild turkey gobbler. The problem of these two hens, as outlined to us by Rawlings the other day, is very amusing. When this wild turkey gobbler arrived [the second to come up from the woods of Mississippi this spring] he was penned up with two Bourbon Red hens.

The idea was to tame the wild bird and get him used to the farm and the domesticated birds so that he wouldn't fly away when released. The wings of the new gobbler have not been clipped, so he can fly if he wants to.

Tom's One Track Mind.

After keeping the new "Tom" in a pen for a short time Rawlings took him and his two friends, the Bourbon Red hens, to the woods with the idea that they could live "in the wilds." Everybody thought such a setting would be ideal for the birds. But to Rawlings' astonishment the wild turkey gobbler and the hens were back in the poultry yard in less than two hours.

The gobbler doesn't want the two hens to get out of his sight. He looks on them as his only real pals, the first friends he made here in the north, and doesn't want to be separated from them. But they would like to leave their "boy friend" because they want to nest.

One of the Bourbon Reds, apparently despairing of ever sneaking away to the woods and nesting, finally crawled into a small coop near the chicken yard and started to lay her eggs. The other day we stood near the sheepfold and watched the wild turkey gobbler sort of parade back and forth near the coop in which the hen turkey was laying. And he refuses to budge from the scene.

It's Getting Greener.

The warm weather last week, in combination with rains and hot sun for one day, added a deeper note of green to pastures and woods on the farm. When we hiked through the fields and woods to see how the new season was changing the outdoors the willow trees along the creek were alive with warblers, the dogtooth violets and hepaticas had thousands of blossoms opened up to greet the warm sun, brown thrashers were singing from the treetops, and in one small opening in the oaks woods where a cornstalk feeding station reminds one of the winter we saw the first violets of the season.

These flowers, the beneficiaries of more sun than the violets in the woods, have got a running start and are therefore ahead of the flowers in the shaded areas.

About the Bees.

After we had watched more than twenty palm warblers, newly arrived migrants among the warblers, we hiked through the woods to see how a colony of wild bees in an oak tree were getting along. The hive was seething with activity.

I could put an ear to the tree trunk and hear the hum of the workers inside. The entrance hole to the hive, several inches wide, was crowded with "trafic" as the pollen and honey gatherers hustled in and out.

No Bumbles Yet.

But we saw no bumblebees buzzing around looking for food. Apparently it is a little early for these. In some respects spring is a sad season for the bumblebees. Winter kills most of them, so spring finds their population low. But enough fertile females survive to start new colonies at this time of the year.

In this climate the female builds a little nest in a hole in the ground late in the season, deposits about half a cupful of honey there, and then lays one or more eggs near this store of food either in the fall or in the spring, so that the young bees will have nourishment when they hatch out.

We understand that this honey stored up by the bumblebee, an inconsequential amount when compared to the ample winter supplies of the honeybee, is, however, very delicious with a rare, gamey flavor.

Compare These Rates

This bank is one of the few companies in the country which will lend on the same rates and terms regardless of whether you borrow on a new car or a used one, and, so far as insurance is concerned, Fire and Theft is all we require, although we strongly urge that every car owner insure himself against collision hazards. In all cases we want the insurance to be placed with the borrower's own broker or agent. Premiums may be added to the loan account, the broker paid in full, and the borrower settles up with us in monthly installments.

Vegetables and Fruits Take to Frying Kettle

First Dipped in Batter, Foods Are Given Crisp, Delicate Brown Coating.

By Mary Meade.

THE great outdoors has no monopoly on spring. May invades the household, the kitchen, with the same restless gayety that fills the brooks and breezes.

Even the French frying kettle feels the vernal magic. The hot doughnuts and sturdy croquettes of a winter season, rebuffed by a lack of warm weather appreciation, take a spring holiday while new crisp coats, fresh fruit and vegetable fritters, make a play for dinner table favor.

Crisp, Golden Jacket Is Magic for Cauliflowerets.

A crisp, golden jacket for cauliflowerets, for fresh garden asparagus, for baby carrots, or tender green beans is the delightful something that the clever cook conjures out of her deep frying kettle, and the result is new temptation for spring dinners!

Fruit fritters, sweet, brown, and crunchy, take their place in the dessert sun. Sometimes, too, they're the main featured dish of the spring luncheon, along with pink fried ham or crisp bacon. In either case, these fruit filled crispies are full of appeal for erratic spring appetites.

Fruit and Vegetable Fritters Require Few Extra Minutes.

Now we know May weather makes cooks lazy. At least, it has that effect on us. That's why, when we plan these fresh fruit and vegetable fritters for a spring meal, we try to cut down on other last minute preparations. They do take a few minutes of fairly concentrated attention just before serving time. So the rest of the dinner becomes extra simple—cold cuts of meat, perhaps, and a salad that can be prepared in the morning, before the weather makes its insidious demands on your ambition.

The mixing of the fritter batter itself is so simple that it takes only a few precious minutes from a lazy [or busy] day. Note these suggestions for immediate reference, and watch your May menus wake up to the tune of new crisp textures, golden color, and the fine flavor of well fried, well drained foods.

Crisp Coating Acquired by Process of French Frying.

First the fresh vegetables, decked out as hot fritters or simply French fried with a crisp coating. The fried cauliflowerets head the parade.

FRENCH FRIED CAULIFLOWERETS.

Separate one firm head of cauliflower into separate flowerets. Cook in boiling salted water, or steam, until tender. Then dip each floweret in a batter made of:

1 cup all-purpose flour.
½ teaspoon salt
2-3 cup milk
2 eggs, well beaten.

Mix flour and salt. Add milk gradually, then eggs, and beat until smooth. Fry in deep fat heated to 375 degrees F., until delicately browned, 3 to 5 minutes. Remove and drain on crumpled soft paper, or on paper toweling. Serve immediately.

FRENCH FRIED ASPARAGUS.

2 eggs
Salt
Fine cracker crums.

Cook or steam asparagus stalks until tender. Beat eggs well. Dip each stalk in crums, slightly salted, then in beaten egg and again in crums. Fry in deep hot fat [375 degrees F.] until delicately browned, drain on unglazed paper, and serve at once.

CARROT CRISP-COATS.

Cook whole baby carrots until tender in boiling salted water. Drain. Dip each in fine cracker crums, then in beaten egg, again in crums, and fry in deep hot fat, 375 degrees F. When they are brown, drain and serve hot.

FRITTERED GREEN BEANS.

Cook green beans until tender in boiling water [do not cover or overcook or the fresh green color will be lost]. Drain and roll each in crums, then in beaten egg, and again in crums. Fry as directed for the fried carrots above, frying only a few at a time to prevent their sticking together.

CHEESE CORN FRITTERS.

½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 egg
1 cup canned corn
¼ cup grated sharp cheese.

Mix dry ingredients together. Add beaten egg yolk, corn, and grated cheese. Fold in stiffly beaten egg white. Drop by spoonful into deep, hot fat [370 degrees F.] and fry until light brown. Drain on unglazed paper. Serve as main luncheon dish with bacon or frizzled ham.

Fruit fritters for frivolous spring desserts [or as a tempting accompaniment to the meat course] are equally simple. Here's a welcome newcomer.

FRESH PEAR FRITTERS.

1 cup flour
1¼ teaspoons baking powder.
2 tablespoons sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1-3 cup milk
1 egg.

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Add milk gradually, then well beaten egg, and beat until smooth. Fry batter coated pear sections in deep fat at 375 degrees F., drain, sprinkle with confectioner's sugar, and serve hot. A clear, hot, lemon sauce may be passed with the fritters if they are served as a dessert.

ORANGE FRITTERS.

Separate 2 large navel oranges into sections. Dip sections in batter as above, and fry in deep fat. Serve as accompaniment to roast lamb or braised pork chops.

Fresh strawberries and whipped cream suggest a springlike filling for "Queen Fritters," nothing more than fried cream puff shells. Merely make your regular cream puff batter for this, and fry it by spoonful in deep hot fat.

"—AND SOMETHING NEW—"

Spring Bridal Finery Glorious in Pastel Shades

By Rhea Seeger.

TROUSSEAU collectors are warned to bring their favorite restoratives when they go to the shops. Bridal lingerie this spring brings out all the best adjectives and superlatives. The colors alone deserve a poem or two, but since we mundanely shop for a living and report what is new we'll do our share with a few paragraphs, written, we hope, with good results. Any bride to be, if she already isn't floating on clouds of romance and excitement, or feeling rosily ethereal, instantly will achieve that state of glory after one look at the shimmering satin, lovely silks, fragile laces, crisp cottons, and the filmy chiffons that are used or designed by imaginative wizards who fashion such luscious trifles.

You'll find traditional satin nightgowns in creamy, ivory satin, lavishly trimmed with lace—lace that looks as if it had been treasured for years and then brought out for such an epic occasion. You'll see finely pleated chiffon nightgowns, such as formerly came from Paris with exorbitant price tags, priced for slender budgets. You exclaim over ninon sets of robe, nightgown, slip, teddy, or French panties, of pale blush pink, trimmed with dainty laces that are expertly appliqued.

There are dozens of colors . . . pale water colors, filched from the delicate beauty of hydrangea blossoms, lavenderish blues, ethereal cloud pinks, dove grays, soft yellows, pale greens, and some pale raspberry tones that are good enough to eat.

Capes are new—short shoulder capes pleated in sunburst formation and longer ones that sweep the floor—in beautiful colors that contrast with a nightgown or sheath slips of satin. But the romantic coats of chiffon still are available in raspberry, in sapphire blue, in golden yellow, pale green, and the same in capes. Bed jackets that were fashioned of satin or velvet come in for spring and summer trousseaux in chiffon and in capes.

A brand new trick is a gown of printed chiffon with a fetching little jacket of piqué in the same printed design as the gown. On cotton nightgowns the shoulder straps are of satin and the short separate jacket repeats the color and satin of the straps.

There are so many lovely things to shop for, so many different ideas for this season's bride that we had a frantic time deciding what to sketch.

Negligee Is Trimmed in Old Fashioned Ruching.

The large center figure shows an airy confection of white dotted mousseline de soie . . . a delightful summer hostess or tea gown, as well as a divinely perfect bridal negligee. It is all in white, with huge, picturesque puffed sleeves and a billowing wide skirt that is tied high in front with a sash of the same fluttery, feminine material as the robe.

Left . . . pale pink or blue net, by the dozens of yards, makes a house coat or negligee to wear over chiffon, satin, dull crêpe, or floral printed chiffon nightgowns. Fat, old fashioned, but most captivating ruching is used to cuff the short sleeves and streak down the front closing. The belt is of the net. This is available in nearly all pastel colors.

At the extreme upper left . . . are two pleated chiffon gowns, one with a shaped yoke of pleated lace, the other with the plaited chiffon outlined in lace bands. One has a pointed hemline, the other an even one. Next is the shoulder cape of sunburst pleated chiffon in contrasting color, such as American beauty sapphire blue, yellow, and green.

WEDDING IN GOLD

A "wedding in gold," the newest in sophisticated fashion. The gown is cut in slim, straight lines, with a fitted bodice styled with a square neckline. Full sleeves flare in huge puffs from shoulder to elbow; from elbow to wrist they are closely fitted. All the fullness of the straight skirt is drawn to the center front, apparently held in place by a gold mesh cord which is tied in a bow.

DUO-TONE FIGURED
WILTON BROADLOOM

"Make the best broadloom you can—at the lowest price," instructed Mr. Olson. We did, and here it is. "In this broadloom," Mr. Olson ordered, "I want to embody every worth-while proven feature of the many broadlooms we make." After months of effort we've accomplished that, too. And here are the 10 features! First . . . a Jacquard Wilton construction, the aristocrat of all domestic weaves. Second . . . specially twisted frieze yarn to produce that distinctive and pebbly texture which made Tri-twist broadloom the most popular weave in years. Third . . . an embossed effect which created a sensation when introduced by us last year. Truly an amazing effect! The pattern appears as though it were hand carved into the rug! Fourth . . . duo-tone colors which have all the advantages of solid colors, but the added charm of pleasing designs. Fifth . . . exclusive patterns. Sixth . . . specially thick nap. Seventh . . . seamless, 9 and 12 feet wide. Eighth . . . ten new colors. Ninth . . . sturdy, three-ply, new virgin wool yarn. Tenth . . . will not show foot-marks. See this new Wilton broadloom no matter how much you expected to pay. Sold only in our two salesrooms—direct from our Factory to You at Low Factory Prices.

Patterns by Clotilde

Tub Frock for Sports or Informal Day Wear Is Smart in Three Ways.

By Clotilde.

A WASHABLE dress which performs many functions is indispensable in the summer wardrobe. One which may go through metamorphosis as one travels around during a busy, active day in warm weather is a "must" in the collection of every wise woman who plans her clothes carefully. The model illustrated today is one which may be converted hour by hour, as the character of one's activity changes, into several types of garment. With the cape it is suitable for spectator sports, picnicking, shopping, hostessing, and just being well though comfortably dressed at home.

With the cape removed the frock is ideal for tennis, golf, and other outdoor sports. With the back unbuttoned to form two smart lapels one may get in her daily share of sun bathing while she is engaged in a round of golf or tennis.

The cape is attached by means of two smart buttons on the shoulders. It extends gracefully almost to the elbow and flares sufficiently to be comfortable and yet is nicely tailored. The skirt is straight and unplaited in front, with a generous plait in the back panel fulfilling the "action" requirement of every sports frock. The belt is simple, with the fastening either in front or in back. The center seaming of the back panel achieves a smart and slenderizing line. Two patches form a clever and distinctive pocket at the left of the front panel.

This cool frock is attractive in cottons, although tub silks are smart possibilities. Cottons in shantung or linen effects are pretty, as are modish challis prints and linens. This dress is exceedingly simple to sew and delightfully easy on the budget.

Style No. 3310 is designed for sizes 14, 16, and 18 years, and 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measurement. Size 16 requires 3⅛ yards of 39 inch material, with ¾ yard additional of 39 inch fabric for the cape.

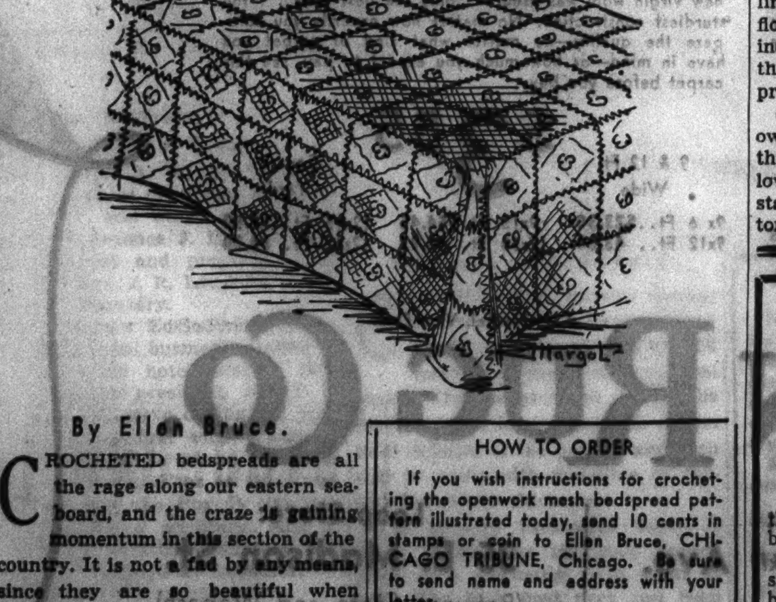
A Crochet Bedspread in an Openwork Mesh Pattern



By Ellen Bruce.

CROCHETED bedspreads are all the rage along our eastern seaboard, and the craze is gaining momentum in this section of the country. It is not a fad by any means, since they are so beautiful when used on a four poster bed of mahogany, walnut, or maple. The noticeable difference in the present day spreads with those of a few years back is that the present foundation spread is of matching sateen in either white, ecru, or eggshell, rather than the pink and blue pastels which were most popular a decade or two ago.

Mercerized crochet cotton is the ruling favorite for the openwork mesh pattern illustrated today. Each square is made separately and joined when sufficient medallions for the entire coverlet are made. This is excellent summer pickup work because it is not difficult and no great length of time is required for the completion of the square.

HOW TO ORDER

If you wish instructions for crocheting the openwork mesh bedspread pattern illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Ellen Bruce, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter.

Movie Actor's Home Is Similar to Petit Trianon

Rambling One Story House Has Glorious Setting of Trees and Flowers.

"What's Wrong with Your Rooms," a booklet by Edith Weigle, explains several methods of furniture arrangement in the home. It was written in answer to many questions of puzzled amateur decorators. Price, 5 cents by mail, 3 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby.

By Edith Weigle.

WILLIAM POWELL, movie actor, has brought Versailles to Beverly Hills, Cal. His new home there looks for all the world like the Petit Trianon. It is long, low [one story in height], and gleaming white in a sun that never shone with such brilliancy in France. Behind it rise the tall, gracefully swaying plumes of eucalyptus and pepper trees; before it winds the motor drive, encircling a huge bed of flowers, and to one side extends an open court with an outdoor swimming pool.

The interiors are notable for their beautiful structural details—dentil cornices, paneled doors under carved, broken arch pediments, a stunning, curved central stairway, and wide doorways and windows. The dining room is French Empire with white painted walls and enormous crystal chandelier contrasting with the mellow richness of dark mahogany table and chairs. The latter have white upholstered seats and backs—the fabric having a fur like texture.

Plain Walls and Carpets Compliment the Furniture.

The drawing room is done in 18th century English combined with conservative modern. The luxurious couch and a huge, lether and fabric covered lounge chair are contemporary in design, as are two small tables. On one wall, an elaborate Chinese Chippendale gilt framed mirror hangs above a mahogany table with lyre motifs in the base. A chair in the Chinese Chippendale style is near the fireplace, across from the lounge chair, and on the beautifully carved wooden mantel is a large statue of Kwan Ying, the Chinese goddess of mercy.

Luxurious Hangings Sound Final Note of Elegance.

One spot that is popular with Mr. Powell's friends is the pine room. Knotty pine walls and ceiling, a huge, old fashioned, tiled fireplace, and comfortable chairs, in plaid upholstery, create an atmosphere of informality. Corner cupboards are filled with pieces of early American glass and earthenware. A large door opens on the court and pool, and the bar, near it, serves guests outdoors as well as in, for it is backed by windows, and faced by a pine bar and long legged chairs.

There is a formal drawing room done in the Empire mode, with an enormous mirror panel rising to the cornice above the white marble fireplace. An interesting detail of the latter is a flanking pair of fluted columns surmounted by Janus [double faced] heads, in the Grecian manner.

The windows are equipped with Venetian blinds over which long, floor length hangings are elaborately draped. A crystal drop chandelier sounds the final note of elegance in this interior.

"Fortune" in Tea Leaves Inspires New Linen Cloth

HAVE you seen the gay new linen cloths for tea tables? They are called "tea leaves" because they have a pattern in green for a border, showing all the omens any fortune teller reads in the leaves at the bottom of your tea cup. Each is labeled so there will be no mistake about it: "Joy, prosperity, engagement, travel," etc.

Another small tablecloth in white linen has a charming border of field flowers, stenciled, with blue predominating. The same is available with the posies in brown or green. The price is low.

Or perhaps you'd like to make your own luncheon cloths and napkins. At this same Chicago store you will find lovely designs in cross stitch, already stamped, and a fine array of pastel toned silks for the work.

THE STAMP COLLECTOR

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning value. Do not ask where stamps may be sold as the Postage Stamps and Coins advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

THE end of this week will be marked by the opening of "TIPEX," as the Third International Stamp exhibition has been dubbed, at the Grand Central Palace, New York City. While this exhibition is held annually, coming to the United States at about ten year intervals, it derives the numerical part of the title from the fact that this is the third show to be held in this country.

As usual the international shows attract more important collections than do the national or local affairs, for it requires an outstanding display of stamps to win a first prize in any class. About 800 exhibits, selected from the greatest collections in the world, will be on display from May 9 to 17, inclusive.

Nearly 300 frames will be shown by English collectors alone, and included in these will be selections from the splendid collection of United States stamps owned by Sir Nicholas Waterhouse. J. B. Seymour, also of England, will show the collection of the stamps of Great Britain which won the grand award at the international show at Vienna last year.

With all of the world's collectors competing for honors, it would not be surprising to see many prizes carried back across the sea when the show ends, for the United States will be hard pressed to uphold its end with such collectors as Judge Robert S. Emerson, Alfred F. Lichtenstein, and Theodore E. Steinway eliminated from competition by accepting positions upon the jury of award. However, each international show brings to light some outstanding collections never before exhibited, and these may save sufficient honors for this country.

Such a collection has been entered by S. Newbury of Chicago, and his selection of early United States stamps will command the serious attention of every specialist in the issues of our country. Win, show, or place, or even also ran, Mr. Newbury's stamps are without a peer in condition, and in the selection and balance maintained throughout.

Stamp Book Out.

The sixth annual edition of the United States specialized catalog of first day covers has been placed on sale. It now fills 32 pages, and shows the various covers arranged in groups which include commemoratives, regular issues, air mail, special delivery, state overprints; coils and stamped envelopes, commemorative, regular, and air mail; also post cards. Dates and places of issue are given and where the information is available, the number of covers mailed is included. The book is priced at 25 cents and may be obtained from the publisher, Leo August, 128 Market street, Newark, N. J.

Club Notes.

A stamp club has been organized by the Halsted Street Institutional church, 1935 S. Halsted street, and was fortunate in having Cornelius S. Loder, an active and experienced collector, as the speaker at the first meeting. Neighborhood collectors are invited to attend, and may obtain complete information from Blair Latshaw, the sponsor of this group, at the above address.

The Chicago Precancel club is holding an all-day meeting in the 18th floor clubrooms, La Salle hotel, today. There will be a bourse and a general get together for precancel collectors. Every one is welcome.

Cachets and Covers.

The Westmont Cover club, Westmont, Ill., will sponsor a pair of cachets on May 29, to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the birth of Patrick Henry. Send covers in pairs, using standard 6¾ size envelopes, unsealed, franked with first class postage, to reach Westmont by May 22, and include 1 cent per cover for forwarding. Commemoratives on wrappers appreciated.

Collectors who are not familiar with cachets and first day covers will find the subjects, explained in detail in Mr. Cabeen's booklet, "D—Cover Collecting," which is sold through the Tribune Public Service Offices, 1 South Dearborn street, or Tribune Tower, Chicago, at 5 cents, post free.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, May 4.

Garden work is in full swing at this time, and especially the completion of lawn making. Again it seems necessary to emphasize the need of doing this work as early as possible in order to obtain strong plants before hot weather comes. If the soil has packed hard, always spade the ground and work up a fine seedbed before sowing the seed. Use a high quality mixture, and do not skimp by using too little. Roll light soils as soon as the sowing is completed. Roll heavy ground after the growth has reached one inch.

Tuesday, May 5.

Food should be supplied to the trees, and especially those which must grow where other vegetation is seeking food. Feed trees when the buds are swelling. Make a series of holes around the trees at the farthermost tips of the branches. Holes should be about 2 inches in diameter, and 18 inches deep. Fill the holes with a mixture of half food and half soil. Water in with a hose. One feeding each year will supply the tree with sufficient food. Old trees may be greatly benefited in this manner.

Wednesday, May 6.

Wrap the trunks of newly planted trees with burlap to form a protection against sunscald and borers. Wait until all danger of frost is passed before planting dahlias and tomatoes. Give hardy lilies a good mulch of leafmold, peat, or thoroughly decayed manure. These may be applied after the plants have made some growth. Continue to work up a supply of tender bedding plants.

Thursday, May 7.

Lettuce and other leaf crops are stimulated with applications of nitrate of soda, but do not overfeed at any time. The wheelhoe is labor saving in a vegetable garden or wherever it can be used. Keep all tools in the best condition. Hoes should be cleaned and oiled each evening or when the work is done for the day.

Friday, May 8.

The shrub beds may be carefully spaded. Edge the beds. As soon as the strawberries show a good growth mulch between the rows and up to the plants. Mulching with straw protects the fruits and forms a fine protection against hot weather. As soon as the hardy annuals are up sufficiently to thin, see that they are not allowed to crowd one another. Give each plant space enough to develop.

Saturday, May 9.

Do not allow newly planted evergreens to dry out. Water whenever necessary. Portulaca, the sun plant, is one of the best edging plants, or for massing in hot spots. The seeds may be sown in a flat and transplanted. Try a few of the fine double colors, for they resemble double roses. An early dressing of the asparagus bed with commercial plant food or well decayed manure will encourage a quick, heavy growth.

[Prepared in coöperation with the Garfield Park conservatory.]

More TIPS FOR GARDENERS

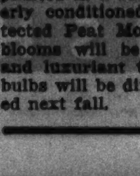
THE BEAUTY of your garden or lawn this spring and summer depends on what you do about soil conditioning right now. Money, time, and labor spent on seeds and plants in the spring are wasted when the hot sun parches and bakes the garden . . . unless the soil has been carefully prepared.

HOW TO USE PEAT MOSS

Before planting seeds, perennials, or shrubs of any kind—for lawn or garden, be sure to dig in thoroughly moistened Emblem-Protected Peat Moss, "the Mother of Humus."* This ideal soil conditioner contributes the necessary humus for healthy plant growth. As the sponge-like cells fill with moisture and expand, it breaks up hard clay soils, allows plant roots to breathe, and promotes the development of vigorous root systems. It gives body to sandy soils, provides a storage reservoir of water and liquid plant foods for the use of plants when needed most.

SUCCESS IN TRANSPLANTING

Before transplanting rose bushes, evergreens and shrubs, be sure that Emblem-Protected Peat Moss has been thoroughly mixed with the surrounding earth for the stimulation of rapid root development.



Gladioli and dahlia tubers thrive when planted in a soil that has been properly conditioned with Emblem-Protected Peat Moss. The foliage and blooms will be much more healthy and luxuriant this summer—and the bulbs will be dirt-free and easily lifted next fall.

A WORD OF WARNING

All peat moss is not Emblem-Protected. Only properly aged peat moss from the world's finest peat bogs bears the P.I.C. triangular symbol. For this guarantee of quality you pay a trifle more per bale, but it's worth it. Each bale contains more peat substance for your soil, peat substance that will readily make humus. Atkins & Durbrow dealers can supply you with Pioneer G.P.M. "Emblem-Protected" Peat Moss, SORBEX pulverized moss peat and manured peat moss products.

Acknowledging Wedding Gifts Is Social Duty

Keeping Notebook Record of Presents Simplifies "Thank You" Letters.

The following booklets on wedding etiquet are available at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby, or by mail from this department. Address mail requests to Helen Bartlett, Etiquet Editor, Chicago Tribune: "Planning the Church Wedding," 3 cents, by mail 5 cents; "Selecting the Trousseau," 2 cents, by mail 3 cents; "Correct Wedding Apparel," 2 cents, by mail 3 cents; "Small Weddings at Small Cost," 2 cents, by mail 3 cents; "Color Ideas for Spring and Summer Weddings," 2 cents, by mail 3 cents.

By Helen Bartlett.

LEST the exceedingly busy bride forget, during the whirling weeks preceding her wedding, let us remind her of another of her social obligations in respect to the wedding. We refer to the acknowledgments of the presents she is sure to receive. The bride might argue that it doesn't seem necessary to worry about that until after the ceremony, when she will have a few minutes to write the "thank you" letters.

The letters should be written just as promptly as possible, although it is true that the actual writing may be postponed until after the wedding if she finds that she hasn't the time before then. The particular reason for our insisting on the bride's thinking of this little problem in advance is that it is necessary for her to have some organized plan to take care of the gifts as they arrive and keep tab on them so as to avoid the confusion and embarrassment of not knowing who sent what. It would be an unforgivable error to thank Mrs. Smith for a silver tray when what she actually sent was a lamp.

Here's a plan. Let the bride keep a little notebook. Then, when the wedding presents arrive, and she opens them, she may record such information as she needs to know in a systematic fashion. For instance, she should record the article itself, the name and address of the sender, to avoid scurrying around for addresses later, the date received, the date the "thank you" note was written and, perhaps, the name of the store in which the article was purchased, in case it is necessary to exchange it. Such a registration will be extremely helpful to the bride in writing her acknowledgments promptly and satisfactorily, and also in avoiding sending duplicate letters.

And all the gifts should be acknowledged by a personal note. Telephoning the message will not suffice, nor will a verbal "thank you, Mrs. Howard," as she goes down the receiving line. Personal notes on plain, simple stationery, written by the bride herself, are the only answer. They need not be long letters, but just a simple, sincere expression of appreciation.

While the bride herself composes and writes the messages, in each letter she mentions the name of her new husband, or, if the ceremony has not yet been performed, of her fiance, and expresses his appreciation together with hers. If the present was sent by a married couple the acknowledgment is sent to the wife, but it is an added courtesy to mention her husband, as well, even though the plural "you" is supposed to imply both the husband and wife.

Letters to intimate friends and relatives are signed by the bride with only her given name. Or, if they are written after the wedding ceremony, she signs them with her first name, maiden name, and husband's last name. . . . Mary Smith Brown.

Sheer French Yarn Makes Knitted Sports Sweater

By Jean Macdonald.

COMFORTABLE country clothes for successful week-ends always should include one hand knitted sports sweater of imported wool. The colors must be of the most brilliant hues obtainable or the most delicate of the pastels, and both may be worn with matching or contrasting tweed skirts.

The sweater illustrated today is made of sheerest imported French yarn—in a gloriously vivid shade of red. The high boat neck has been giving the crew neck a run for its money in sports clothes this season, and the band of ribbing across the neck and shoulders of this model is distinctly individual.

The simplicity of the ribbing and stockinette stitch makes the sweater one which the amateur may undertake without any hesitancy. Cashmere and floss angora may be used. If a less expensive yarn is desired, a fine French or chiffon zephyr may be used. These lightweight wools are as cool as the thinnest cottons or linens for summer wear, since they are highly absorbent.

HOW TO ORDER

If you wish instructions for knitting the fine wool sports sweater with a boat neck illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Jean Macdonald, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter.

Be sure to include the following measurements:

BANBURY CROSS.

By Nancy Cabot.

"BANBURY CROSS" is a decidedly new pattern based on a juvenile theme as old as the nursery rime for which it was named. The pattern has preserved the traditional character of the hobby horse in spite of its clever streamlining. Quiltmakers who desire to be ultramodern when making this block may use bright, novel prints. There isn't a boy who doesn't like a rocking horse, even if he doesn't own one. He will be doubly appreciative when he sees the motif used as the theme for his special bedroom. The entire quilt is composed of these gay, cheerful little horses.

Patterns of this design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices: One South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

WORKS FOR CHILDREN'S THEATER

Miss Frances Weary, a member of the Chicago Junior league, is one of those working for the Children's theater which is closing its season on Saturday afternoon with the last performance of "Mr. Dooley Jr." in the theater in the Chicago Historical society building in Lincoln park at North avenue. This picture of Miss Weary was taken at a recent charity dance when she was wearing a navy blue frock with crisp white organdy bodice. She returned not long ago from a vacation passed in Arizona.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

MR. X. is a young man who has been paralyzed on his entire left side for nine years. Because of this infirmity it is impossible for him to get around without assistance. The family has no car and, for a long period, he spent day after day in his home. Before this trouble handicapped him he was an industrious person with a good work record. Because of his former achievements and his good mind, it was difficult for him to accept a life of emptiness. Finally a wheel chair was obtained for him, and the possession of it changed his entire routine, brought him out of doors and gave him a new lease on life.

It seems incredible that a thief would prey even upon a disabled person, but while the invalid was visiting in the home of friends some weeks ago, his wheel chair was stolen. It has been a severe loss to him and it will be impossible for him to obtain another unless some reader can donate a discarded one. With spring weather coming the young man dreads going back to the old confinement he endured a year ago.

The following letter describes the need of another invalid.

"Dear Miss Brown: I am an elderly man with a helpless wife who is unable to walk without assistance, and only a short distance with aid. Many people read your section and I wonder if any one of them would have a wheel chair which is of no use to them. We live near Garfield park and, with a wheel chair, could spend our leisure time there on nice days. It would be a wonderful relief from the long hours we now spend sitting in the house. G. H. S."

A chair would bring much happiness to not only one, but two elderly people in this case.

Another invalid writes: "Dear Sally Joy Brown: Here I am again, and I am ashamed to ask for any thing more after all you have done for me, but I have no one else to consult. I wonder if there are any more jigsaw puzzles which I can obtain. I do not want them for myself alone. I try to bring a little cheer into the lives of other shut-ins. After I work the puzzles I pass them along. Lately I have had more requests than I have been able to fill. One invalid who has been in a wheel chair for 15 years has been waiting patiently for some time. She is in a public institution and puzzles are her sole recreation.

"I also would be happy to have old post cards and albums which your readers may not care to keep.

"Guess you remember that I am a shut-in and cannot call for things. You have been so kind to me that I feel you are my real friend."—M. W.

If you have articles such as Miss W. requests, won't you forward them to her so that she may enjoy what you no longer use?

STUBBORN RHEUMATISM

Most of the aches, pains, stiffness, soreness and lameness of stubborn rheumatism and rheumatic gout are caused or aggravated by excess uric acid.

This being the case, one outstanding, swift and safe prescription, as any modern druggist will tell you is Allenru Capsules—little green, easily swallowed capsules that are powerful yet harmless.

Take these highly effective capsules as directed—often the pain and agony go in 48 hours—you won't be disappointed.

The 10 Year Old Need Not Be a Problem Child

Parent Must Understand Youngster to Correct His Many Little Faults.

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

I DON'T know whether spring has a particularly demoralizing effect on the 9 and 10 year olds, intoxicating them with its freedom and blue sky and bursting green—or whether it's just coincidence—but, lately, letter after letter seems to be written by mothers utterly exasperated by the antics of their 9 and 10 year old sons.

Girls don't seem to go in quite so headlong a way through these years. The time when they are harder to understand and manage wisely seems to come later. But the boys of 8, 9, 10, and 11 can be the most obstreperous and ubiquitous of young animals.

"Inbetween" Engrossed in His Own Interests.

Perhaps, of all those that I've received, the following letter has the whole tale of woe packed into it, in about as concentrated a form as possible:

"My little boy is 9½, and causing me untold and exasperating experiences. His main trouble is such absolute engrossment in his own thoughts, books, drawings, or play, as to exclude every known and commonly necessary duty, from getting to school on time to going to bed.

"Food is of no importance until he's ravenously hungry . . . hours simply are not. Authority does not exist, and when it does, is terribly resented. He will not take orders.

"Talking to him elicits the reply that he cannot remember—shrugged shoulders answer all other reprimands. He is entirely on the defensive. It is impossible to deprive him of a thing, since he has an uncanny resourcefulness in entertaining himself.

"Any help you can render me with your valued counsel will be most gratefully appreciated."

Mismanagement Due to Lack of Understanding.

There it is, all in a nutshell. And, in this case, as in many others, I believe the mismanagement that causes all this friction is not a fundamental one of lack of real sympathy between mother and child. It is, rather, not understanding this behavior as merely a phase, to be handled accordingly.

If this fact is not recognized there is a tendency to think that boyish absorption is a sign of discourtesy, and that absence of responsibility is a real character fault. All this makes a parent manage her boy in the "wrongest" way possible. It makes her take seriously, even solemnly, all these annoying boy ways of which, half the time, the 10 year old himself isn't conscious. For example:

He is so absorbed he doesn't even know you've spoken once, twice, or thrice; so he doesn't answer.

He is in such a hurry to meet the boys, he asks you where his Scout equipment is, and actually doesn't sense that he's interrupting your conversation with the milkman—or the mayor!

A dozen times a day he forgets, barges in, gets himself hurt, or his clothes torn or dirty. He is oblivious of appearances, has no sense of time, and is beginning to enjoy staying up in the evenings, but gets up at ungodly hours in the morning, no matter what time he goes to bed.

Now—what happens, especially if this 10 year old lives in such close quarters that he is always underfoot? Well, what often happens is that he is always colliding with the convenience [and sometimes the actual person] of his grownups, constantly shattering their quiet, and continually disturbing the sedateness of their ways.

No Youngster Will Be Model of Perfection.

It's not hard to live happily with your "inbetweens"—your boys and girls between little childhood and adolescence—if first: You'll realize that this is an age or phase that will be outgrown; and if, second: You'll realize that you must reach a compromise between what you want and what you can get!

The important thing is not to let your son or daughter of this age get away from you, in spirit. And if you'll try to understand them and be good friends with them, you'll be amazed at the influence you'll have. You'll be able to "put over" all the essentials.

Just what this age is, and how to manage children from 6 to 12, is described in a fully written booklet, "Living with Our Inbetweens—the Children from Six to Twelve." It is sent out on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Mrs. Bevans' column also appears in The Tribune on Monday and every other weekday.

MAKING AMERICA

No. 1—Heroism at Havana

● How this nation expanded from the original thirteen colonies to its present vastness can be seen at a glance in the accompanying maps.

● But what was back of this amazing national development is another story. Who are the heroes whose sacrifices gave birth to this greatest of nations? Who are the patriots whose unfaltering courage has saved the country in every hour of peril? What thrilling exploits are hidden away in the yellowing pages of history that in their day were vital to the nation's progress? What deeds of valor that an indifferent race of freemen has almost forgotten?

● The "Making America" series, the first of which, "Heroism at Havana," appears on page eight of this section, will retell from time to time the stories—frequently unfamiliar—of America's heroes.

Group Theater Makes Chicago Debut with Play by Odets

Band of Hope Becomes Rival of the Guild

"Awake and Sing" Brings Company Here After Five Years in New York.

By Charles Collins.

THE Group theater of New York will introduce itself to Chicago tomorrow night at the Selwyn, with Clifford Odets' drama, "Awake and Sing," as its medium. This event calls for a historical prolog, for the organization is an interesting manifestation of the spirit of the modern American stage. We have been hearing about the Group—perhaps an unhappy choice of name because it suggests amateurism and little theaterism to the average playgoer—for the last five years. We have been impressed by the fact that it has staged a Pulitzer prize winner ["Men in White"]; and we have been informed by much drum-beating that from its ranks there has sprung the star-eyed wonderboy of contemporary playwrights—the author of the work with which it is making its Chicago début.

An easy way to describe the origin of the Group is to call it an offshoot of the Theater Guild—a temperamental child with ideas of its own which flew off the nest early in its career and surprised its parents by its survival. Another way is to emphasize the Group's groupiness, and to tell how it runs away into the country every summer to lead the communal life and experiment with plays and acting in New England villages. But however arty or groupy or off the main line its way of life may be, the fact remains that its New York record is fairly impressive, and that Broadway drama critics have frequently used their best adjectives in praise of its acting.

Three Dreamers of the Theater Guild.

The movement started inside the Theater Guild's organization with an alliance of theatrical ideals between Harold Clurman, a stage manager, and Lee Strasberg, an actor, both of them young dreamers with talent. Clurman may be called the father of the band. They annexed a young woman of the Theater Guild named Cheryl Crawford, a play reader and casting director. These three are now the directors of the Group Theater, Inc.

The trio's first step was to persuade the Theater Guild to throw out a minor tentacle in the form of an experimental studio, where its young geniuses could try out queer-looking manuscripts. The first production of this apprentices' annex was "Red Rust," a drama from soviet Russia. Miss Crawford, Clurman, and a new recruit in the stage direction department named Herbert Biberman were the executives of this project; the "Red Rust" cast contained Lee Strasberg, Franchot Tone, Luther Adler, Ruth Nelson, William Challee and Eunice Stoddard. All except Tone are still members of the organization; the latter has gone to Hollywood glory. This happened in December, 1929.

In the summer of 1931 the dreamers, 30 strong, now calling themselves the Group but still under the Theater Guild wing, went off to Brookfield Center, Conn., for twelve weeks of rehersal in Paul Green's "The House of Connelly." They brought it into New York under Guild auspices and had a run of ten weeks. Then they staged another play out of the Guild's portfolio—"1931," by the Siftons—but it faded out quickly.

A six weeks' tour of eastern cities in "The House of Connelly" followed, and during this pilgrimage the Groupers decided to cut loose from the Guild's apron strings. "Too little common idelogy" is the official reason given for this parting. In the spring of 1932 Maxwell Anderson's "Night Over Taos" was staged in New York as the Group's first independent offering. It didn't last long.

In the summer of 1932 they roosted in a village called Dover Furnace and polished up "Success Story," by John Howard Lawson. This brought their first financial success on Broadway with a run of sixteen weeks. Then they staged Dawn Powell's "Big Night" and lost all the "Success Story" profits.

"Men in White" Brings B'way Success.

Summer of 1933; rehersals of Sidney Kingsley's "Men in White," at Warrensburg, N. Y. A Broadway première in September; an immediate hit; a Pulitzer prize; a sale of film rights, and a run of ten months.

Summer of 1934; Ellenville, N. Y. "Gold Eagle Guy" was the subject of their aestival cerebrations. It was "an experimental effort to interpret a recent American era," according to the Group's mouthpiece. It didn't catch on at the box office. In the course of the run, however, some of the Groupers decided to stage a one act play written by a member. This was Clifford Odets' "Waiting for Lefty," which contains the rabble-rousing oratory and emotional fervor of a labor union meeting when a strike is in the wind. This piece spread over the country like a rash among the radical amateurs.

The Group quickly followed its discovery of Odets by staging his first full length play, "Awake and Sing," and his second, "Till the Day I Die," an anti-Nazi opus, which had "Waiting for Lefty" as its curtain-raiser.

Last summer the Group was deprived of its philosophic meditations and spartan exercises in stagecraft among the cow pastures by the persistence of "Awake and Sing" at the Belasco theater, New York.

Their new productions of the season were "Weep for the Virgins," a quick closing affair, and Odets' third full length drama, "Paradise Lost." A stylized dramatization of Theodore Drieser's "An American Tragedy," called "The Case of Clyde Griffiths," and blaming its hero's sins on capitalism was their latest project.

The Group comes to Chicago in the fifth year of its existence to offer "Awake and Sing" as a sample of its quality. Next season it intends to bring the full acting strength of its organization here.

Sophie Tucker Brings Band to Terrace Room

Ben Pollack's Orchestra Comes to Urban Room at Congress Hotel.

SOPHIE TUCKER and her orchestra, directed by Jack Fulton, assisted by Ted Shapiro, will begin an engagement in the Terrace room of the Hotel Morrison next Friday. With her troupe will be the King's Jesters, an attraction at the Terrace room since last October.

Miss Tucker tells these stories of her early career [Circa 1911]:

"From the German Village, New York, I went to Tony Pastor's, on the Bowery. Then I landed in vaudeville, in blackface, because a manager told me that I had such an ugly face I ought to cover it.

"Then Ziegfeld saw me in Holyoke, Mass., and put me in the 'Follies.' I stopped the show, but only lasted two nights for the principals weren't keen about my overnight success. I let Ziggy know what I thought of him.

"Then to Chicago in 'Louisiana Lou.' What a cast that show had! Trixie Friganza, Lenora Ulric, a chorus girl; Bernard Granville, and Alexander Carr."

● Ben Pollack and his orchestra, featuring Doris Robbins, began an engagement in the Urban room of the Congress hotel last Thursday. During the past winter the band appeared with success at the Roosevelt hotel in New Orleans; the Lowry in St. Paul, and the Hotel Schroeder in Milwaukee.

● Last Friday night marked Henry Busse's eighth anniversary as an orchestra director. He leads the band at the Chez Paree. Harry Hichman, who is starring there, presented him with a platinum, diamond studded baton. . . ; Richman has added a new entertainer to his revue—a ventriloquist named Edgar Bergen. Also appearing with Richman are the D'Ivons, whose engagement is their first in Chicago. Both are expert ballet dancers. All of their music is especially written. They are husband and wife.

● As a farewell party for Freddy Martin, who leaves the Aragon next Thursday, a celebration will be held tomorrow with both Kay Kyser and Freddy Martin and their orchestras on the bandstand. This will mark the first north side appearance of Kay Kyser. During Freddy Martin's absence, the Aragon will present Griff Williams, west coast maestro, whose Chicago debut will take place next Saturday.

● "Dance Tea," a new Sunday afternoon feature, will be inaugurated today in the Continental room of the Stevens hotel. Ramon and Renita, dancers, and Xavier Cugat and his orchestra are now appearing nightly in the Continental room. They will perform informally at these Sunday teas.

● Helene Carol, a young dancer who won praise when she recently substituted at Harry's New York cabaret for the star, has returned as the feature attraction of the floor show. Margot Rebell continues as the singing star. Jack Irving, master of ceremonies, the Beatrice Gardner Girls' chorus, Al Wagner, Billy Meyers, Art Buckley, Dorothy Johnston, and Jeanette Graham also remain.

● A new type of dance music called "Bouncing Rhythm" was conceived and developed by Joe Sanders, band leader at the Blackhawk. Heading the list of singers on his program are Barbara Parks, tuneful Jack Swift, and the "Three Jacks."

IN FRENCH REVUE AT THE PALACE

Stage Letter Box

TO THE dramatic editor:

Chicago, April 27.—The Salvatori brothers, producers of the late "From Out of the Darkness," are now peacefully at work and will pay back every investor in due time. They had a great experience in the theatrical producing field; they learned plenty of its amazing tricks, and in the fall, if their plans mature, they will once again sponsor another production.

Immediately after arrangements are completed for backing, one of the boys will go to California and try to lure some "big game" into taking the lead, at any salary, just so they can secure her. At least $25,000 will go into the production of this new play, which the young author [Paul] is now working on.

Toumanova's Fervor Her Great Charm

Girl's Life a Story of Travel, Adventures, and Artistic Triumph.

By Edward Barry.

"I SAW Pavlowa in China in 1922 or '23."

The winds of the big world blew fresh and strong last Wednesday morning through the hotel dining room where Tamara Toumanova, the black haired, black eyed ballerina of the Russian company, which had arrived in Chicago only the night before, sat sipping a glass of milk, and answering endless questions about her extraordinary life.

Extraordinary seems a mild enough word. The experience referred to at the top of this column took place when the future dancer had hardly attained what is popularly supposed to be the age of reason. It began a series of events which have made the young woman one of the famous figures in her profession, although, even now, she would have no right to the ballot.

And before this first sight of the great Anna, the child's life could hardly have been called humdrum. She had been born somewhere in the middle of Asia a few years before, during that frightened exodus of patrician Russia that followed the revolution. Consciousness came to her in the strange countries of the far east.

A nostalgia for the sweet, familiar things of Europe troubled the little exiled colonies in the alien orient. The men and women who composed them had brought more remembered music than precious stones with them to the east. As Tamara grew older she became familiar with western art despite the difficulties in the way of full comprehension. The young girl realized that she belonged to a tradition entirely foreign to the vast population among which the émigrés lived.

"I always wanted to be a music player," she said last Wednesday in the fascinating English which takes a strange charm from her occasional habit of introducing a novel construction, putting an accent in an unexpected place, or misconceiving the sound of a vowel. These minor unconventionalities, by the way, are engaging features of a personality which blends the exotic and the familiar in an enchanting manner.

About the time that the young Toumanova first saw Pavlowa, this desire to be "a music player" crystalized into somewhat more definite form. All of her longings were turned toward that resplendent sister art called ballet. The opportunity to study it seriously came soon, for the Russian exiles, believing implicitly in the truth of the saying that every man has two countries—the land of his birth and France—began to settle in Paris in large numbers during the years that followed the peace of Versailles.

Many Outcasts Go to Capital of France.

Tamara entered a ballet school there, after her people came to the French capital to enjoy its traditional hospitality toward lost causes and the victims thereof.

The little girl danced in the company of Pavlowa herself, at the age of about 6. From that day to this, thirteen years or so, Tamara Toumanova has been almost constantly before the public. She appeared on the stage of the Opéra at 10.

The middle and late '20s saw the final appearances in Paris of the famous Diaghileff ballet. The company had lost Nijinski long before, and Tamara never set eyes on the man who became a legend not merely in his own lifetime but in his own youth! She saw Massine, however, and others of that remarkable company. The memory of the impression made by "Three Cornered Hat" and "Boutique Fantasque" is still fresh in her mind.

When Wasily de Basil salvaged the remnants of the disbanded Diaghileff company [its leader and organizer died in 1929] he chose some of the most promising of the younger dancers to bring the new Ballet Russe up to full strength. Toumanova was among them, and had her first chance at a big rôle in Monte Carlo, in 1930. The piece was "Cotillon."

Toumanova Has Been a Prima Ballerina for Six Years.

Reactions were good. During the last six years Toumanova has traveled almost incessantly with the troupe, and always as a prima ballerina. Hers is a familiar name among the dance conscious portions of the population in seven or eight European countries, and in dozens of North American cities.

In making arrangements for this interview I had hoped that the vivid contrast between the circumstances of Toumanova's existence and the lives of such work-a-day creatures as ourselves might make an interesting story. And it does, in a way, but the dramatic values of the contrast are largely lost because of the lack of a common denominator. If Toumanova were made of the same stuff as the rest of the world, then the excitement of her rare experiences would be greater. The engrossing tale would pour from her own lips and need no editing, not even in the matter of her astonishing infinitives.

But she is not of the same stuff, for the girl has a raptly serious attitude toward her profession that precludes the possibility of much objectification on her own part. Here is as accurate a picture of the ballerina as an hour's conversation may be expected to produce, with the earnest, almost solemn side of her character given first attention, and the sun flecks added later.

"I adore my life." This was the answer to a question, or a series of questions, designed to find out whether or not a person who lives such a busy, cosmopolitan type of existence suffers from an occasional desire to taste some of the quieter pleasures of a routined, well ordered world, with a settled place of abode to come home to at the end of the day in school. Such an idea probably never had occurred to the young woman, for a strenuous life of accomplishment and promise and still more accomplishment seems to her a perfectly happy one.

Great Ambition Is to Dance Better Every Year.

To dance well now, and to dance better a year from now—this is what Tamara Toumanova asks for herself. Her whole life is centered passionately on her art, and there is no lightness nor careless gayety where that art is in any way concerned.

Awed by a person so young who has traveled so extensively I sounded her out on her opinions of the various countries and cities of the world. Her replies were definite enough, but the reasons underlying them always were the same. A certain town is enthusiastic about the ballet; therefore she is enthusiastic about that town.

These cities happen to be London, Los Angeles, and Chicago, surely a strange combination. Her passionate sincerity makes it likely that the inclusion of the third was the result of something more than a desire to please. If you could hear her say, not once but two or three times, "I adore to dance in Chicago."

Another charming piece of English came when the term "boy friend" popped unexpectedly from her lips. The second word took the accent. This came when she was vaguely imagining the various features of the life of most girls of her age, and definitly turning the whole thing down in favor of the rigors of the road, and the eternal excitement of her art.

Has Attitude of Artist, Although Real Trouper.

Toumanova has never reached the dull stage where she takes everything for granted. The indifference which years and years of work might be thought to produce is not apparent by the slightest sign. She is vehement in her love for certain ballets ["Choreartium," "Cotillon," "Sylphides"], and definitly set against others. She does not enjoy her work in "Three Cornered Hat" nor in "Prince Igor," and has none of the trouper's calm acceptance of every feature of a job.

There is still mad excitement for her as she goes upon the stage to begin a dance. Is the house "live or dead"? How will the dance be received? The answers come immediately, the girl says, for she has developed some sort of telepathic means of communication with the area beyond the footlights.

Yes, Toumanova is a fanatic, but a very likable sort of fanatic. She heself, and the whole world with her, revolve about that one beloved art form. The idea that the ballet is a decorative and delightful adjunct to life, but not the whole of life, nor its most important part, is a concept that she would be loath to accept.

But even in the midst of this happy preoccupation with a profession in which she has been highly successful, Tamara Toumanova is troubled by the thought that she must some day retire. There is no doubt but what this tiny and distant cloud is casting some small shadow over the bright morning of her life, for she came to the subject on her own initiative.

Thought of Some Day Never Dancing Again Saddens Her.

By some strange chance, for the young woman's command of English does not yet extend to its more subtle points, she hit upon an unusual way of describing the poignant emotions of that remote day of retirement, and it could not have been bettered by any expert on the implications of words, and the vistas a deftly used vowel may reveal. "Nevermore to set foot upon a stage," she said, and the "nevermore" rolled from her tongue with a Poelike somberness and beauty.

"I adore to watch people."

This phrase seems a good enough start for the attempt I shall make now to spatter a few sun flecks over the picture of Tamara Toumanova. She not only adores to watch people, but she adores to come into strange towns, although this last kind of excitement has a generous admixture of rather breathless speculation as to the degree of enthusiasm with which the new and untried city will receive the ballet's efforts. It goes back, therefore, to that passionate interest in the dance which is the keynote of her character.

But it was pleasant to find in a person so mature for her years some traces of that childish delight in travel and strange faces which most people never outgrow. And Toumanova laughed gayly and infectiously as she told of the month of befuddlement the whole troupe went through because Kalamazoo, alone of all their scheduled towns, did not appear on any map.

This may dispel the glum picture many of us may have formed of a lethargic company of dancers, piling wearily into a train day after day, not caring where the next stop may be, and knowing that all of the world looks almost the same. It seems that there is intense interest in the itinerary, for additional maps were procured in a vain effort to locate Kalamazoo. [They must have secured the map of Iceland by mistake.]

The whimsical conversations that sped the long hours of travel turned often to the subject of this mysterious missing city. The idea of a town which could not be found on the map flowered in the soil of their rich imaginations into the odd shape of a frontier post with only a single building, a structure of many uses, in which the troupe would have to sleep and eat and dance. The real Kalamazoo was a delight when it came, even though the reality destroyed this vivid dream.

Toumanova's love of gentle humor was displayed again when she described Massine's thoughtfulness in offering her a cat for her very own, during, or immediately after, the Kalamazoo visit. The great dancer and choreographer, it seems, has made friends among both the human and feline population of the city, or had been empowered in some mysterious way to dispose of a cat by gift or otherwise. Toumanova declined the proffered pet with thanks, fearing, perhaps, that it might complicate her life still further.

Festival Opens National Music Week in City

Civic Music Association Holds Gathering at Orchestra Hall Today.

National Music week begins today. The Civic Music association's annual festival in Orchestra hall this afternoon, a first downtown appearance of the Illinois Symphony orchestra next Thursday, and a concert by the Chicago Children's Festival orchestra the following evening are three important events that fall within the period.

There were some details on the Civic Music program in this column last Sunday. The Illinois Symphony orchestra, a unit of the Federal Music project, plays in Orchestra hall Thursday night with Frederick Stock conducting, and Rudolph Ganz as piano soloist. The choice of the latter is the Grieg concerto.

The orchestra of 125 men will be heard in the fifth Tschaikowsky symphony, MacDowell's "In a Haunted Forest," and the bacchanale and finale from the "Tannhäuser" overture. Admission prices are nominal.

The Chicago Children's Festival orchestra, consisting of close to 400 children of grammar school age, appears in Orchestra hall Friday evening. This is the organization's fourth annual concert. A new feature this year will be a section composed of guitars, ukuleles and banjos. There is a chorus of 100 voices.

Edwin Harris Bergh, the director, has been interested in the musical education of young children for over twenty years. His assistants are John Wharton, Oliver Colbentson, and Harris V. Bergh.

Included in the program is a Beethoven Andante played in memory of the late Edward C. Moore, for fourteen years music editor of THE TRIBUNE.

The series of Sunday afternoon concerts in the Kenilworth Assembly hall comes to an end today with an interesting program by the Barrere-Salzedo-Britt ensemble, consisting of flute, harp, and cello. The season just closing was planned and carried through by the North Shore Chamber Music association.

A concert of a civic festival nature is scheduled for the auditorium of the West High school, Aurora, this afternoon. The Blackhawk Concert orchestra of that city will have the assistance of the Maud Powell orchestra [composed exclusively of women] and a picked chorus of eighty voices. A feature of the program will be a first performance in this district of a Beethoven trombone quartet. The work draws added interest from the fact that its chorale-like divisions served as requiem at the master's funeral.

The second recital in the Young American Artists' series is due tomorrow evening in Curtiss hall. Joy Genevieve Cole, blind soprano, will make her debut in a program that runs largely to music of the present and the recent past. Her corecitalist, Elwood Kraft, pianist, displays much the same sort of preference, although both artists are planning one group of old time music. Miss Cole is said to have been encouraged by the success of Alec Templeton, who is also sightless.

This paragraph will serve as reminder that Reginald and Gladys Laubin, considered among the foremost exponents of the American Indian dance, are to make their first Chicago appearance in Thorne hall [McKinlock campus of Northwestern university] tomorrow night. The recital is open to the general public.

The Augustana choir of Augustana college, Rock Island, will present its sixth annual concert in Orchestra hall tomorrow evening. A group of sixty-odd singers, all students, is divided into a men's and a women's chorus for portions of the program. These divisions use piano accompaniment, the complete group singing a cappella.

The famous choir has already completed a 3,000 mile tour this spring. The itinerary embraced ten states between the Mississippi river and the east coast.

The Canori club of Chicago, a chorus of 36 young business and professional men, presents its 12th annual concert next Thursday in Kimball hall. The guest soloist is Eunice Steen, soprano.

Max Vinsonhaler, baritone, and Israel Baker, violinist, are among the winners in the recent Society of American Musicians contest. Their recital takes place Tuesday evening in Kimball hall. Daniel Ericourt, French pianist, will be playing at the Studebaker the same night.

Another reminder: "The Dybbuk," treated in some detail on this page last Sunday, will receive its American première in Detroit next Wednesday, and its second performance in Chicago the following night. The Detroit Civic opera, Detroit Symphony orchestra, Art of Musical Russia, and Yakovleva's Ballet Russe support a cast which boasts Rosa Raisa and Frederick Jaegel as principals. The Detroit opera will present "Prince Igor" here on Friday, and "The Dybbuk" again Saturday afternoon and evening, with an alternate cast in the matinée performance. The locale is the Auditorium theater.

Bela Martay, young Hungarian violinist, plays a Bach partita, a Dvorak concerto, and a group of smaller pieces in his Kimball hall recital next Friday night. This is Martay's third appearance in Chicago.

The program to be played in Orchestra hall this coming Saturday evening by the Chicago Business Men's orchestra marks the end of the organization's fifteenth anniversary season. Robert Quick, a violinist in the Chicago Symphony orchestra, is featured as guest artist.

"THE EX-MRS. BRADFORD"

Scissors! Scissors! Who HAS got the scissors? Heavens, we can't let this picture of Jean Arthur get away from us . . . ! Where's Miss Arthur playing? She's right over on the Palace screen in "The Ex-Mrs. Bradford." Her leading man? Wm. Powell. (Put on yo' shoes an' trabbel, feet!)

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD Morning!
Believe it or not, it's May again,
Yesterday I saw a blue jay again;
Purty soon 'twill be time to make hay again,
And this is the day when I say again——

——things that I said—wrote, rather—last month. In other words—it's time for that "Six Bests" résumé.

[What a long tail your cat has, Miss Tinée.] Thanks, yes—hasn't it!

"THE PRISONER OF SHARK ISLAND." Did you like it? Thought it was a grand film, I'm willing to bet—but it probably DID make you gloomy. Said the original review: "This picture tells the tragical story of Dr. Samuel Mudd, the Maryland country doctor who set John Wilkes Booth's broken leg, and, branded as a traitor, was called upon to pay a terrible price for a crime he hadn't committed . . . a directness, straight dealing, and clarity about the piece for which you are grateful. . . . Warner Baxter plays Dr. Mudd in a perfectly convincing, utterly untheatrical fashion . . . a splendid picture. Not a pleasant one—but real. . . ."

Gary Cooper Gives an Excellent Performance.

"THE GREAT ZIEGFELD"—in many ways a notable production. . . . Colorful career that lent brilliance to so many other colorful careers depicted with verity and considerable sparkle. . . . William Powell's intelligent and intuitive presentation of the master showman will not be soon forgotten. . . . For sheer lavishness, attention to detail, honesty of purpose, "The Great Ziegfeld" is to be commended. [But the picture was TOO long.]

"MR. DEEDS GOES TO TOWN."—"Downright enjoyable! . . . comedy drama with suspense and real heart punch. Story has surprising and intriguing turns and leads up to an electrifying finish. . . . Gary Cooper has never done anything better than his portrayal of Deeds. . . . Jean Arthur gives a zipping characterization. . . ."

"THE COUNTRY DOCTOR"—The long heralded production featuring the Dionne quintuplets. . . an action—packed comedy drama—serious at heart, but never permitting its moral to squelch its mirth. . . . It has a lot of good, sound, pointed dialog, and some perfectly grand wisecracks. . . . Jean Hersholt in the title rôle gives an unforgettable characterization. . . ."

Russian Picture Sincere and Arresting Tribute.

"THREE WOMEN"—One of the best pictures the Russians have put out . . . a sincere and arresting tribute to the women of Russia . . . there is much stirring action, honest suspense and emotion . . . as a whole the direction was masterly, and the picture is a vibrant and compelling one.

"RHODES—THE DIAMOND MASTER"—"For a specimen of sheer spellbinding I refer you to Walter Huston's performance as "Rhodes" . . . screen chronicle of Rhodes and his times is a powerful and moving drama that never permits your interest to flag . . . a compelling study in imperialistic technique . . . never loses its human note . . . realistically staged.

And so—and so—we march on to another morning of "Six Bests."

See you tomorrow!

MONTE CARLO WIDOW

Dolores Del Rio does not make many pictures these days, but when she is featured in one her press agents always come across with some good photographs of her. The one you're looking at is her latest, and certainly one of her loveliest. "The Widow from Monte Carlo" is the current movie she graces. (At the State-Lake.)

Comments Apropos Movie Seats and "The Great Ziegfeld."

Dear Miss Tinée: Referring to your criticism of the 15th, of the picture "The Great Ziegfeld." It occurs to me that, possibly, because you go to so many picture shows, you might be more likely to become "fed up" with certain scenes and the other things that make up a picture. So, because I am so enthusiastic about this particular picture, I am taking the liberty to tell you that in the estimation of another man friend, over 60 years old, and I am well over 60, and we probably see the pictures about three times a month, we considered it the most interesting, the most brilliant, and the most artistic from every standpoint, especially from that of stage history, of any show that we have ever attended.

Frankly, we were much surprised to discover it was 11:30 when we were leaving the theater.

When this show comes around to the neighborhood theaters, where the seats are comfortable, I hope to be able to live long enough to take it in a couple more times.

The seats in the Erlanger are so d——d hard [one might as well be sitting on an old circus board seat] that I can readily understand how you must have felt. I attended this show Monday night, and even today the end of my spine has not yet recovered. It just seems a shame that the downtown theaters are unable to raise enough money to give patrons as comfortable seats as can be found in the majority of the picture theaters.

In a three hour show a few minutes' intermission really is necessary for those who must have their smoke, as well as for some of us rather elderly people.

Cordially yours,
CHARLES L. SAFFORD.

Mantle Recalls Triumphs of Alexandra Carlisle

Great Actress Was a Grand Opportunist

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—It is always a little depressing when the older players die following an unfruitful period in the theater. But it also is a satisfaction to recall their days of triumph. At least they had something to remember, and Alexandra Carlisle was not old. Fifty years is little more than middle age these days. But she had been long in the theater and had known success. She left after playing an engagement as guest star in "A Woman of Destiny," which was one of the WPA enterprises. She was found dead in her room at the Hotel Astor one afternoon last week.

Miss Carlisle was ambitious and capable. The theater was never her whole life, though she was fond of it. She was one of the thousands who defied parental wrath to go on the stage. Her English father said she should be a teacher. [Swift was the family name.] Alexandra declared she would be anything else but. Father was firm. So was Alexandra.

As a compromise she put what she had learned about stenography in school to a test, and finally wound up as a typist. She didn't like that, either. So she went in search of a job acting, and landed a $10 a week in a provincial English touring company. When she heard the manager say he wished he had a secretary, Alexandra offered to do that work in addition to her acting for an added $2.50 a week.

She was a grand opportunist. Ten years later she reached London, played Nat Goodwin's leading woman in the rôles Maxine Elliott had deserted. She evidently liked Americans, for she married Joseph Coyne, an American comedian who was a big London favorite. She played Portia to Beerbohm Tree's Shylock, and took few backward steps after that.

"The Country Cousin" Among Her Vivid Successes.

I recall her most vividly, I think, in "The Country Cousin," perhaps because the night she first played it in New York, Col. Theodore Roosevelt was in a stage box and made a speech to the audience. Or perhaps I remember her best in Masefield's "The Tragedy of Nan," the playing of which took a bit of courage when she first did it. She discovered Alfred Lunt, incidentally, and helped bring him to the attention of Booth Tarkington, who wrote "Clarence" for him.

She did not find giving up the stage difficult when she married a second time. He was a Boston doctor, Dr. Albert Pfeiffer. She was away from the theater six years before she dabbled in a Chicago season at the lightly subsidized Goodman theater, and there were nine years between engagements in New York. She came back to play an aristocratic lady in "Criminal at Large." That was her last triumph. Following a few months' work and a battery of extravagant press notices, the American Academy of Arts and Letters voted her the actress of the year with the purest diction.

She had divorced Dr. Pfeiffer and married J. Elliott Jenkins, a Chicago radio inventor, before her last stage experience. I do not know what brought her to the WPA, but I suspect one reason was because she liked politics. The play they asked her to do, "A Woman of Destiny," was the story of a lady Vice President who became President of the United States and averted another world war. One of her proudest moments was when she seconded the nomination of Calvin Coolidge at the Republican convention in 1920. Alexandra Carlisle is dead at fifty, but a fairly exciting and satisfying life stretched back of her.

Robert Henderson writes me, again with bubbling enthusiasm for the cause, of his forthcoming Spring Drama festival at Ann Arbor, Mich. The festival this year will begin May 18 with a production of the English trial play, "Libel," which has been one of our solid Broadway successes this year, and ends June 20 with a production of the American trial play, "Night of January 16," also a success of the Broadway winter. I do not know whether the choice of opening and closing attractions was made deliberately by Mr. Henderson, but it certainly will present an interesting contrast in the conduct of the English and American courtroom drama, the English placidly tense and vital, the American dynamic, vital, and a little hysterical.

In between the courtroom plays there will be productions of "Hamlet," with Ian Keith featured; "Party," with Eddie Garr, a Hollywood mimic, an added attraction; "The Distaff Side," which Dame Sibyl Thorndike played successfully in New York last year; and "Parnell," another dramatic success of this season which is about to be revived on Broadway with Dennis King in the name part. Louis Calhern will play Parnell, I understand, in Ann Arbor.

Mr. Henderson's troupe will include Reginald Pole, an English academician, who will lecture; Kenneth MacKenna, Doris Dalton, Nancy Sheridan, Whitford Kane, Estelle Winwood, Frances Maddux, Eddie Garr, Ian Keith, Blancha Yurka, Effie Shannon, Margalo Gillmore, and George Somnes.

Death Takes Percy Hammond.

In so far as any man is ever ready to die, whatever his statement or belief to that effect, Percy Hammond, dramatic critic of the New York Herald Tribune, was ready. When he succumbed from an attack of pneumonia in an oxygen tent at the Rockefeller Institute hospital his final and lasting sleep came in a way at least as a wish fulfillment.

He had been desperately unhappy since the passing of his wife, Florence Carnahan Hammond, last summer; he had lost interest in the theater, of which he was a professional reviewer; he had been politically stirred to bitterness by the operations of the present administration at Washington, and his hours were made miserable by the ache of a loneliness he could not conquer.

The fact, however, that Percy was ready does not lessen the loss that journalism and dramatic criticism suffer by his passing.

He was an outstanding figure in the newspaper world. His literary achievement was definitely of fine quality and his artistic standards were high. The actor profession respected him for his fearlessness and his frankness, which gave him exceptional power.

As a writer he was the most perfect stylist of his time. Whatever his play judgments happened to be, favorable or unfavorable, whether the play reviewed was important or unimportant, Perce's expression of his opinion was invariably jeweled with vitally expressive phrases and words that sang even when they stung.

He probably was the creator of more penetrating lines that simply cried out for quotation than any other dramatic writer of the last two generations.

It was he who took all the pumped-up glamor out of the early feminine nudist displays by suggesting that, after all, the human knee was a joint and not an entertainment.

He once described the late and deep voiced Tyrone Power as a "well known Shakespearean oboe," and referred to another as "the soothing G string of the human celli." These compliments brought him the thanks of their targets.

Was Play Reviewer on Chicago Post.

A lively performance on the part of a certain actor Perce compared to the activity of a dramatic critic "hunting synonyms for adultery." And speaking of dramatic criticism, that, he submitted as an explanaation intended to soothe a ruffled producer, was "the venom from contented rattlesnakes." An endless number of Hammond lines will go rollicking down the years to come. Knowing that, he would have been pleased.

Perce loved words. In his early day as a play reviewer on the Chicago Post he and Julian Mason, then managing editor, and Frances Hackett, the novelist, their literary editor, had a word discovery game they played for years, each trying to befuddle the other with each new discovery. This was the foundation of the extraordinary Hammond vocabulary.

Perce Hammond was a shy man, handicapped by a burdensome suspicion of inferiority. He had admirers by the thousand, friends only by the dozen, largely because of his own native reticences and a native shrewdness in selecting his friends. Like all true sentimentalists, Perce was wary of sentiment and of all expression of sentiment. He lived an individualist and died a dissenter. May his troubled spirit rest.

Actress Finds Comediennes Unlucky in Love

Mary Boland Says Comic Antics in Films Spoil Real Life Romance.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Take it from Mary Boland, it's a tough season for comediennes when the apple blossoms burst in bloom and the other girls are looking at things for trousseaux and furniture and all that June bride business. For comediennes, according to Mary, don't have much luck at romance.

Where any self-respecting young bit player would feel things were wrong if she didn't get a proposal in the mail at least once a week, Mary says her only offer this last year has been from a sheep rancher in the Argentine.

Miss Boland claims a comedienne is more likely to make a good wife than any other kind of girl because she knows when to laugh, which is a big help in any family. Also, she'll probably be much more interested in cooking and homemaking and in being a good fellow.

The trouble seems to be that the boys don't want a funny girl. They're ready to laught at her and with her, but they don't want to take a chance on being laughed at themselves.

Few Happy Marriages Among Film Comediennes.

Men resent other people's laughing at their wives or sweethearts. They want to do that themselves, privately. There is something about the masculine ego that resents the slight to himself in that situation. Then, too, no man wants the femmé to hog the spotlight.

There must be something in what Miss Boland says, for our personal observation is that there are few comediennes in films who have made happy marriages that have stood the test of time. Louise Fazenda used to worry what her child would think "seeing her mother sliding down the street on a cake of ice" in a neighborhood picture show! Louise has discreetly sidestepped into straight rôles lately, with just comedy touches, as in "I Married a Doctor," and perhaps that's why.

Mabel Normand never found happiness in romance and marriage. Marie Dressler died without the comfort of a husband. Dorothy Lee has been married and divorced repeatedly. Winnie Lightner, formerly popular on the screen, had her marital bark wrecked. Mae West, whether married or not, becomes recorded as another comedienne who failed when it came to getting marital happiness out of life. Fanny Brice seems very happy now in her second marriage to Song Writer Billy Rose, but her earlier matrimonial career with Nicky Arnstein was hectic.

Joan Blondell is heading toward marriage again, this time with Dick Powell, but the first one was a failure. Her co-laugh maker, Glenda Farrell, has a marriage chalked off her list that proves our point again. Zasu Pitts went through an unhappy first marriage to find happiness in a second.

Colleen Moore, perhaps the highest priced screen comic amongst all feminine screen funsters, declared her second marriage a failure not so long ago.

Polly Moran, once famous for her comical antics, finally settled down to marital happiness with a young husband not much more than half her age—"the boy husband" as Polly calls him. But this was after years of loneliness and no attention from serious minded Romeos. Bill Haines, once her constant escort, was only a gag partner, never a heart interest.

Elsie Janis and Dorothy Parker, writing comics, put the reverse twist in our plot by waiting a long time and then marrying younger men. But it's no secret that both gals were heart hungry for a long time, with plenty of admirers and friends but no ardently adoring swains with matrimonial inclinations.

Movie Stars Start Another "Goofy" Club.

Hollywood, famed for forming clubs with goofy names, such as the well remembered but comatose male ribbing society titled "West Side Riding and Asthma club," has a new one. It's called the "Grapefruit Marmalade and Coasting Around Curves No Hands society," and it's a "bicycle club." So far it has twenty members who ride around Griffith park Sunday mornings and eat breakfast at the Breakfast club, or some boulevard café following the ride. Randy Scott, Henry Wilcoxen, Charles Barton, Grace Bradley, Terry Walker, and others are the backers of the organization. Their object seems to be to complicate the trafic problem.

Bill Fields is entertaining his brother Walter and wife from Philadelphia. Walter was right hand man to Tex Rickard, fight promoter, for many years till Rickard died three years ago.

Bess Meredyth, scenarist, has discovered that her friends have a peculiar sense of humor, peculiar in that it seems to flourish only in Hollywood. Since she bought a small ranch residence on the edge of town, she has been given a three-legged chicken, a baby zebra, a cow with a soprano "moo," a dozen guinea pigs, various packages of assorted cockroaches, potato bugs, and ant eggs.

Mme. Hilda Grenier, formerly royal dresser to the dowager Queen Mary of England when the queen was princess of Wales, and later when she was Queen Mary of England, acted as technical director on court etiquet on Katharine Hepburns "Mary and Scotland." Mme. Grenier, in her capacity as royal dresser, was present whenever Queen Mary's maids dressed her for any occasion, and it was her duty to know what jewels and gowns were called for by court etiquet. She served, prior to that, as dresser to Charlotte, duchess of Saxe-Meiningen, eldest sister of the ex-kaiser of Germany.

It's nobody's fault if all the legal aspects in the murder trial of "The Ex-Mrs. Bradford," William Powell's most recent film, are not meticulously correct. Ralph Morgan of Columbia university and Grant Mitchell of Harvard are both graduate lawyers. Morgan has a year's practice in New York to his credit and Mitchell three. Robert Armstrong, also of the cast, had completed three years of law at the University of Washington when he wrote a vaudeville skit, sold it, and went on the stage.

Walter Abel's two sons, Michael and Jonathan, are having their portraits done in pastels by their uncle, William Schevill, noted artist who is now visiting with the family here. Another distinguished member of the family is Ferdinand Schevill of the history department of the University of Chicago.

"Darn clever people, these Chinese," is a gag line of some antiquity. It was recalled by the recent experience of Buddy Coleman, assistant director to Frank Capra on Ronald Colman's new film "Lost Horizon." A mob of Chinese was hired—with them six interpreters. When the mob shots were to be made, Coleman gave his orders to the head man to be given the interpreters via megaphone. The head man talked in perfect English into the megaphone. The interpreters talked in perfect English to the Chinese mob who obeyed orders beautifully. "And to think I got stuck for sixty bucks for interpreters," moaned Buddy Coleman.

SURE TO BE OTHERS

O HO! He's out again. That Mister Robert Montgomery. In a film provocatively titled "Petticoat Fever." (It's at the Roosevelt.) Myrna Loy is his leading lady. But don't you ever believe there won't be others. Because Robert's screen life is always like that!

Little Theater.

The Playwrights' theater, founded in 1922, has turned professional and offers plays at 1120 North Dearborn street. Merton Hodge's "The Wind and the Rain" will be the opening bill, on May 15. Virginia Dalton, abandoning her Circuit theater, will be general director.

French Revue Is Novelty on Palace Stage

AN elaborate revue in the style of the French Casino entertainments is offered by the Palace theater under the title "Folles Comiques." One hundred entertainers appear in its twenty episodes. Among the principals are Lucien La Riviere, Diane Denise, the Leander brothers, Dolores and Candido, Jacques, Jean and Elisa, M. Evans, Guillaume Le Branch and his Apaches, Ferry Corwey, and Les Cerkos.

The Chicago theater's stage program contains Eddie Garr, mimic and late star of "Strike Me Pink" and "Thumbs Up"; Moore and Revel, comedy ballroom dancers; the Three Swifts, English trio, and the Radio City Musical Hall Glee club. The glee club's engagement is its first away from its home theater, where it has been a feature for over two years.

The State-Lake theater offers a stage revue entitled "The Second Big Show." The bill features Marty May and Odette Myrtil, who were in the stage production of "Roberta," and Paul Ash. Marty May is assisted by Carol Dee.

The second anniversary of the present stage show policy at the Oriental theater is being celebrated this week with five headliners. They are Bob Hall, extemporaneous rimester; Eddie Peabody, banjoist; Mary Sunde; Stone and Lee; and Kerr and Goff. The chorus of 24 Dorothy Hild dancers appear in three spectacle numbers.

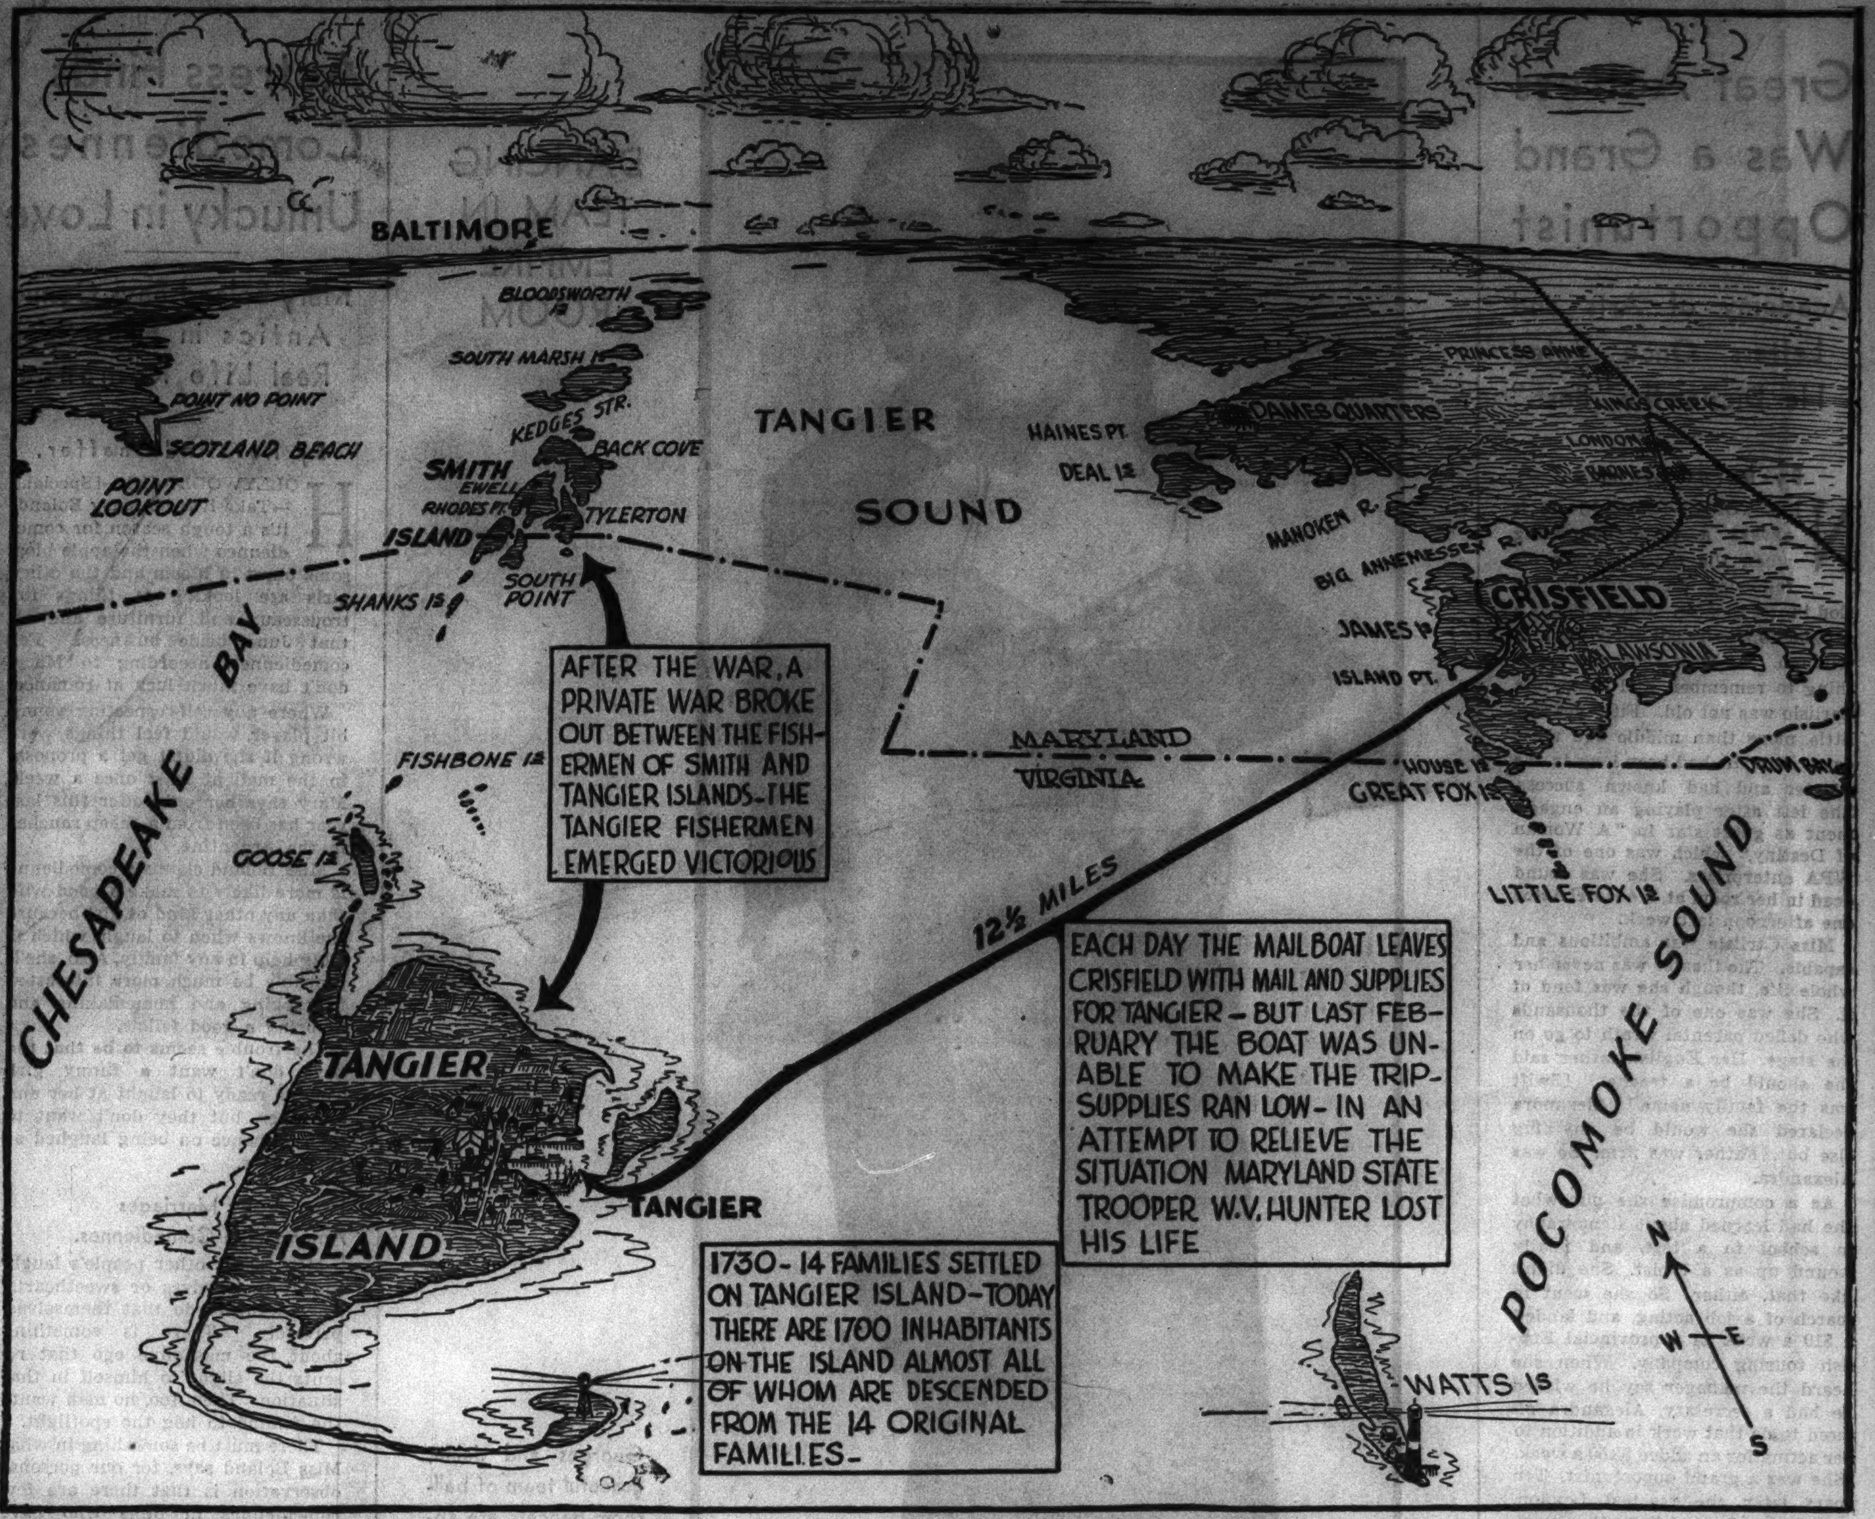
Quaint Tangier Island—Passed Up by Progress

One of the narrow streets in the quaint fishing village on Tangier Island. A number of the streets are only eight feet wide. There are no automobiles on the island. (Acme photo.)



Although lying in Chesapeake bay, within easy distance of the mainland, Tangier Island has remained for years an almost completely cut off community. The daily mail boat and the infrequent visitor are its only links to the outside world.

Curious Chesapeake Bay Community Where 18th Century Customs Prevail

By WILLARD EDWARDS

Washington, D. C.

CRUISING up the broad expanse of Chesapeake bay some 328 years ago, one Capt. John Smith, a restless, roving spirit happily unaware that legend was to ignore most of his exploratory feats and accord him his greatest fame as the love interest in an Indian maiden's career, cast a bright and curious eye upon a low-lying strip of sand well out of sight of either shore.

Although the Pocahontas episode has been scoffed at by modern historians, this Captain Smith was undoubtedly a romantic fellow. He apparently saw in that desolate bit of sand a reminder of his exploits in the eastern world, because he solemnly dubbed it Tangier Island and sailed on his way. So far as is known the African Tangier long remained unaware of this honor, and perhaps still is.

The tiny island had nothing but its fanciful name to distinguish it during the next century and a quarter. Fishermen grew acquainted with its outlines because it was in the center of one of the best crab and oyster beds in the world.

Not until 1730 did a group of canny Cornishmen consider the idea of establishing residence on the island. Why waste much time sailing out from the mainland each day when there was firm soil in the middle of the fishing grounds? Thus their reasoning. After due deliberation fourteen families sailed out to the island and decided to call it home.

That was more than 200 years ago. Today there are 1,700 inhabitants on the island, almost all of whom are descended from the original fourteen families. In the two centuries intervening not more than a dozen strangers have been permitted to settle on the island permanently. Intermarriage on such a scale, it may be noted, has produced a sturdy, healthy progeny with an average mentality.

Tangier Island today offers the visitor a glimpse of life as it was lived in the America of the eighteenth century. Primitive customs prevail. The community is completely isolated. There are no telephones, telegraphs, automobiles—not even horses or carts. No movies, no saloons, no modern lighting—all this within 100 miles air distance from the nation's capital and the bustling city of Baltimore!

Once a day a mail boat puts out from Crisfield, Md., the nearest mainland port, and brings the island within touch of the outside world. The boat returns the next day. Through this tenuous thread of communication a manifestation of civilization has permeated old Tangier. The women of the island, inspired by the bright lures of mail order house catalogs, have discarded their picturesque costumes and wear comparatively modern frocks. They cling, however, to the huge sunbonnets which, because of the glare of the sun, are essential to comfort on the treeless island.

Until last fall the island was barred to tourists. Then the Virginia Autumn travelog persuaded the community leaders to allow Tangier to be included on its itinerary schedule. The islanders silently regarded one day last September the first party of sightseers ever allowed to set foot on shore, to exclaim at the narrow streets only eight feet wide, the above-ground cemeteries, the fishing fleet of "cunners" lying in the harbor.

Only in the fall, however, is this foreign invasion to be permitted. The traveler who wishes to get the true flavor of the place would do well to voyage to Tangier at another season. He will be rewarded—although he must endure surly stares at first. If he obeys the rules he finally will be welcomed. The rules are simple but may be somewhat difficult of observance for the outsider.

Before entering upon a further description of life on Tangier Island as it is lived today the reader is invited to a summary of the history of this unusual spot.

After its settlement, and because of the deep religious fervor of its inhabitants, the island became noted as a gathering place for the godly. About the time of the revolution pilgrims from as distant places as New York and South Carolina assembled to attend camp meetings on the beach.

The patron saint of the island was Josiah Thomas, a Methodist evangelist. He was known as the "rowboat preacher." He was holding one of these beach meetings when the British fleet in 1812 sailed up the bay on its way to an attack on Washington and Baltimore. The invaders stopped to press the male inhabitants into service.

With the Rev. Mr. Thomas blistering them with predictions of brimstone and hell fire, the Britons began seizing the boats of the islanders. These latter, rather than permit the British to use the craft in landing operations, scuttled their boats under the very bows of the English frigates lying in the harbor.

Somewhat irate at this churlish behavior, Lord Packenham, the British commander, landed and attended the Rev. Mr. Thomas' meeting, probably intent upon some earnest heckling. Him the Rev. Mr. Thomas addressed in no uncertain terms, predicting that the British attack would fail.

Legend has it that upon his return from his futile attempt to capture Fort McHenry, in Baltimore harbor, Lord Packenham stopped again at the island, congratulated the Rev. Mr. Thomas upon his ability as a prophet, and offered to take him back to England. The minister sternly refused the tempting invitation.

The British invaders are also blamed for the lack of trees on the island. According to tradition they cut down all the trees in order to build a fort, which later was abandoned.

The Tangier Islanders lived placidly for more than a hundred years thereafter without attracting the attention of the outside world. The entrance of the Untied States into the World war in 1917 resulted in the drafting of some forty puzzled inhabitants for a conflict of which they had heard only vaguely. Only four of the forty failed to return.

Then in 1920 there occurred an incident which put Tangier into the public prints and the islanders became aware of a sinister menace to their peace—the newspaper.

One of the rules by which the inhabitants lived then—and still do—is that everyone goes to church on Sunday. There is only one church, Methodist Episcopal. For 200 years the regulation existed that those not attending services should remain indoors and not venture outside under pain of a severe penalty.

That penalty was not specified, because there had never been an infraction of the rule. It remained for Chief Constable C. C. Connorton to determine that the penalty was death.

On a bright spring day in 1920 Roland Parks, 18 years old, son of one of the leading families of the island, decided that he would not go to church. Moreover, he sat on the front porch of his home across from the church, smoked cigarets, and made disturbing noises when the hymn-singing started.

Constable Connorton, appalled at the criminal behavior of the youth, reprimanded him and received derisive answers. The constable thereupon drew his gun and shot young Parks dead.

Now, this episode was strictly a family affair in the opinion of the islanders. The constable had only done his duty, according to general opinion (not shared by the Parks family). But news of the incident leaked out to the mainland, and soon a strange assortment of humans who called themselves newspaper men descended upon the island.

The stories sent out by these invaders carried accounts of some of the old-time customs prevalent on Tangier. The mail boat brought back some of the newspapers carrying these dispatches. Sentiment was such that wisdom prompted the immediate departure of all the correspondents. Constable Connorton had been observed in the act of oiling up his trusty revolver.

No inquest was held into the death of young Parks. No investigation was demanded by his family. But in 1925, a long five years after (the islanders are a patient lot), the constable was enjoying a meal of steamed clams beside an open window. A bullet through the window ended his career. No inquest, no inquiry followed this epilog to the Parks killing.

One more story rounds out this illustration of Tangier character. In 1926 a war broke out between the fishermen of the island and Smith's Island, some miles distant, concerning the boundaries of the fishing grounds. Some firing of rifles between the two groups was indulged in on the waters of the bay, and, according to reliable report, the Tangier Islanders ordered a small cannon, capable of firing one-pound shells, from a munitions factory. Reports of this serious view of the affair filtered into the enemy camp and the war was over. Tangier fishermen have had it all their own way since then.

Lest these stories give the impression that the islanders are a warlike race, let it be noted that this correspondent, after some hours among them, found them to be a simple, homely folk, cordial after their first suspicions of a stranger had been removed. They are bellicose only in the defense of the rights they believe to be theirs and in the maintenance of the order they have set up for the peaceful conduct of the community.

There are now a mayor and council on the island, due to the influence of one Harry L. Hopkins, celebrated as the chief spender of the present national administration. Without a regular city administration, Mr. Hopkins ruled, the island could not legally benefit from a share in the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars by the Works Progress administration.

Even Tangier had heard that a wonderful new order had come to the United States and that any community could obtain its split of the gigantic fund by registering a request through the duly constituted authorities. Quickly Tangier selected a mayor and a council. A new word, "boondoggling," was added to the quaint dialect of the residents.

But the minister of the church remains the true ruler of the island. The Rev. Harry N. Bailey, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, is a little irritated at the stories about the eccentricities of his flock. Said Mr. Bailey to this interviewer:

"That Parks shooting was accidental. The circumstances surrounding it were exaggerated. But as a result of the publicity given to that affair there have arisen distorted opinions of our community."

According to Mr. Bailey's version of the shooting, the youth Parks had gathered on the porch opposite the church a group of hoodlums who had created a disturbance which annoyed the worshipers inside. Constable Connorton, in the act of waving his revolver to quell these ruffians, had accidentally discharged the weapon and slain Parks.

"There also has been some talk about our services being on the hysterical order," said Mr. Bailey with some indignation. "We conduct a dignified and conservative worship. We have a congregation of 800."

As further proof of his flock's conservatism Mr. Bailey noted that Tangier contains one of the largest chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution in Virginia (the island is in Virginia waters, although only twelve miles from the Maryland shore), and that "there are a great number of Masons, American Mechanics, and Red Men" among the inhabitants.

The antagonism against outsiders, especially newspaper men, was created by the "unfair" stories carried about the Parks shooting, Mr. Bailey said.

"Cameramen, of course, are barred from taking pictures without a permit," he remarked. "They seem to want to make photographs only of the caskets of the dead above ground. That is not unusual in this district. In low-lying ground, where the water may seep in, it is only logical not to bury the dead."

Despite Mr. Bailey's assertion, the sight of a row of white stone caskets set on stilts above the earth probably will continue to stir the curiosity of strangers. The fact that these visible burying grounds are in the front yards of homes will possibly not detract from the interest they attract.

The visitor peers at the gravestones over white picket fences which surround every yard. The names on the markers are, of course, mostly those of the fourteen families who settled on the island 200 years ago. Families named Parks, Crockett, Pruitt, Shores, and Thomas make up the majority of the inhabitants.

The streets, as has been said, are about eight feet wide. They are unpaved, and on the particular spring day when this correspondent was present the pedestrians picked their way between wide and deep puddles of muddy water. The New Deal is bringing paving to the island, according to report.

One evidence of modern civilization was observed, a jail, a one-cell affair which it was learned was built by the new constable who replaced the slain Connorton. It has yet to house a culprit after ten years.

One probable reason for the peace on the island is the hatred of the inhabitants for alcohol in any form. A species of pink "pop" is their favorite vice. It is whispered that some of the islanders relax occasionally on a week-end visit to Chrisfield, but never has one of these miscreants been known to defy tradition and take back a nip for the next morning's hang-over. Lynching no doubt would be the fate of any backslider found with intoxicants in his possession.

Life seems to be very simple and pleasant for the islanders. Their homes are small but cozy, kept neatly inside and out. There is no poverty. The wealth of the oyster and crab beds all around the island supplies the inhabitants with their few needs. They seem satisfied with their isolation.

Once in a decade this isolation which they prize is a source of danger to those on Tangier Island. Early last February a great ice pack piled up in Chesapeake bay and cut off the settlement from the mainland for two weeks. The mail boat was unable to penetrate the ice jam, and supplies ran low. Maryland State Trooper W. V. Hunter perished when an expedition sought to make its way across the ice with provisions.

A blimp from Washington and a plane finally flew over the island, despite snow and sleet, and dropped packages of food. The incident caused a great stir, and many were the stories of "starving inhabitants." Some of the excitement died down when the islanders met members of a "rescue crew," thawed them out, and then served them a roast duck dinner. It was Tangier's way of pointing out quietly that it was able to take care of itself, although proper gratitude was expressed for the interest taken by the outside world in the icebound community.

Another week of its prized isolation, however, would have caused real suffering to the islanders, according to the Rev. Mr. Bailey.

"We ought to have telephone facilities and an airport," the minister declared.

Whether his flock would agree with him in that belief remains a question yet to be answered.

Favorite Poems

"LOCH LOMOND" is one of the many songs which came into being during the activities of the Jacobites in Scotland, England, and on the continent. It is presumed to be the song of an exile returning to his native Scotland, but who this man may have been is unknown. "Loch Lomond" has been familiar to many generations throughout the English-speaking world.

LOCH LOMOND

By yon bonnie banks and yon bonnie braes,
Where the sun shines bright on Loch Lomond;
O, we two ha'e passed sae mony blithesome days
On the bonnie, bonnie banks of Loch Lomond.

O! ye'll take the high road and I'll take the low road,
And I'll be in Scotland afore ye;
But sad is my heart until we meet again
On the bonnie, bonnie banks of Loch Lomond.

I mind where we parted in yon shady glen
On the steep, steep side of Ben Lomond;
Where in purple hue the highland hills we view
And the morn shines out from the gloaming.

O! ye'll take the high road and I'll take the low road,
And I'll be in Scotland afore ye;
But sad is my heart until we meet again
On the bonnie, bonnie banks of Loch Lomond.

The wee birdies sing and the wild flowers spring,
And in sunshine the waters are sleeping,
But the broken heart it seeks no second spring,
And the world knows not how we're greeting.

O! ye'll take the high road and I'll take the low road,
And I'll be in Scotland afore ye;
But O, my true love I'll never meet again
On the bonnie, bonnie banks of Loch Lomond.

The Maginot Line - France's Frontier of Steel

France's first line of defense—the Maginot system. Above is a revealing sketch of a part of France's elaborate system of fortifications. Underground defenses like this stretch 125 miles along the Franco-German border.

Vast New System of Forts Faces Germany

By FRANK CIPRIANI

EARLY in March when Chancellor Adolf Hitler sent German troops into the demilitarized Rhineland, startling the world and allegedly violating a treaty, France responded with this crisp announcement: "The Maginot line has been manned with speed and efficiency."

The Maginot line!

It is France's Great Wall. It is France's greatest check against invasion. It is a vast, elaborate system of underground fortifications that, spitting lead and steel, will, in French opinion, hurl back any invader. By that they mean a German invader.

To get a graphic picture of the Maginot line, it might be well to look back ten years into a meeting of France's Supreme Council of National Defense. A huge man rises to speak. He is fully 6 feet 2 inches tall. His name is Andre Maginot. He is the new war minister. He walks with an effort. During the war he was a sergeant. He was wounded in battle and crippled. He knows something about war. He hates it. He hopes France will be in no more wars. But he knows there will be more wars, and he knows that if France gets into any more wars the enemy will be German.

In a matter of fact manner he mentions that "the next time" the Germans attack, they will come swiftly in planes, motor cars, tanks, and trains; they will try to come through the vulnerable sector—the middle sector—between the Belgian frontier and the Rhine; they will head for the Briey iron basin and Metz. Maginot marks the line on a map, and says: "We must build a wall along here that the devil himself can't break through."

That was all. But an idea had been born, or perhaps one should say re-born. Maginot's idea was to construct an unbreakable system of steel and concrete subterranean fortifications along the danger zone that could withstand the mightiest military shock. In observing that the idea was re-born, it should be explained that French militarists have always inclined to fortifications as defense. This is a legacy from Vauban, master of the art, who lived during the reign of Louis XIV. From Vauban the French were inspired to build the forts of Douaumont and Vaux which, for 300 days during the war, withstood German assaults at Verdun and cost 700,000 German lives.

The defense council was impressed with Maginot's idea. Plans for new, modern fortifications were drawn.

The French treasury was opened wide. From 1929 to 1935 the French government spent more than $250,000,000 on this one line of defense.

The Maginot line consists of two great labyrinthian chains of fortresses measuring 125 miles. The great Hackenburg chain stretches eighty miles from Montmedy in the Meuse department to a point near Boulay in the Moselle department. An arm of this chain near Longwy and Longuyon, east of Montmedy, and Verdun. Probably the most vital sector is that from Longwy to the Rhine for here, along the valleys of the Moselle, the Saar and the Lauter, are the historic lines of past invasions. At Longwy the chain joins the Belgian system of defense which extends to the Dutch border.

Complete details of the Maginot fortifications and their number are known only to the French and even among them probably limited to the remains to be completed, and work on it is being rushed night and day. The second chain stretches 45 miles between Bitche and Lauterburg, on the Rhine. Both press the very border, and curve toward it. Between these chains are the woods, hills and lakes of the Saint Avold region, which military strategists believe can be defended easily. The comprehensive scheme of fortifications extends as far south as Belfort.

The Hackenburg ensemble is the more important, protecting as it does the Briey basin coal mines and steel mills and the railheads of Metz high command. But from photographs, sketches, and other descriptions the outside world has been able to draw a fairly plausible picture of the system.

Probably, if one could see the Maginot system in one optical sweep, he would observe hundreds of low lying domes, or turrets. They would appear to be scattered crazily. Close inspection would show that they possessed a dread symmetry in paralleling the Franco-German border. In spots they would seem to be—as they are—only inches from the border. And they all face east.

These turrets are blockhouses. They are 12 to 15 feet in thickness, and made of steel and concrete. They mount heavy guns. Slightly below them on the slopes are 20 or 30 smaller turrets, these also mounting powerful guns. Below these slope-turrets are many small turrets carrying field guns and heavy machine guns. Still lower are scores of machine gun nests.

Slightly above the main blockhouses with their heavy guns are triangular groups, the triangles proper being trenches 12 feet wide and 15 feet deep. Three rows of barbed wire encircle these triangles. The bases of the triangles face the enemy.

The tactical and theoretical aim of these triangles is nothing less than mass slaughter. Each triangle accommodates 100 men who operate five 75's, five 105's, many machine guns, pistol machine guns, mine throwers, and bomb lances. Here is the slaughter part. Some of the men fire directly at the enemy. Some cross their lines of fire obliquely from the two upper rear sides of the triangle. With all the triangles firing simultaneously, and following the cross fire pattern, the effect is as a continuous diamond, unescapable and deadly.

So much for the surface defenses. Below the fortresses are veritable cities, some connected by miniature railroads, some having elevators. Most depend upon the natural earth as a protective roof, but even this natural defense is occasionally strengthened by steel and concrete. The labyrinthian motif is steel and electricity. There are chambers and corridors, each with a definite purpose. One stores ammunition, another food, another general equipment, and so on. Living quarters are necessarily compact and restrictive, but clean and modern nevertheless. Electric fans circulate air. Here and there, at vital spots, are gas-proof curtains—in case gas bombs should break through.

Each main fort has a garrison. Within quick distances are special regiments of "the fortified region type," some made up of the men of the neighboring villages.

Of course the Maginot line is not France's sole protection against invasion. It is simply the greatest. In addition are the great fortresses of Thionville, Metz, Verdun, and Toul. Between the Rhine and Luxemburg are innumerable forts. There are fortresses, too, along the Alpine frontier, but here nature affords the greatest protection, and only Nice is heavily fortified.

English military men acclaim the Maginot line of defense, but they say that since no defense system is completely invulnerable, the Maginot system therefore is not invulnerable. However, only an invader willing to pay the price in human life can break through, they say. But the French say: "Let them come!"

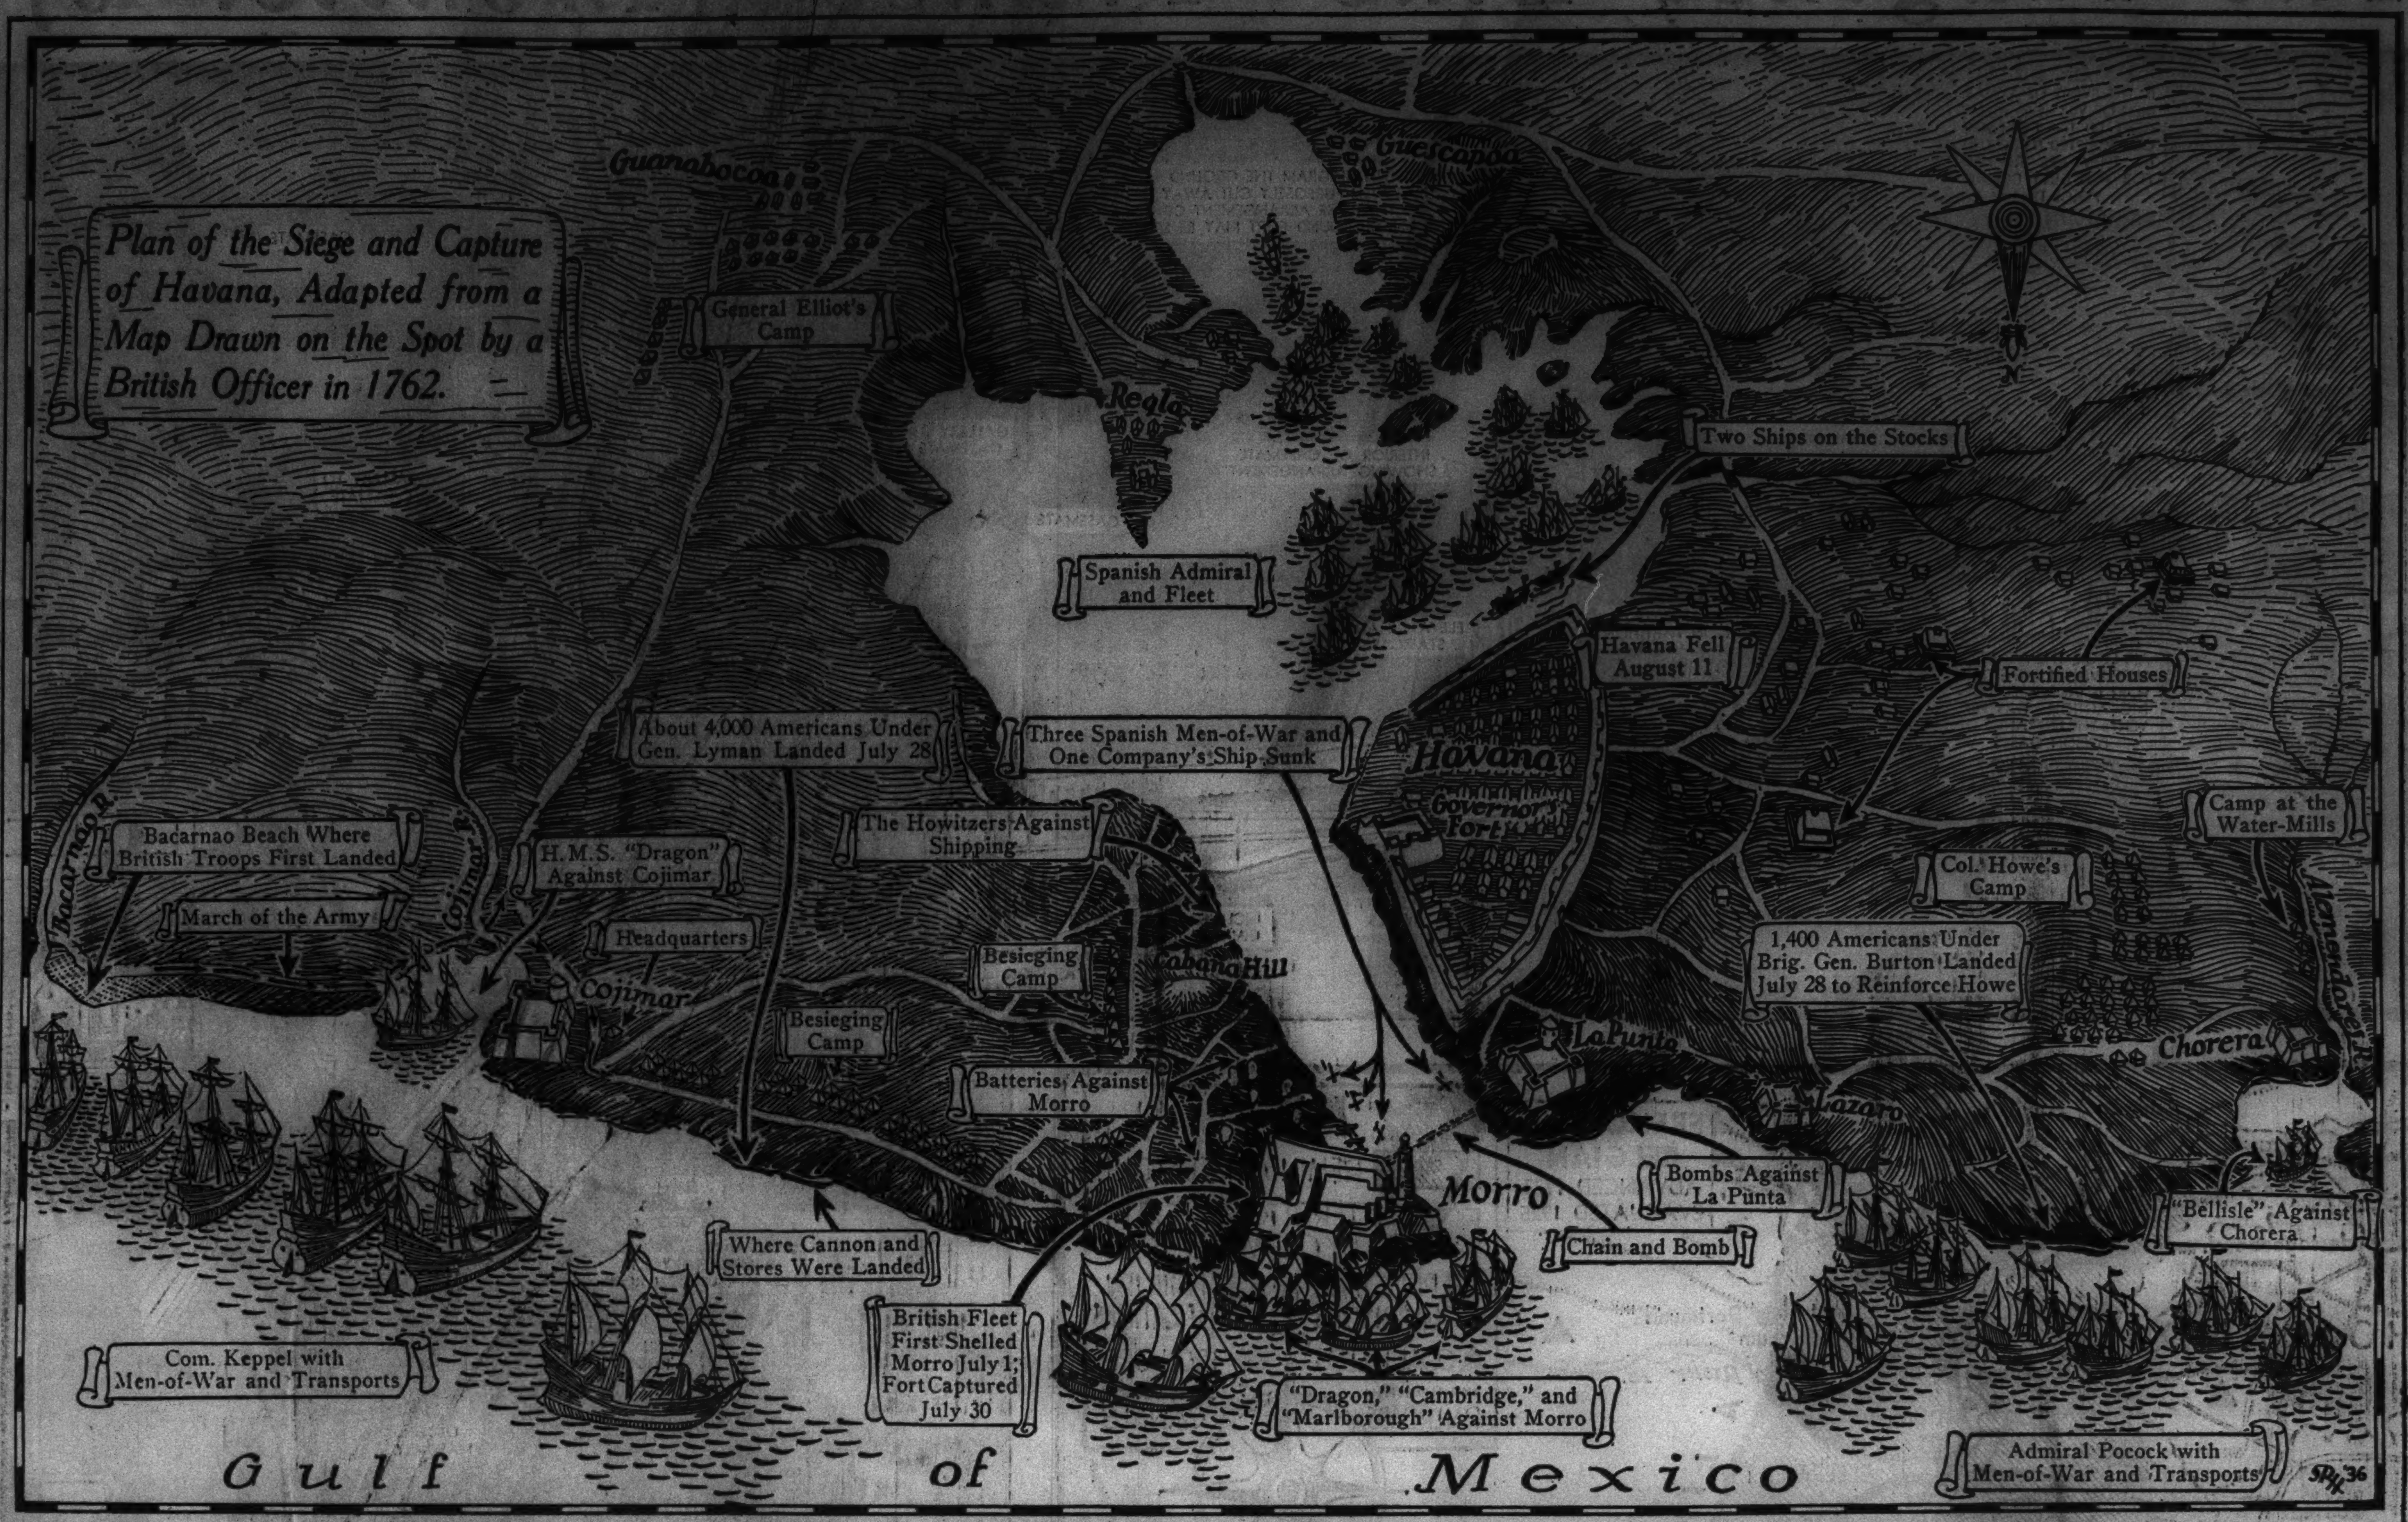
Victory Won for British by Yankees



Making America

This account of American heroism at the siege and capture of Havana, Cuba, nearly 174 years ago is the first of a series of historical sketches that will appear from time to time in the Graphic Section. Effort will be made in the main to write of events and exploits little touched upon by histories of the popular type. The next article of the series will appear at an early date.

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

IT IS midday. Beneath a scorching tropic sun the city of Havana, on the other side of the mouth of the harbor, lies wrapped in its customary siesta.

In El Morro, the grim and battered fortress just east of the harbor entrance, the Spanish garrison is at its belated breakfast. Weary from the siege, wracked with ill health, and many of them wounded, the soldiers and sailors of the garrison are unaware of the swift approach of the climax to their bloody conflict with the British. Their commander, Don Luis Vicénte de Velasco, in charge of the defenses of Morro and the barricades thereabout, has apprised the governor in Havana, Don Juan de Prado, of the British demand for surrender of the fortress. No orders have arrived from the governor. Officers and men of the garrison are merely marking time, taking advantage of a lull in the fighting. The noonday sun and the oppressive heat do not encourage active hostilities.

Suddenly the earth rocks with a tremendous blast.

Other explosions follow. The British are touching off their mines. The air is full of dust and rock fragments. The force of the detonations of barrels of black powder opens wide a breach in the fortress wall. Through it pour the enemy, a driving, compact body of shouting men led by Lieut. Charles Forbes, an officer of the Royals, a crack British regiment.

Muskets and pistols flash. Sword meets cutlass. There are oaths and cries of dying men. The heavy atmosphere reeks with the odor of burnt powder.

The rest of the assaulting army of 650 Britishers and Americans swarms over and through the barricades into the defenses. Velasco's men are dying fast on every hand. Many of those who survive the first onslaught of the enemy fade away, slip out of the exits of the fortress, and run for their lives. About the base of the flagstaf on the main tower are left only the Spanish commander with fewer than 200 of his officers and men. Velasco falls mortally wounded. Others battle to the end. El Morro is taken.

So came about the British capture of the principal defense of Havana on July 30, 1762. The attacking force was able to execute this bold stroke, take a strongly fortified pile of masonry that had held it back since early in June, because of reinforcements from America. More than 5,000 soldiers from Massachusetts, Connecticut, and New York had arrived on the scene only two days previous to the assault on Morro.

It was these fearless fighters from the colonies, many of them veterans of the French and Indian wars, who carried the colors of Britain to victory on the alien soil of Cuba. The British were virtually beaten up to the moment of the appearance of the Yankees. Out of a total force of 15,500 soldiers and sailors more than 8,000 had been laid low by Spanish bullets and fever. But for the arrival of the Americans the siege of Havana probably would have been lifted. The taking of the principal Spanish fortress paved the way for the surrender of the city itself. Havana capitulated on Aug. 11, bringing to an end a heroic episode in history in which stand out prominently the valiant deeds of those few thousand Americans who chose to follow the fortunes of war overseas and the bravery of Don Velasco and his handful of men who preferred to die fighting.

The British expedition against Havana, said to have been planned as a means of recouping the fortunes of the noble Keppel family and officered in high rank by three brothers of that family, in the end turned out to be a glorious page in the military history of America. The British got the loot, and eventually the Americans begrudgingly were given some of the credit for saving British prestige. Curiously, though, even to this day British histories make scant mention of the valorous part played by the Yankees in taking Havana.

Britain's desire for the possession of Havana was one of fifty years' standing. With the French in Quebec and the Spaniards in Havana, the British colonies in North America were between two threats. The British captured Quebec in 1759 in a successful war against the French and the city officially was ceded to them in 1763. When Spain invaded Portugal, an ally of Britain, came cause for going to war with the dons in January, 1762.

That the British chose to conduct their siege against the chief city of Cuba in the hottest and most unhealthy months of the year is nothing to the credit of their military leaders. One hundred thirty-six years later United States troops, many in thick woolen uniforms, campaigned in Cuba through the enervating months of summer. But that case was different. The Americans had no choice. They could not pick the season. They had to smash the Spanish threat as quickly as possible.

Doubtless the British would have preferred to attack Havana in cooler weather. But one delay after another set them back in their plans, so that the expedition against the Spaniards did not sail from Portsmouth until March 5, 1762.

Commander of the fleet that put to sea that day was Admiral Sir George Pocock. His ships were joined on the way to Havana by a portion of the squadron which had conquered Martinique earlier in the year. Pocock, after this addition, had 19 ships of the line, 18 frigates and other smaller vessels of war, and approximately 150 transports. Most formidable of the war craft was the admiral's flagship, the Namur, carrying 90 guns. Aboard the ships were about 5,500 seamen and 10,000 soldiers, the last named under the command of Lieut. Gen. George Keppel, third earl of Albemarle. Pocock's second in command was Commodore Viscount Augustus Keppel, a younger brother of the earl of Albemarle. Sir William Keppel, a still younger brother of the commanding general, was third in command of the land forces. Also among the officers of the expedition was Col. William Howe, hero of Wolfe's expedition to Quebec, and destined to play an important rôle in the American war of independence as chief in command of the British forces.

Havana, the goal of Admiral Pocock's fleet as it sailed through fair weather and foul during those spring months of 1762, was defended in the main by the two fortresses, El Morro, on the east, and La Punta, on the west side of the harbor entrance. Other lesser works were scattered about in the city and its environs. The effective force for defending Havana consisted of about 4,000 regular troops, 2,000 sailors from the fleet in the harbor, and 1,400 militia. Once the siege got under way, Cuban planters, loyal to the Spanish cause, spirited slaves into the city to help with the fighting and the repairing of defenses. Anchored in the harbor were twelve Spanish men of war, and two other craft were in stocks alongshore.

On the morning of June 6 there was brought to Havana the knowledge that the British expedition lay but twelve miles east of the harbor mouth. Up to that time the Spaniards in Cuba were unaware that Britain had declared war on Spain. It seems that a vessel dispatched to Cuba to notify authorities there of the declaration of war had been captured en route by the British. This, however, was no excuse for the deplorable condition of the defenses of Havana at the time the siege was started. The Spaniards there certainly knew that the danger from England was ripening rapidly and should have been better prepared for the attack when it finally materialized.

As Admiral Pocock brought a part of his fleet up to blockade the port of Havana, Commodore Keppel directed the remainder of the war craft while they covered the landing of the troops on Bacarnao beach, seven miles east of Morro. The landing was effected by 3 o'clock in the afternoon of June 6 without the loss of a man. A covering force under some protection of the war vessels captured the fort at the mouth of the Cojimar river and drove the inexperienced Spanish troops opposing it through the Cojimar gap. By the following day this British force, under the command of Gen. George Augustus Elliot, had captured Guanabocoa and gone into permanent camp there. It was outposts from this camp that covered the left flank of the main body of the British besieging force both when it moved against Morro and after the siege had begun.

There was considerable excitement in Havana as the British men of war sailed back and forth before the harbor mouth and the army of the enemy approached the city. A neutral spectator might have observed great confusion everywhere as the Spaniards hurriedly rushed sailors from the fleet in the harbor to help man the defenses of Morro and as heavy guns from the anchored ships were transported by scows to be mounted in the main fortress, in La Punta, and along the city walls. There surely was a great deal of energy wasted by the impulsive Spaniards and a large amount of water splashing when they stretched a boom across the harbor entrance and sank three war vessels and a merchant ship in the channel in order to block out the enemy ships. This disarming of their fleet left the Spaniards with land defenses only. Don Velasco, commander of the 70-gun Reina, was placed in command of El Morro.

Southeast of Morro and across the harbor entrance and northeast of the city stands Cabaña hill. Today it is crowned with an imposing fortress, but in 1762 it was a bare and rocky eminence. Although it overlooked Havana, for 200 years the Spaniards had delayed fortifying it. They talked about it a great deal but never got around to the task before the British swooped down on them. In an eleventh-hour effort to cover up their negligence they rushed some sailors and slaves to the top of the hill to erect temporary defenses there. But on June 12 they abandoned the hastily constructed fortification on Cabaña and left 300 men to the mercy of the enemy. Col. Guy Carleton with his regiment of grenadiers planted a strong redoubt on top of this elevation, making the British for the time being masters of the situation. An attempt by 700 Spaniards to retake Cabaña resulted in 200 of the attackers being killed, wounded, or captured. The British loss was only ten killed or wounded.

The siege of Havana was well under way. As yet, however, the British had not come to realize that their most deadly enemy was not the Spaniard but the climate. Suffocating heat and deadly fever soon began to battle on the side of the city's defenders.

Albemarle had two courses open to him. He could concentrate his attack upon Havana itself, or hammer the fortress of Morro into submission before turning his combined forces against the walled city. He elected to take the fortress first.

In order to divert the enemy with a feint at the city from the northwest, he detached from his main body of troops 300 light infantry and two battalions of grenadiers, landing them at Chorera, at some distance west of the harbor mouth. Colonel Howe was placed at the head of these troops, who went into camp about two miles from the city walls—a camp that before long was to be filled with sick and ailing men. Howe showed a striking lack of initiative throughout the campaign against Havana. He sat idly by day by day as the climate and the fever destroyed the morale of his men.

Slowly progressed the siege of Morro. The task of placing the batteries that were to oppose the fortress was almost a hopeless one for men unaccustomed to heat such as prevails in Cuba in June. The plateau east and southeast of Morro was of a rocky nature, there being little earth there for building protection for the guns. Cotton bales, brought in by ships from Jamaica, were employed to some extent in the batteries against the fortress and in building a redoubt on Cabaña hill. It was this idea of the British of using bales of cotton to stop cannonballs and musket bullets that Gen. Andrew Jackson so successfully employed at New Orleans a half century later.

British batteries finally in place, Moro came under a prolonged and devastating bombardment. The rather soft stones of its walls were pounded to pieces by the fire of the enemy. But Don Velasco was more than an ordinary Spaniard. He put his men to repairing breaks in the masonry of the fortress. He fought back. By the first of July the British had begun to realize that they were making no headway—and their hospital list was growing fast.

Admiral Pocock came forward with a plan to attack Morro from the sea in order to relieve the pressure against the besiegers on land. With the first breezes of the morning of July 1 there sailed in close to the fortress the Cambridge, 80 guns, commanded by Capt. William Goostrey; the Dragon, 74 guns, commanded by Capt. Augustus Hervey, and the Marlborough, 70 guns, under the command of Capt. Thomas Burnett. The anchoring of this trio of men of war was covered by the Stirling Castle. Until 2 o'clock in the afternoon the three ships worked their guns against Morro. But the advantage was all on the side of the fortress. The war vessels could not elevate their pieces sufficiently to do any great damage, while the guns in the fortress were able to pour a deadly fire into the ships. Crossfire from La Punta completed the repulse of the attack from sea. The three ships finally were towed to safety, the Cambridge and the Dragon badly damaged and 157 men on the three vessels killed or wounded. Among the dead was Captain Goostrey of the Cambridge.

Throughout the naval attack on Morro the British land batteries had continued to rain a destructive fire upon the fortress. On its land sides many of its guns were displaced and its walls were badly broken down. The night after the attack Velasco put his men to repairing the holes in the walls and replacing the dismounted guns. On the following day the fire from the guns of Morro set ablaze the main British battery. Fire therein consumed in a few hours the defenses that in the construction had kept 500 men at work for seventeen days.

Desperate indeed became the outlook of the besieging forces. On every hand they had been repelled. By July 4 the British troops had started to look hopefully toward the sea for the ships that were to bring reinforcements from America. In Elliot's camp, in that of Howe, and in the main army on Cabaña and before Morro sickness was taking heavy toll. Sappers who had been ordered to prepare mines to breach the walls of the fortress were finding a serious obstacle in the ditch protecting it, 70 to 90 feet deep and 40 feet wide. Approaches were made by saps to the north and east sides of Morro, and on the 20th a lodgment was made in a covered way, which soon was in possession of the besiegers. Through mining the ditch about the fortress finally was filled at points advantageous to the British. This progress was made during the absence from Morro of Velasco, who had been wounded on July 16. When he returned to his post shortly afterward he insisted that the Spaniards should attack the enemy in the field in order to lighten the pressure on Morro. Governor Prado was prevailed upon to send an attacking force from the city, and on the morning of July 22 about 1,500 men in three divisions, under the command of Don Juan Lujan, landed near the fortress and attacked the British outposts.

Meeting the onslaught of the first division of the forces from Havana were a group of thirty pickets and later a handful of miners and the Third battalion of the Americans of the King (these were Americans enrolled in the original expedition and should not be confused with reinforcements from America arriving later). The wretched Spaniards, among whom were sailors, militiamen, and slaves, were unequal to the task of facing the British in the open. About 400 were killed, 70 were taken prisoner, and the remainder routed, 150 drowning in attempting to swim back across the harbor channel. The two other divisions of the Spaniards had no more success than the first, the second being repulsed by miners and sappers and the third falling back without making more than a pretense of attacking the British on Cabaña hill. In all the British lost about 90 killed and wounded in the engagement.

Writing of this particular action of the siege of Havana, Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, commanding general of the Second corps area of the United States army, gives his opinion as follows:

"If this attack had been a determined one and made by an equal force of Spanish regulars there would have been good chances for success, which probably would have caused the English general to raise the siege, for his forces were now so reduced by sickness (over 8,000 soldiers and sailors in hospital) that they seemed to be in very much the same melancholy and dejected condition as were the American troops just before the fall of Santiago in 1898."

General McCoy wrote the foregoing words when he still was a captain and was making a detailed study of the military aspects of the affair at Havana in 1762. His writings and notes are employed in the main as the basis of this article.

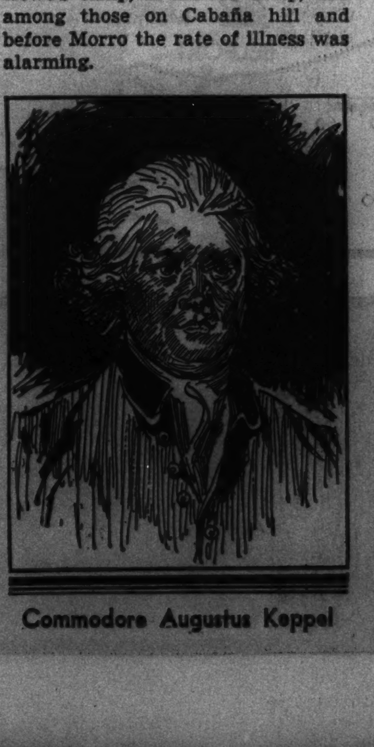
Still capable of defeating the Spaniards in open battle, but apparently lacking the driving power to carry the fortress of Morro by storm, the British at this stage of the siege were close to the verge of exhaustion. There still were plenty of soldiers and sailors in the besieging forces, but relatively few of them were fit for fighting. In Howe's camp, in Elliot's camp, and among those on Cabaña hill and before Morro the rate of illness was alarming.



Commodore Augustus Keppel

Long-wished-for help from America arrived on July 28. Troops from Massachusetts and Connecticut, under Maj. Gen. Phineas Lyman, and others from New York, under Brigadier General Burton, a total of more than 5,000, reached Cuba just in time to save the face of the failing British. Among the officers of the newly arrived American army was Lieut. Col. Israel Putnam, later to become a famous figure of the Revolutionary war.

Burton, with about 1,400 men, landed on the west side of the Havana harbor mouth to reinforce Howe. The remainder of the American contingent went ashore east of the harbor to join the main force attacking Morro.

The Americans were in good spirits. There was little sickness among them. They were ready for action and anxious to come to grips with the Spaniards. The time to strike was at hand. Two days after the landing of the Yankees occurred the victorious assault on Morro described in the introductory paragraphs of this article. It was the spirit of the Americans that enabled the British to carry the fortress by storm.

With Morro in the hands of the invaders, the city itself was doomed. It held out, however, until Aug. 11, when a flag of surrender was raised above its walls. Formal articles of capitulation were signed two days later. Rich was the loot seized in the capture of the city, a majority of historical accounts giving it a value of more than three million pounds sterling, which was a stupendous amount in that day.

The earl of Albemarle and Admiral Pocock each received 122,697 pounds as his share. Commodore Keppel and the third of the Keppel brothers, Sir William, each received about 25,000 pounds. In all the Keppels profited handsomely from the expedition. But in the division of the loot the common soldier received less than 5 pounds and the seaman less than 4 pounds.

In distributing the spoils the British command gave little consideration to the officers of the American force. In other words, these Yankees were only colonials and did not rate on a par with the regular officers of the British army, even though they did save the day at Havana. The Americans consequently felt that they had been misused by the British, that they had been treated shabbily. It was this failure of Great Britain adequately to reward its colonial officers for their part in the taking of Havana (and also for their valiant rôles in the war against the French) that turned many of the Americans against the British in 1775 and 1776.

In the hands of the British, the port of Havana was thrown open to world trade for the first time. But Great Britain kept possession of the Cuban city and surrounding territory only until the spring of 1763, when by terms of a treaty they were returned to Spain. The Spanish government in exchange ceded to Britain the peninsula of Florida and certain other territories east of the Mississippi, relinquished its Newfoundland fishing rights, and granted to the British the privilege of cutting wood in Honduras.

Bounty Mutiny Breaks!—Captain Bligh Is Cast Adrift

Fletcher Christian Seizes Command of Ship

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS INSTALMENTS

Capt. William Bligh sails from England on H. M. S. Bounty, bound for the islands of the south Pacific. The purpose of the voyage is to carry seedlings of the breadfruit tree to the West Indies, where it is expected they will thrive and provide an important element of food for the natives. Beaten back from Cape Horn by storms, Bligh makes for the Cape of Good Hope, and, sailing on into the east, Tahiti is sighted on Oct. 25, 1788. The crew of the Bounty finds life on the island delightful. The native girls are lively and the men friendly. Existence is marred only by the harshness of Captain Bligh. Breadfruit plants are obtained and after twenty-three weeks the home voyage is begun. This great story of the sea has been compiled from authentic records.

CHAPTER IX.

DAWN of the morning of April 28, 1789, found the southern Pacific ocean calm. The moon had set, leaving the sky empty but for a few stars of the first magnitude. The air was cool close to the surface of the sea, which stretched unbroken in transparent greenness from horizon to horizon.

A tiny speck in this immensity was his majesty George III.'s armed vessel the Bounty, ninety feet long in an ocean that stretched ten thousand miles. Aboard the vessel as she winged her way gently westward under full canvas lay her 34-year-old captain, William Bligh, in his narrow bunk, breathing thickly. Most of the other officers also were asleep—but there was one who was wider awake than he had ever been in his life.

That man, Fletcher Christian, the young master's mate, was making his way aft to the captain's cabin, a cutlass in his hand and three armed companions at his heel. A look of ruthless determination flamed from his black eyes. He was about to take the leading rôle in the most famous mutiny that ever occurred in the British navy.

Let Captain Bligh, who was later to publish a journal, tell what happened:

"Tuesday the 28th.—Just before sun-rising, while I was yet asleep, Mr. Christian, with the master-at-arms, gunner's mate, and Thomas Burkitt, seaman, came into my cabin and, seizing me, tied my hands with a cord behind my back, threatening me with instant death if I spoke or made the least noise; I, however, called as loud as I could, in hopes of assistance; but they had already secured the officers who were not of their party by placing centinels at their doors.

"There were three men at my cabin door besides the four within; Christian had only a cutlass in his hand, the others had muskets and bayonets. I was hauled out of bed and forced on deck in my shirt, suffering great pain from the tightness with which they had tied my hands. I demanded the reason of such violence, but received no other answer than abuse for not holding my tongue. The master, the gunner, the surgeon, Mr. Elphinstone; master's mate, and Nelson were kept confined below; and the fore-hatchway was guarded by centinels.

"The boatswain and carpenter, and also the clerk, Mr. Samuel, were allowed to come upon deck, where they saw me standing abaft the mizen-mast with my hands tied behind my back, under a guard, with Christian at their head. The boatswain was ordered to hoist the launch out, with a threat if he did not do it instantly to take care of himself.

"When the boat was out Mr. Hayward and Mr. Hallet, two of the midshipmen, and Mr. Samuel were ordered into it. I demanded what their intention was in giving this order and endeavoured to persuade the people near me not to persist in such acts of violence; but it was to no effect; 'Hold your tongue, sir, or you are dead this instant,' was constantly repeated to me. . . .

"I continued my endeavours to turn the tide of affairs, when Christian changed the cutlass which he had in his hand for a bayonet that was brought to him, and, holding me with a strong gripe by the cord that tied my hands, he with many oaths threatened to kill me immediately if I would not be quiet; the villains round me had their pieces cocked and bayonets fixed. Particular people were called on to go into the boat and were hurried over the side; whence I concluded that with these people I was to be set adrift; I therefore made another effort to bring about a change, but with no other effect than to be threatened with having my brains blown out."

But by some accounts Captain Bligh was not quite so uncompromising as his own account would make him. According to a diary left by Boatswain's Mate James Morrison, who was years later to be pardoned from the charge of mutiny by King George:

"When Mr. Bligh found he must get into the boat, he begged of Mr. Christian to desist, saying, 'I'll pawn my honour, I'll give my bond, Mr. Christian, never to think of this if you'll desist,' and urged him to think of his wife and family; to which Mr. Christian replied, 'No, Captain Bligh, if you had any honour things had not come to this; and if you had any regard for your wife and family you should have thought on them before and not behaved so much like a villain.'

"Lieutenant Bligh again attempted to speak, but was ordered to be silent. The boatswain also tried to pacify Mr. Christian, to whom he replied, 'It is too late; I have been in hell for this fortnight past and am determined to bear it no longer; and you know, Mr. Cole, that I have been used like a dog all the voyage.'"

This speech was in keeping with Christian's character. Though a strong and dominating leader who would brook no insubordination among those under his command, he was as sensitive as Bligh was insensitive. It was afterward revealed that up to the last minute before the mutiny he had been planning to desert the Bounty and make for the island of Tofoa on a small raft he had built. But of this more will be told later.

Captain Bligh's journal continues:

"The boatswain and seamen who were to go in the boat were allowed to collect twine, canvas, lines, sails, cordage, an eight-and-twenty gallon cask of water, and Mr. Samuel got 150 lbs. of bread, with a small quantity of rum and wine, also a quadrant and compass; but he was forbidden on pain of death to touch either map, ephemeris, book of astronomical observations, sextant, time-keeper, or any of my surveys or drawings.

"The mutineers having forced those of the seamen whom they meant to get rid of into the boat, Christian directed a dram to be served to each of his own crew. I then unhappily saw that nothing could be done to effect the recovery of the ship; there was no one to assist me, and every endeavour on my part was answered with threats of death.

"The officers were next called on deck and forced over the side into the boat, while I was kept apart from every one, abaft the mizen-mast; Christian, armed with a bayonet, holding me by the bandage that secured my hands. The guard round me had their pieces cocked; but on my daring the ungrateful wretches to fire they uncocked them.

"Isaac Martin, one of the guard over me, I saw, had an inclination to assist me, and as he fed me with shaddock (my lips being quite parched) we explained our wishes to each other by our looks; but, this being observed, Martin was removed from me. He then attempted to leave the ship, for which purpose he got into the boat; but with many threats they obliged him to return.

"The armourer, Joseph Coleman, and two of the carpenters, M'Intosh and Norman, were also kept contrary to their inclination; and they begged of me, after I was astern in the boat, to remember that they declared they had no hand in the transaction. Michael Byrne, I am told, likewise wanted to leave the ship.

"It is of no moment for me to recount my endeavours to bring back the offenders to a sense of their duty; all I could do was by speaking to them in general; but it was to no purpose, for I was kept securely bound and no one except the guard suffered to come near me.

"To Mr. Samuel I am indebted for securing my journals (without which this book would be based on memory only), and commission, with some material ship papers. Without these I had nothing to certify what I had done, and my honour and character might have been suspected, without my possessing a proper document to have defended them. All this he did with great resolution, though guarded and strictly watched. He attempted to save the time-keeper, and a box with my surveys, drawings, and remarks for fifteen years past, which were numerous; when he was hurried away with 'Damn your eyes, you are well off to get what you have.'

"It appeared to me that Christian was some time in doubt whether he should keep the carpenter or his mates; at length he determined on the latter and the carpenter was ordered into the boat. He was permitted, but not without some opposition, to take his tool chest.

"Much altercation took place among the mutinous crew during the whole business; some swore, 'I'll be damned if he does not find his way home if he gets anything with him' (meaning me); and, when the carpenter's chest was carrying away, 'Damn my eyes, he will have a vessel built in a month.' While others laughed at the helpless situation of the boat, being very deep, and so little room for those who were in her. As for Christian, he seemed as if meditating destruction on himself and everyone else.

"I asked for arms, but they laughed at me and said I was well acquainted with the people among whom I was going and therefore did not want them; four cutlasses, however, were thrown into the boat after we were veered astern."

The Bounty's master was a stout, elderly man named John Fryer, of gentle disposition, whose bronzed face was "at once kindly and resolute." Years later, when it came time to try the mutineers, he made a statement of what happened to him on this direful day.

"When I came on deck," he said, "Mr. Bligh was standing by the mizzenmast, with his hands tied behind him, and Christian holding the cord with one hand and a bayonet in the other. I said, 'Christian, consider what you are about.'

"'Hold your tongue, sir,' he said. 'I have been in hell for weeks past; Captain Bligh has brought all this on himself.'

"I told him that Mr. Bligh and he not agreeing was no reason for taking the ship.

"'Hold your tongue, sir,' he said.

"I said: 'Mr. Christian, you and I have been on friendly terms during the voyage, therefore give me leave to speak. Let Mr. Bligh go down to his cabin and I make no doubt we shall all be friends again.'

"He then repeated: 'Hold your tongue, sir. It is too late.' And threatened me if I said anything more."

Fryer was put into the small boat along with the rest of the officers loyal to Bligh, all except a few for whom there was not enough room in the 23-foot craft, already weighed down so that the gunwales amidships were but eight inches from the water. The last man in was Bligh.

As the captain told it himself:

"The officers and men being in the boat, they only waited for me, of which the master-at-arms informed Christian, who then said, 'Come, Captain Bligh, your officers and men are now in the boat, and you must go with them; if you attempt to make the least resistance you will instantly be put to death'; and without further ceremony, with a tribe of armed ruffians about me, I was forced over the side, where they untied my hands."

The boat is lower'd with all the haste of hate,
With its slight plank between thee and thy fate;
Her only cargo such a scant supply
As promises the death their hands deny;
And just enough of water and of bread
To keep, some days, the dying from the dead;
Some cordage, canvas, sails and lines and twine,
But treasures all to hermits of the brine,
Were added after, to the earnest prayer
Of those who saw no hope save sea and air;
And, last, that trembling vassal of the pole,
The feeling compass, navigation's soul.
. . . .
The launch is crowded with the faithful few
That wait their chief—a melancholy crew;
But some remain'd reluctant on the deck
Of that proud vessel, now a moral wreck—
And view'd their captain's fate with piteous eyes;
While others scoff'd his augur'd miseries,
Sneer'd at the prospect of his pigmy sail,
And the slight bark, so laden and so frail.

—From Byron's "The Island."

"Being in the boat," continued Bligh, "we were veered astern by a rope. A few pieces of pork were thrown to us, and some clothes, also the cutlasses I have already mentioned; and it was then that the armourer and carpenters called out to me to remember that they had no hand in the transaction. After having undergone a great deal of ridicule and been kept some time to make sport for these unfeeling wretches, we were at length cast adrift in the open ocean."

CHAPTER X.

NINETEEN men they were as they sat in the open boat in the middle of the half-legendary Pacific ocean and watched their ship sail away to the north. Their plight was not hopeless, but it was little better than that. The boat was built to hold twelve men. With nineteen, and all the gear and belongings they had been able to collect, it was so overloaded that waves slopped over the side even in this relatively calm sea.

It appeared out of the question to attempt anything but to reach the nearest land as quickly as possible, which was the island of Tofoa, lying about thirty miles to the northeast. This island did not seem too inviting, however, for it was of the same group as Annamooka, where a watering party sent ashore from the Bounty a few days back had met with a hostile reception by the natives. Without firearms, nineteen men in an overloaded open boat would be helpless at the hands of hundreds of natives in their swift canoes and armed with stones and spears and perhaps bows and arrows.

But where else could they go? Tahiti was the nearest island where they could be sure of a friendly reception, and that was some 1,500 miles away, with a trade wind blowing dead against them. The nearest friendly settlement they could think of in the other direction was a Dutch colony on the island of Timor in the East Indies, more than 3,500 miles away, and Captain Bligh was not quite positive of this. There was nothing to do but make for Tofoa.

As there was practically no wind at the time, Captain Bligh's first order—after the men had packed away their belongings and made the boat as shipshape as possible—was to take to the oars and steer for Tofoa. The men, somewhat cheered by their leader's resolute appearance, grasped the oars with a will and, changing places every hour, steadily drew nearer to the land which stood in hazy purple on the horizon.

"While the Bounty remained in sight," Bligh recorded, "she steered to the W.N.W., but I considered this only as a feint, for when we were sent away, 'Huzza for Otaheite!' was frequently heard among the mutineers."

By noon the Bounty had disappeared over the horizon. Captain Bligh put all further thoughts of her out of his mind and considered seriously what was best to be done.

"My first determination," he wrote, "was to seek a supply of breadfruit and water at Tofoa and afterwards to sail for Tongataboo and there risk a solicitation to Poulaho, the king, to equip my boat and grant a supply of water and provisions so as to enable us to reach the East Indies.

"The quantity of provisions I found in the boat was 150 lbs. of bread, 16 pieces of pork (each piece weighing 2 lbs.), 6 quarts of rum, 6 bottles of wine, with 28 gallons of water and 4 empty barrecoes.

"Happily the afternoon kept calm until about 4 o'clock, when we were so far to windward that, with a moderate easterly breeze which sprung up, we were able to sail. It was nevertheless dark when we got to Tofoa, where I expected to land; but the shore proved to be so steep and rocky that I was obliged to give up all thoughts of it and keep the boat under the lee of the island with two oars, for there was no anchorage. Having fixed on this mode of proceeding for the night, I served to every person half a pint of grog and each took to his rest as well as our unhappy situation would allow."

Tofoa is a volcanic island perhaps ten miles long. In its center a mountain topped by a crater rises about two thousand feet. A thin streamer of vapor generally hovers above it, taking on a saffron color in the twilight afterglow. Alternate gullies and ridges furrow the rocky, thinly wooded land as it falls away to the coast, which consists of continuous cliffs varying from fifty to several hundred feet in height.

"In the morning at dawn of day," wrote Bligh, "we set off along shore in search of landing, and about 10 o'clock we discovered a stony cove at the N.W. part of the island, where I dropt the grapnel within twenty yards of the rocks. A great deal of surf ran on the shore, but, as I was unwilling to diminish our stock of provisions, I landed Mr. Samuel and some others, who climbed the cliffs and got into the country to search for supplies. . . . Towards noon Mr. Samuel returned with a few quarts of water, which he had found in holes; but he had met with no spring or any prospect of a sufficient supply in that particular."

Neither had Mr. Samuel seen any inhabitants, though he had found the remains of a fire and some deserted huts. Captain Bligh was anxious to solve this mystery, because he wanted to obtain as much water, coconuts, or other provisions as he could to supplement the meager supply allowed him by the mutineers and which would normally have supported nineteen men only three or four days. If there were only a few natives he meant to make friends and trade with them. If there were many, and they appeared hostile, he meant to leave the island. In either case there was no time to be lost, for the men had to eat and there was no apparent means for replenishing their supplies.

On May 1, their third day at the island, Bligh, still having no answer to the problem, sent out a last party in desperate hopes of finding natives or some source of food before quitting the island. The party at first could find not even water, "but," recorded Bligh, "they met with two men, a woman, and a child; the men came with them to the cove and brought two cocoa-nut shells of water. I immediately made friends with these people and sent them away for bread-fruit, plaintains, and water. Soon after other natives came to us, and by noon I had thirty of them about me, trading with the articles we were in want of; but I could only afford one ounce of pork and a quarter of a bread-fruit to each man for dinner, with half a pint of water, for I was fixed in not using any of the bread or water in the boat."

Buttons and beads and old shirts were the articles handed out to the natives in trade for breadfruit, coconuts, and other fruit. "Towards evening," wrote Bligh, "I had the satisfaction to find our stock of provisions somewhat increased; but the natives did not appear to have much to spare. What they brought was in such small quantities that I had no reason to hope we should be able to procure from them sufficient to stock us for our voyage."

Stormy weather, however, kept the captain from putting to sea, and the following day a new and very formidable danger was added to his troubles. Natives by the score came to the little crescent of beach where the white men were camped, some climbing down the vines that lined the cliffs, some in large canoes, and Bligh wrote, "I observed symptoms of a design against us."

Momentarily the captain regained some hope when two of the chiefs asked after Captain Cook, and one of the friendlier natives was recognized as a man the landing party had seen on Annamooka. But very shortly the water's edge was lined with some 200 natives, thus separating Bligh and most of his men, who were near the cliff's edge, from the boat a few feet off shore.

"As we had no means of improving our situation," wrote Bligh, "I told our people I would wait until sunset, by which time, perhaps, something might happen in our favour; that if we attempted to go at present we must fight our way through, which we could do more advantageously at night; and that in the meantime we would endeavour to get off to the boat what we had bought. The beach was now lined with the natives, and we heard nothing but the knocking of stones together, which they had in each hand. I knew very well this was the sign of an attack. . . .

"I carefully watched the motions of the natives, who still increased in number, and found that, instead of their intention being to leave us, fires were made and places fixed on for their stay during the night. Consultations were also held among them, and everything assured me we should be attacked. . . .

"The sun was near setting when I gave the word, on which every person who was on shore with me boldly took up his proportion of things and carried them to the boat. . . . We walked down the beach, every one in a silent kind of horror." For protection Bligh kept hold of the hand of one of the natives who had been a kind of ambassador and made him walk with the white men as a human shield. The natives were just working themselves up to the necessary pitch of excitement as the whites calmly marched through their ranks, trying to look as if nothing was amiss, and made for the boat.

"I ordered the carpenter not to quit me until the other people were in the boat," wrote Bligh. "Nageete [the native whose hand Bligh had been holding], finding I would not stay, loosed himself from my hold and went off, and we all got into the boat except one man, who while I was getting on board quitted it and ran up the beach to cast the stern fast off, notwithstanding the master and others called to him to return, while they were hauling me out of the water.

"I was no sooner in the boat than the attack began by about 200 men; the unfortunate poor man who had run up the beach was knocked down, and the stones flew like a shower of shot. Many Indians got hold of the stern rope and were near hauling us on shore, and would certainly have done it if I had not had a knife in my pocket, with which I cut the rope. We then hauled off to the grapnel, everyone being more or less hurt. At this time I saw five of the natives about the poor man they had killed, and two of them were beating him about the head with stones in their hands.

"We had no time to reflect before, to my surprise, they filled their canoes with stones and twelve men came off after us to renew the attack, which they did so effectually as nearly to disable all of us. Our grapnel was foul, but Providence here assisted us; the fluke broke, and we got to our oars and pulled to sea. They, however, could paddle round us, so that we were obliged to sustain the attack without being able to return it except with such stones as lodged in the boat, and in this I found we were very inferior to them. We could not close, because our boat was lumbered and heavy, and that they knew very well; I therefore adopted the expedient of throwing overboard some cloaths, which they lost time in picking up; and as it was now almost dark, they gave over the attack and returned towards the shore, leaving us to reflect on our unhappy situation."

CHAPTER XI.

AFTER this sample of the dispositions of the natives of the Friendly Islands (so named more hopefully than accurately by Captain Cook), Bligh and his men were discouraged in their intention to land at other of these islands.

"My mind was employed in considering what was best to be done," wrote Bligh, "when I was solicited by all hands to take them towards home; and when I told them no hopes of relief for them remained but what I might find at New Holland until I came to Timor, a distance of full 1,200 leagues [3,600 miles], where was a Dutch settlement, but in what part of the island I knew not, they all agreed to live on one ounce of bread and a quarter of a pint of water per day.

"Therefore, after examining our stock of provisions and recommending this as a sacred promise forever to their memory, we bore away across a sea where the navigation is but little known, in a small boat twenty-three feet long from stem to stern, deep laden with eighteen men; without a chart, and nothing but my own recollection and general knowledge of the situation of places, assisted by a book of latitudes and longitudes, to guide us. I was happy, however, to see everyone better satisfied with our situation in this particular than myself.

"Our stock of provisions consisted of about 150 lbs. of bread, 28 gallons of water, 20 lbs. of pork, 3 bottles of wine, and 5 quarts of rum. The difference between this and the quantity we had on leaving the ship was principally owing to loss in the bustle and confusion of the attack. A few cocoa-nuts were in the boat, and some bread-fruit, but the latter was trampled to pieces."

All night they sailed, bearing away from Tofoa to the west under a reefed lug foresail. The captain divided his companions into watches and made the boat as shipshape as possible, also offering thanks to God "for our miraculous preservation."

"At daybreak on May 3d," Bligh's journal continues, "the gale increased; the sun rose very fiery and red, a sure indication of a severe gale of wind"—which was the very worst thing for a heavily loaded open boat. "At eight it blew a violent storm, and the sea ran very high, so that between the seas the sail was becalmed, and when on the top of the sea it was too much to have set; but I was obliged to carry to it, for we were now in very imminent danger and distress, the sea curling over the stern of the boat, which obliged us to bail with all our might. A situation more distressing has perhaps seldom been experienced.

"Our bread was in bags and in danger of being spoiled by the wet. To be starved to death was inevitable if this could not be prevented. I therefore began to examine what cloaths there were in the boat and what other things could be spared; and, having determined that only two suits should be kept for each person, the rest was thrown overboard, with some rope and spare sails, which lightened the boat considerably, and we had more room to bail the water out. Fortunately the carpenter had a good chest in the boat, into which I put the bread the first favourable moment."

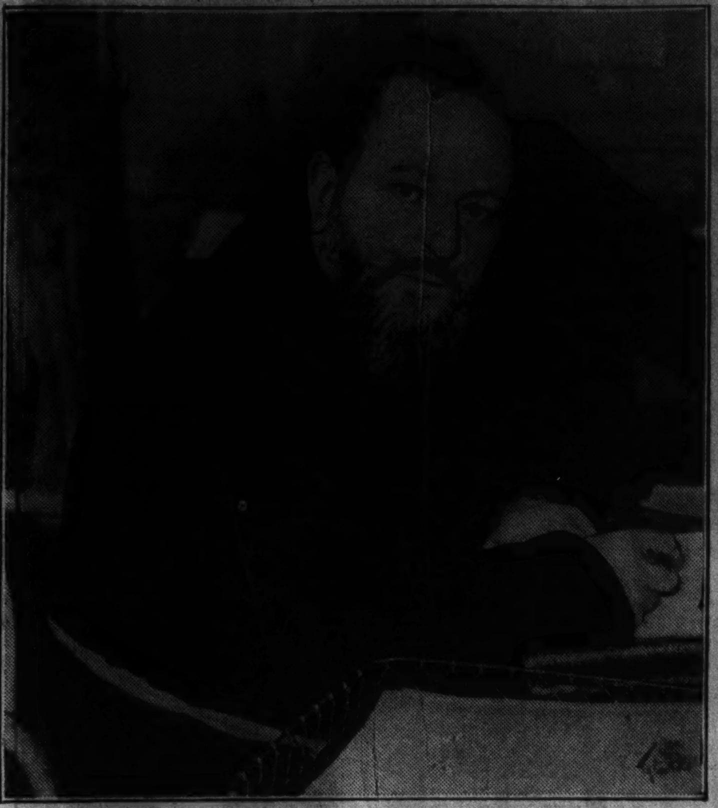
With their most important food supply, the bread, thus made secure against the wet, the men gave their full strength to bailing, which strenuous exercise had to be kept up continuously while the storm lasted. However, the fact that they were sailing directly before the wind was of inestimable value. "We could do nothing more than keep before the sea," wrote Bligh, "in the course of which the boat performed so wonderfully well that I no longer dreaded any danger in that respect. But among the hardships we were to undergo, that of being constantly wet was not the least; the nights were very cold, and at daylight our limbs were so benumbed that we could scarce find the use of them. At this time I served a tea-spoonful of rum to each person, which we all found great benefit from."

On May 4 the Fiji Islands appeared.

The fourth instalment of "The True Story of the Bounty" will appear in next Sunday's Tribune.

Parish of Fishermen's Priest Ocean Wide

Father Yvon Follows Fleet



Father Yvon, bearded and robed in Capuchin tradition, is cure of a far-flung parish. He is shown here at his desk in the offices of the Societie de Oeuvres de Mers in Paris. (Acme photos.)

EIGHT months a year quiet, bearded Father Yvon ministers to the spiritual needs of the most extensive parish in the world, a parish that stretches from the little island of Saint Malo in the English channel to the Grand Banks off Newfoundland. His flock is made up of members of the French fishing fleet.

Wearing the traditional brown robe, sandals, and capuche, or hood, of the Capuchins, he is a familiar and beloved figure among the men whose dangers he shares amidst fogs, mists, and storms of the cold north Atlantic.

Father Yvon makes his rectory aboard the hospital ketch Yves. Often his flock is scattered by storm; sometimes saddened by tragedy. But where the worst is, Father Yvon and the ketch are present.

Map showing the widely separated limits of Father Yvon's parish, the island of Saint Malo on the east and the Grand Banks on the west.

He is not so old—he is only 45—that he does not try to be somewhat of a buddy as well as a spiritual adviser to the men. More than once he has smoked the same cigaret with one of the men.

Most of the members of the French fishing fleet are recruited from Brittany. They gather at St. Malo for the annual adventure off Newfoundland. Saint Malo is a historical place where in the sixth century a Cambrian priest named Malo was given asylum in the retreat of Abbot Aaron. Malo later became bishop and the island was named in his honor. It was often the scene of battles during French and English wars.

A score under twenty is considered good

UNDER the azure crouched an indisputable Indian. His forehead was bedizened with herbage, and he wore a scarlet belt about his abdomen. Though his conduct was exemplary and decorous, he lived in extraordinary squalor.

Though, like a patriot, familiar with the tribal legends his parents had taught him, he knew little beyond legendary lore and was ignorant of our national literature and of the process of telegraphy.

He knew nothing of calligraphy and very little about finance. He was not an aspirant for parliament, but he hoped to exorcise evil spirits from the epoch by the advertisment of an Indian sacrifice. When granted a favor he sought the apotheosis of his patron.

A piquant matron by his side was his housewife, to whom he gave alternately a meager maintenance and peremptory commands, for he considered the position irrefragable that to perfect a woman she must be isolated and made to obey. On this point he considered his arguments irrefutable. He appeared to care little for hymeneal harmony. Her peculiarity was bronchitis, which he hoped to cure by launching a tiny raspberry into the interstices of her larynx. The two made a squalid but interesting tableau.

The dramatis personæ of this scenario were named Elihu (alias Rain-in-the-Face) and Minnehaha, his wife. While she was no pianist, she was a dutiful wife. He was glad to have her as his coadjutor. Yet in her lonely life he would often harass her with some sardonic inquiry or with a virulent threat to put her in gaol. She would then placate him by cooking for him some flaccid sweet potatoes fried in oleomargarine, hoping he would not longer treat her as a pariah.

This antique girl sat by the road, eating Italian almonds and musing over esoteric vagaries. Her temper was as changeable as the hues of a chameleon. An attitude of languor indicated a need of condolence, or of allopathy, and her hair, worn in pyramidal style, made her the cynosure of the tribe. Her tatterdemalion husband would lounge through the livelong day, and at nightfall begin an address to her, with the grimaces and gibberish of a ruffian. Thus:

"Ugh! Wake to your duty and be a docile and notable squaw. Bring my gondola, and let us relieve some granary of its produce."

To which she, with grim raillery, replied: "You blatant blackguard, I won't. Your truculent commands are not obligatory on me. It would exhaust my strength and enervate my constitution; neither have I dropped to such a degree of decadence as to be a communist."

Then he coaxed: "Do, dear, and I'll give you a bouquet and a brooch of diamonds. You shall find it a jocund and not a dolorous task. You are so acclimated that the night air will not hurt you, and you are conversant with my temper when aroused." But she was implacable.

Brandishing a ferrule, he then shouted with vehemence: "What! Shall I not have precedence and homage by my own harthstone? I'll teach you the romance of matrimony, beat you like a spaniel, and give your bones over for sepulture!"

But she sweetly replied: "Look out for your orthoepy, my love, or I'll tear your wristband!"

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS

By BOB BECKER

The Bloodhound Is a Gentle Dog, but It "Gets Its Man"

GENERALLY regarded as a savage dog that thirsts for blood when put on the track of a human, especially a criminal, the bloodhound has a glamorous background. It's a background that never fails to intrigue most of us who like dogs. Just to read the statement that "bloodhounds were used to capture the assailant" conjures up a picture that is bound to grip the average reader.

Actually the bloodhound is a gentle, docile creature of pleasing disposition. Contrary to popular belief, it doesn't attack when it has found its quarry. But its remarkable ability to follow the faintest scent is an attribute that has given it a unique place in dog history.

We enjoyed a visit with the bloodhounds that were exhibited in a recent show. We found them undemonstrative and gentle—just as the breed actually is. We also found it amusing to stand away from the dogs and marvel at their very long ears and their wrinkled faces. Few breeds have a more highly publicized history than the bloodhound. So far as it is known the bloodhound actually was in Europe before the time of the crusades. There is every indication that the breed was known in the Mediterranean countries long before the Christian era.

In America we have had bloodhounds for at least a hundred years. One hardly needs to mention the way the abolitionists used to paint pictures of the runaway slaves being pursued by "savage bloodhounds." There is serious doubt, however, that many true bloodhounds were used to track down runaway slaves.

In order to get a closeup picture of the bloodhound, his temperament, how he is trained, and how he is worked in actual trailing, we asked Martin Hogan, the well known dog authority of Barrington, Ill., to tell us about his experiences with the breed in the British Isles. Mr. Hogan, nationally recognized as a field trial judge, breeder, and trainer of dogs, worked and trained bloodhounds in the British Isles before he came to America. We put a number of questions to Mr. Hogan. Here they are, with his answers:

Q.—It is incorrect, isn't it, to ascribe to the bloodhound an ugly, savage disposition?

A.—Yes. The bloodhound is a gentle dog. It is not aggressive. When it finds its man it may fawn upon him, but it won't attack him. Nearly everybody, however, thinks of the bloodhound as a savage animal. He is rather melancholy and aloof. Not demonstrative. By that I mean that an animal of the breed does not jump around or frisk around to show its affection, as a terrier or spaniel will do.

Q.—Is it fun for the bloodhound to follow the trail of a man?

A.—Yes, the bloodhound enjoys it. The dog has a lot of fun while following a man's track, just as it is fun for a setter to be put down in the field to find a covey of quail or for a spaniel or retriever to find game or retrieve.

Q.—Does the bloodhound give tongue when on the trail?

A.—Not all of them do. A bloodhound is more apt to give tongue when in a pack than when alone on a man's track.

Q.—How many are ordinarily used in actual work in field trials or by police?

A.—Usually one or two. If there are two they are coupled together.

Q.—Do you use a leash on the hounds when they are on a trail?

A.—If the dog is following a very hot scent it goes so fast that a man can't keep up with it unless the bloodhound is restrained. Therefore the handler puts a long leash on it—possibly nine to twelve feet in length. If the scent trail is cold the bloodhound moves slowly, possibly not more than a mile an hour. Naturally it is easy to keep up with it at that pace.

Q.—Is there any breed that surpasses the bloodhound in scenting ability?

A.—It is generally conceded that the breed stands without equal when it comes to scenting ability. Incidentally, it is the only breed the work of which is accepted in a court of law. That's how the bloodhound's trailing ability and keen scent are regarded.

Q.—At what age do you start training a young bloodhound?

A.—Usually around six months of age. It takes time to develop the dog. The first lesson is to get the pup to follow a very hot and attractive scent. For example, you may drag a piece of raw meat over the ground at first and let the pup follow that trail. And when it finishes you reward it. Gradually the trail is lengthened and other things are used to lay scent. For example, an old stocking of a cap may be used for this purpose later on.

Q.—Is the bloodhound efficient at following other trails than those of man?

A.—Yes, indeed. But unfortunately that fact is not well known. For example, on the estate of Lady M. Charteris in the British Isles we trained bloodhounds and used them for man-tracking as a sport and also for tracking wounded deer. Here is a good illustration of their versatility: One day when we were bolting rabbits with the use of ferrets we lost one of the ferrets. It had been gone for several hours. We were given the services of Leo, a very fine bloodhound, and partly for the fun of it we put him to work to see if he could trail the ferret. Given the scent of the animal where it last went into a rabbit burrow, the dog made several casts around and picked up its trail. It led straight for the house, a couple of miles away. Suddenly the bloodhound stopped at another rabbit burrow. After several casts around it indicated that the ferret had gone into that burrow. As we stood there, out popped a scared rabbit from a nearby burrow. We knew that our ferret must have gone hunting for himself and was there. Sure enough, in a few seconds the ferret showed his head above the ground. This is a good illustration of how you can use a bloodhound for trailing creatures other than man.

Q.—Can you tell about an interesting use of bloodhounds to catch a thief or other lawbreaker?

A.—We once used old Leo, our best hound, to catch a chicken thief. A farmer on the estate reported the theft of poultry. The farmer thought the thief arrived around midnight, because he had heard his dog bark at that time. But we didn't get the report of the theft until around 10 or 11 in the morning.

The bloodhound has to have something to go by—something with the scent of the person you want on it. In the chicken house we had just this meager help for the hound—the thief, in killing the chickens quickly, had pulled the head from one of the birds, and it still was there in the henhouse. The scent of the thief's foot on that head was all we had.

Leo circled the poultry house and yard and struck the trail. He carried it two miles to a shallow artificial pond. It ended there. The bloodhound went around the water and found the trail again. He followed it through the woods and brought us to a gypsy van. We called out to the van. A man stepped out of it and stood on the steps of the van. Leo went over and fawned on him.

We sent for the constable to search the van. But we didn't find the dead chickens. Then we thought of the small island in the middle of that shallow pond or lake. We went to this and found a sack with twelve chickens in it, including one with no head. The man confessed stealing the chickens.

Bloodhounds in the United States have performed excellent service for police departments. The stamina and determination of the breed in unraveling a baffling trail or in following a cold trail have won praise from law-enforcement agencies for many years. In fact, some of the famous bloodhounds of this country have been able to "bring 'em back alive" more often and secure more convictions than human detectives.

This distinctive head study of a bloodhound clearly shows the wrinkled face and long ears of the breed. Contrary to popular belief, the bloodhound is a gentle animal.

DOG NOTES

Many persons who never hav[e] owned dogs seem to believe tha[t] some mysterious power is needed i[n] order to keep a dog in good healt[h] and train it to be well-mannere[d]. As a matter of fact, all that is need[-]ed are a few simple instructions an[d] ordinary common sense.

Most of the simple rules for keep[-]ing a dog healthy, as well as infor[-]mation on choosing a dog, groomin[g], bathing, and other items, are in[-]cluded in "The Dog Book," a hand[-]book issued recently by The Tribun[e].

Field and Stream, a sportsmen['s] magazine, comments on "The Do[g] Book" in its current issue. Th[e] review is as follows:

DOGS MADE EASY

Professionals have managed to make golf seem such a mysterious, complicated affair that thousands of persons are tempted to abandon the game almost as soon as they have taken it up. In the same way authors of books on dogs are prone to fall into the error of making the successful rearing of a dog to maturity seem such a tricky matter of complicated diets and diseases that one who is not prepared to devote his entire time to his pet decides that man's best friend is not for him.

To such a person is recommended a new little book published by The Chicago Tribune. It makes this affair of raising a dog from puppyhood so interesting and simple that you approach the undertaking with a new hopefulness and sense of anticipation.

"The Dog Book" is on sale at th[e] Tribune public service offices at South Dearborn street and in th[e] lobby of Tribune Tower. It sells fo[r] 25 cents. [By mail, 30 cents.]

Laboratories Rivals of Nature

By DR. THOMAS M. BECK

IT IS an ancient and honored dictum of economics that the nations of the world will do well to produce only the commodities which, for reasons of natural wealth or industrial efficiency, they can produce most cheaply. Each nation then trades its surplus goods to others in return for the commodities it lacks. Thus the British, who have coal and iron ore but lack sufficient farm land, might well sell their steel and buy wheat in Argentina, which has many rich acres but few mines.

The idea is beautiful in its simplicity, but it requires a degree of financial solvency and a belief in future peace that are lacking in the world of today. As a result there is a tendency throughout the world, and particularly in Europe, either to produce artificially such materials as were formerly imported, or to develop chemical substitutes for them.

It is not for the chemist to decide whether this replacing of natural products with artificial ones is a good thing for the world as a whole. His job is to try to make the materials that his fellow countrymen appear to need, and not to bother with the broader aspects of the problem. In the meantime, however, we can admire the ingenuity of some of his triumphs.

Natural rubber comes from a tree that grows only in tropical countries. Some thirty years ago a dire shortage of the material threatened when the supply of wild rubber became insufficient, and rubber plantations were still an experiment. At the time chemical research was vigorously undertaken in England and Germany in the hope of finding a way to synthesize rubber.

It had long been known that when rubber was strongly heated it broke down into isoprene (see Figure 1). Isoprene is a clear liquid, somewhat like dry cleaners' naphtha. The rubber molecule consists of a large and indefinite number of isoprene molecules hooked up to each other. The chemical term for this linking together of many small molecules to form a larger one is polymerization.

In 1910 the Germans and British discovered almost simultaneously how to polymerize isoprene back into rubber. Obviously this was no practical solution of the problem of synthesizing rubber, since the isoprene itself had to be made from rubber. A method was worked out for making isoprene from turpentine. However, this did not solve the problem, since Europe imports most of its turpentine.

When the war came the Germans gave up the problem in so far as it concerned isoprene and searched for some substance chemically related to isoprene which could be polymerized to a rubbery material. They found several, the most promising of which was butadiene (Figure 2). This compound could be produced at not prohibitive cost from fusel oil, a by-product of alcoholic fermentation. But while polymerized butadiene looked like rubber, it was not exactly the same. It deteriorated with dismaying speed on exposure to light and air, and consequently the discovery proved practically useless.

In the years following the war it was found that the presence of small amounts of chemicals known as antioxidants would greatly slow down the deterioration of rubber, both natural and synthetic. By using a good antioxidant and a suitably varied method of vulcanization the synthetic rubber could be made into nearly as good a product as the natural. However, since both rubber shortages and wars seemed inconceivable during the happy 1920s, little work was done on developing the process.

Times are different now. In both Germany and Russia synthetic rubber is being made on a commercial scale. In Russia the starting material is alcohol (C_2H_5OH). When alcohol vapor is strongly heated under carefully controled conditions part of it loses water and hydrogen and then combines with itself to give butadiene (C_4H_6). This is then separated from the other products formed and is polymerized to synthetic rubber.

This particular synthetic rubber costs more than does the natural, and its quality still leaves something to be desired. Nevertheless, it is of considerable technical importance in that it can actually be made and used on a big scale. The German synthetic rubber has been in production for only a short time and very little is known about either its manufacture or its properties. In all probability, however, it is made from butadiene.

For a year or so an American variety of synthetic rubber has been on the market. It is made by polymerizing chloroprene (see Figure 3), which is made by combining two molecules of acetylene (C_2H_2) and then adding hydrochloric acid (HC1). It can be seen from its formula that it contains an atom of chlorine which is absent in both natural and butadiene rubbers. This added element is the cause of certain pronounced differences. In some respects it is inferior to natural rubber, but superior in others, notably in resistance to heat and to oil. Because of this it has been able to compete with rubber in a limited industrial field.

Several months ago it was announced that a huge plant had been built in Great Britain for the purpose of converting coal into gasoline. The process was by no means a new one; it had been largely perfected about a dozen years ago in Germany but had lain dormant because of cheap petroleum.

Both coal and petroleum are mixtures of innumerable organic compounds. Their chief chemical differences are these: Petroleum consists of about 85 per cent carbon and 15 per cent hydrogen, while coal, disregarding its ash, analyzes about 85 per cent carbon, 5 per cent hydrogen, and 10 per cent oxygen; secondly, the molecules which make up coal are on the average much larger than those of petroleum.

The process of petroleum synthesis consists of subjecting the powdered coal to the action of gaseous hydrogen at high temperatures and very high pressures, and in the presence of a suitable catalyst. The hydrogen is forced into the coal, displacing more or less of the oxygen. At the same time the violent conditions of the reaction lead to the breaking down of the big coal molecules into ones the size of those in petroleum. With proper control of the conditions of the process a final product is obtained which bears a close resemblance to petroleum both in appearance and in the relative amounts of gasoline, fuel oil, and lubricant that can be obtained from it on refining.

The synthetic oil is considerably more expensive than petroleum at present and can compete with it only when it receives some sort of government subsidy.

This product is not to be confused with the so-called liquefied coal, which is nothing more than a thin paste of about equal parts of fuel oil and finely ground coal. Its advantages and disadvantages are exactly what one would predict from such a mixture. Its heat value lies between those of coal and oil, and its ash is strictly proportional to its coal content.

We have a bad practice of applying the word oil both to the nutritious fluid squeezed out of olives and to the quite indigestible liquid that the filling station attendant pours into the crankcase. So, to avoid confusion in this article, let us refer to animal and vegetable oils as fats and to mineral oils as petroleum.

Fats can be digested and, when boiled with lye, converted into soap and glycerin. Petroleum has neither of these properties. We are inclined to think of fats primarily as foods, but we must remember that their rôle in soap making is scarcely less important. The value of soap lies not so much in its aid to our personal cleanliness as in the myriad of uses it has found in the textile and other industries.

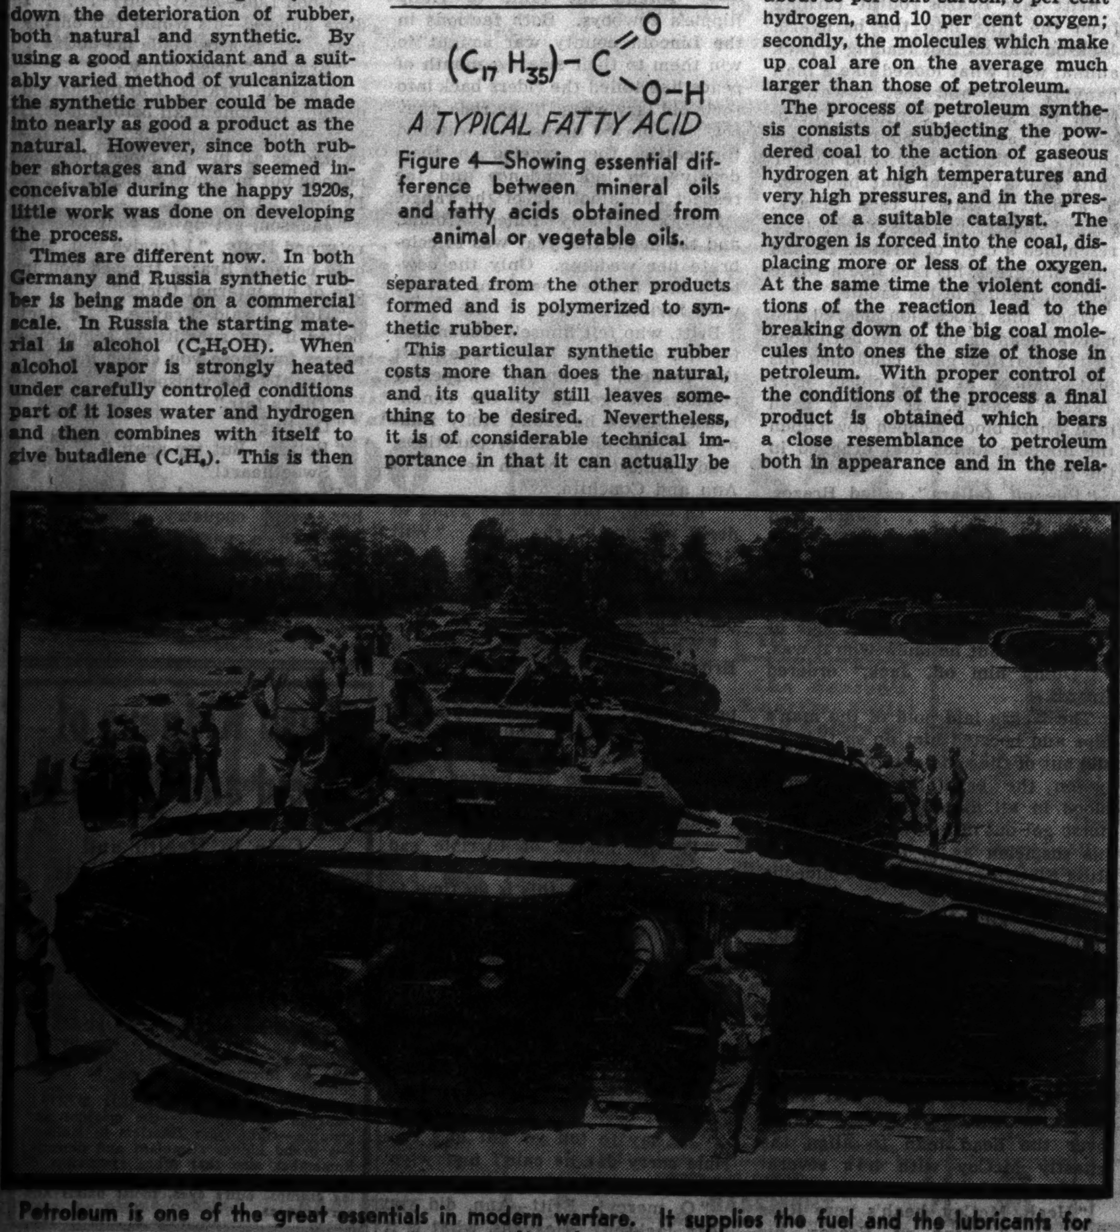
It may seem a little surprising to think of our being dependent on the tropics for fat. But when it is pointed out that a large part of our soap fat comes from cottonseed and coconuts it is easy to realize the dependence of European countries on imports of fat.

Now, a fat is a compound of glycerin with a fatty acid, while soap is a sodium or potassium salt of such an acid. The glycerin component of fat, then, can be disregarded from the standpoint of soap making. The chemical difference between a fatty acid and a typical petroleum compound is shown in Figure 4. Both consist of a long chain of carbon atoms studded with approximately a double number of hydrogen atoms. In the case of the fatty acid, however, one of the end carbon atoms has been linked with a couple of oxygen atoms. This oxidized terminal atom is what enables it to combine with sodium to form water-soluble soaps.

At the present time Russia is lacking in sufficient fat to provide fully both nourishment and cleanliness, but is quite richly endowed with petroleum. Consequently a plant has been built to convert certain vaselinelike petroleum fractions into fatty acids. Air is forced through the petroleum at moderately high temperatures and in the presence of a catalyst. Under these conditions the oxygen of the air attaches itself to some of the carbon atoms in the petroleum.

The result is a rather foul-smelling grease from which a considerable yield of synthetic fatty acids can be extracted. The product is quite inedible but is said to be satisfactory for soap making.

Germany is lacking in petroleum, but has a supply of certain naturally occurring mineral waxes resembling paraffin, and also a type of soft coal that is very rich in soft, resinous hydrocarbons. Recently a soap plant has been built which is equipped to convert one or both of these products into artificial fatty acids.



Petroleum is one of the great essentials in modern warfare. It supplies the fuel and the lubricants for army tanks such as these.

Airplanes and Air Transport

Experts Differ on Position of Wings

By WAYNE THOMIS

THE recent announcement of directors of Imperial Airways, the English state-subsidized air transport company, that they have ordered twelve high-wing monoplanes to carry 20 passengers each over the British empire air routes from London to Cape Town and Melbourne has aroused controversy over the relative merits of high-wing and low-wing designs for transport purposes.

Modern American practice in building transport machines, which must be safe, fast, and capable of "earning their keep," has turned definitly toward the low-wing monoplane design as closest to the ideal type. This is just the opposite of the British view as expressed by the Imperial directors. There are valid arguments on both sides of the picture, and some of these are summarized here.

Airplanes, of course, are built to fit the particular use to which they will be put. A racing ship must be fast. Safety is disregarded to obtain speed. A military plane must not only be fast but must carry a heavy load and be constructed with sufficient strength to withstand violent maneuvers into which it may be flown.

A transport has its own special set of conditions. It must be capable of carrying a large profit-making load—mail, express, or passengers, as the case may be. At the same time it must be fast, for the faster the ship the more miles it can be flown within a given period, and air transport operators are paid partly on the basis of the number of miles flown.

A transport airplane also must be a very stable ship, one which rolls and pitches very little in rough air, so that passengers will not become ill. It must land at a reasonable speed, now considered from 60 to 65 miles an hour, so that it can be put down in relatively small airports or even small fields should an emergency arise requiring such a landing.

Its speed must be obtained without too great an expenditure of power, for power is costly. It must be soundproofed, air conditioned, and have all the comforts of a railway Pullman car to attract passengers who not only want to travel rapidly but also with some pleasure.

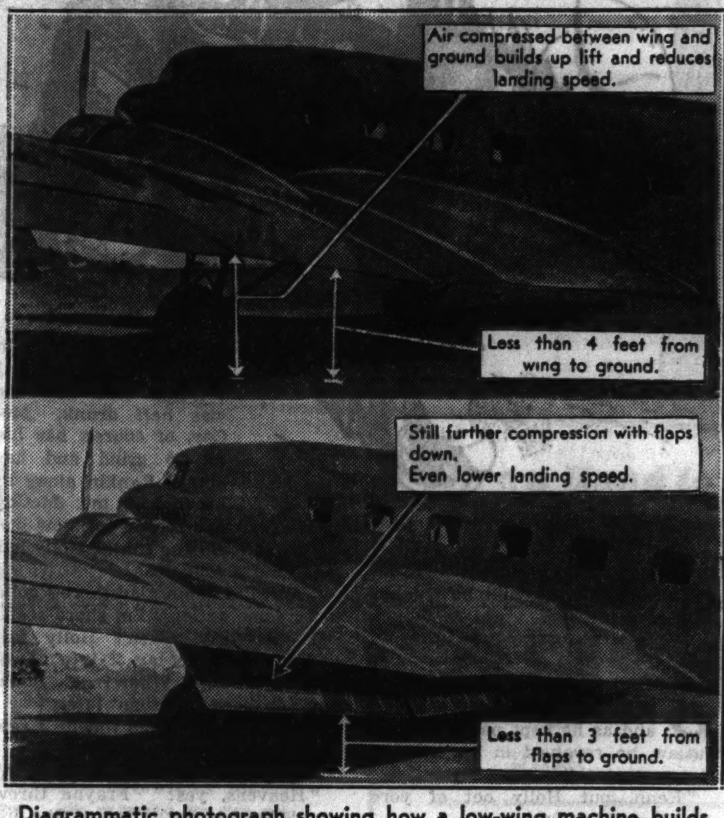
Two airplanes could be built today so that their only external differences would be that one would have a high wing and the other a low wing. Dimensions and even the wing and fuselage sections could be constructed so they would be identical in virtually all details save that one machine would have the wing above the cabin and the other would have the wing below.

The similarity of the machines would be confined, however, to these external dimensions. The weights and performances of the machines would differ radically, engineers agree.

The American theory is that the low-wing machine would carry a far greater load for its empty weight than the high-wing plane. Designers and engineers who build transport planes in this country say also that landing speed of the low-wing machine would be considerably less than the high-wing plane—a factor of very great importance.

In this country the preference for the low-wing machine begins with the factory engineer, who has discovered that this type is best adapted to light, strong construction.

With the aluminum compound metals now used in airplane structure, it is the practice to build the fuselage as a complete unit. The so-called center section of the wing in which the engines are installed in multimotored ships is another separate unit, and the wing tips are also constructed separately.



Diagrammatic photograph showing how a low-wing machine builds up the compression bubble against the ground when alighting.

In final assembly the center section and the fuselage are put together and the wing tips added. In most instances the joining is done by rivets judiciously placed in clusters at the points of most strain. Fileting, fairing, skin, and other members of the various units all combine to take the loads and stresses.

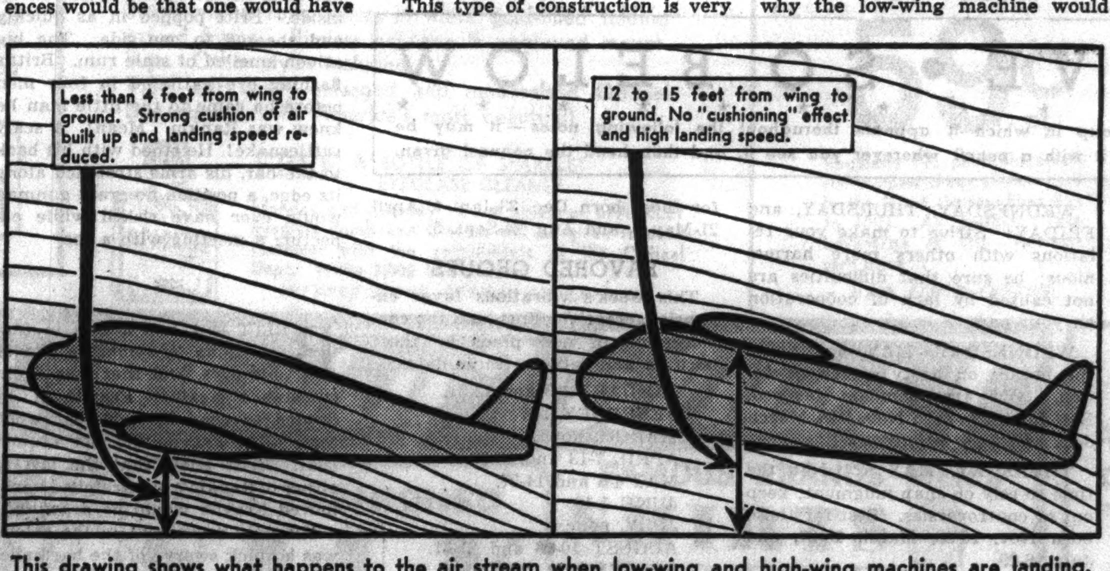
This type of construction is very different from that of earlier years. The twin spars which ran the full length of the older cloth or plywood covered wings have been entirely discarded. The new wing is of the multicellular or the box type, capable of withstanding strains far greater than those borne by the spar types.

Great economies in weight of structure are possible with the newer methods of building transports, and these economies are directly reflected in pay load increases. It is now believed that the ratio between empty weight and disposable load, which includes pay load as well as crew, fuel, etc., will become even more favorable as the sizes of airplanes increase.

The matter of spaciousness within the airplane cabin also enters into this discussion. With a low-wing machine of the Douglas DC-2 type, now being flown all over the world, the entire cabin is free from protuberances or hurtles which in other planes are inescapable because they are part of the essential structure.

Finally, from the engineer's viewpoint the low-wing machine lends itself best to a disposal of retractile landing gear. Wheels are pulled up within the wing itself or are drawn within the engine nacelles. The struts which transfer landing loads from the wheels to the wing need be no longer than three or four feet in a transport of the Douglas type—just enough to keep the propeller tips off the ground when taxiing in tail-up position.

From the flying side of the picture it is necessary to visualize air as a fluid very similar to water to realize why the low-wing machine would land at a lower speed than the high-wing plane even though their gross weights might be identical.



This drawing shows what happens to the air stream when low-wing and high-wing machines are landing.

Consider now our example of the two otherwise identical machines, one having a high wing and the other a low wing. At 1,000 feet both ships stall at, let us say, 65 miles an hour. At an altitude of a thousand feet both machines are flying in smooth, undisturbed, and uncompressed air.

At the ground the high-wing machine stalls at the same speed—65 miles an hour; but the low-wing plane in landing stalls at 60 miles an hour, or five miles an hour slower than the other. Why?

Air in moving over a wing and under a wing is given a downward trust, partly because the air follows the curve of the air foil and partly because the trailing edge of the normal wing is slightly lower than is the entering edge.

As the high-wing machine comes in to land the under surface of its wing is 15 to 17 feet above the ground even after the wheels have touched down. There is plenty of space below the wing for free passage of air. Not so in the case of the low-wing plane, the under surface of this wing being less than four feet off the ground just at the moment of touching down.

There is not enough room for free passage of air, and so a "bubble" of air is built up between the ground and the wing. This bubble tends to lift the wing away from the ground; it furnishes extraordinary lift, so much that the wing continues to be efficient down to 60 miles an hour instead of stalling at 65.

In the case of flaps this compressed air bubble effect is even stronger. A flapped low wing builds up a very strong bubble of compression and consequently lands at a very slow speed indeed. On a high-wing machine flaps act chiefly as added drag, bringing the plane down at a sharper angle but doing little to decrease the striking speed.

The English, while admitting all these facts which seem to favor a low-wing plane, point out that in sticking to high-wing airplanes they are providing their passengers with a marvelous view of the ground. In low-wing planes the wings obstruct the downward view from almost all the cabin seats.

The British engineers say that in building their new high-wing machines most of the weight economies used by the Americans can be applied. They say that while air lines operating in the United States must fly off airports at altitudes up to 7,000 feet in mountainous country, they do all their flying at low altitudes and all their landing fields are only a few feet above sea level, where the air is thick, with high lift properties. Consequently the need for slow landing speeds is not so essential.

In the United States an airplane which lands at 65 miles an hour at sea level will land at perhaps 80 miles an hour at 7,000 feet. But an English machine which lands at 70 miles an hour will find the same sea-level air pressure at all landing fields from London to South Africa or to Australia.

One point which the English designers do not explain is how they can expect to build retractile landing gear—as is proposed in the plans for Imperial's air liners—with struts which must be from 12 to 14 feet in length, yet strong enough to carry the weight of a 30,000-pound airplane.

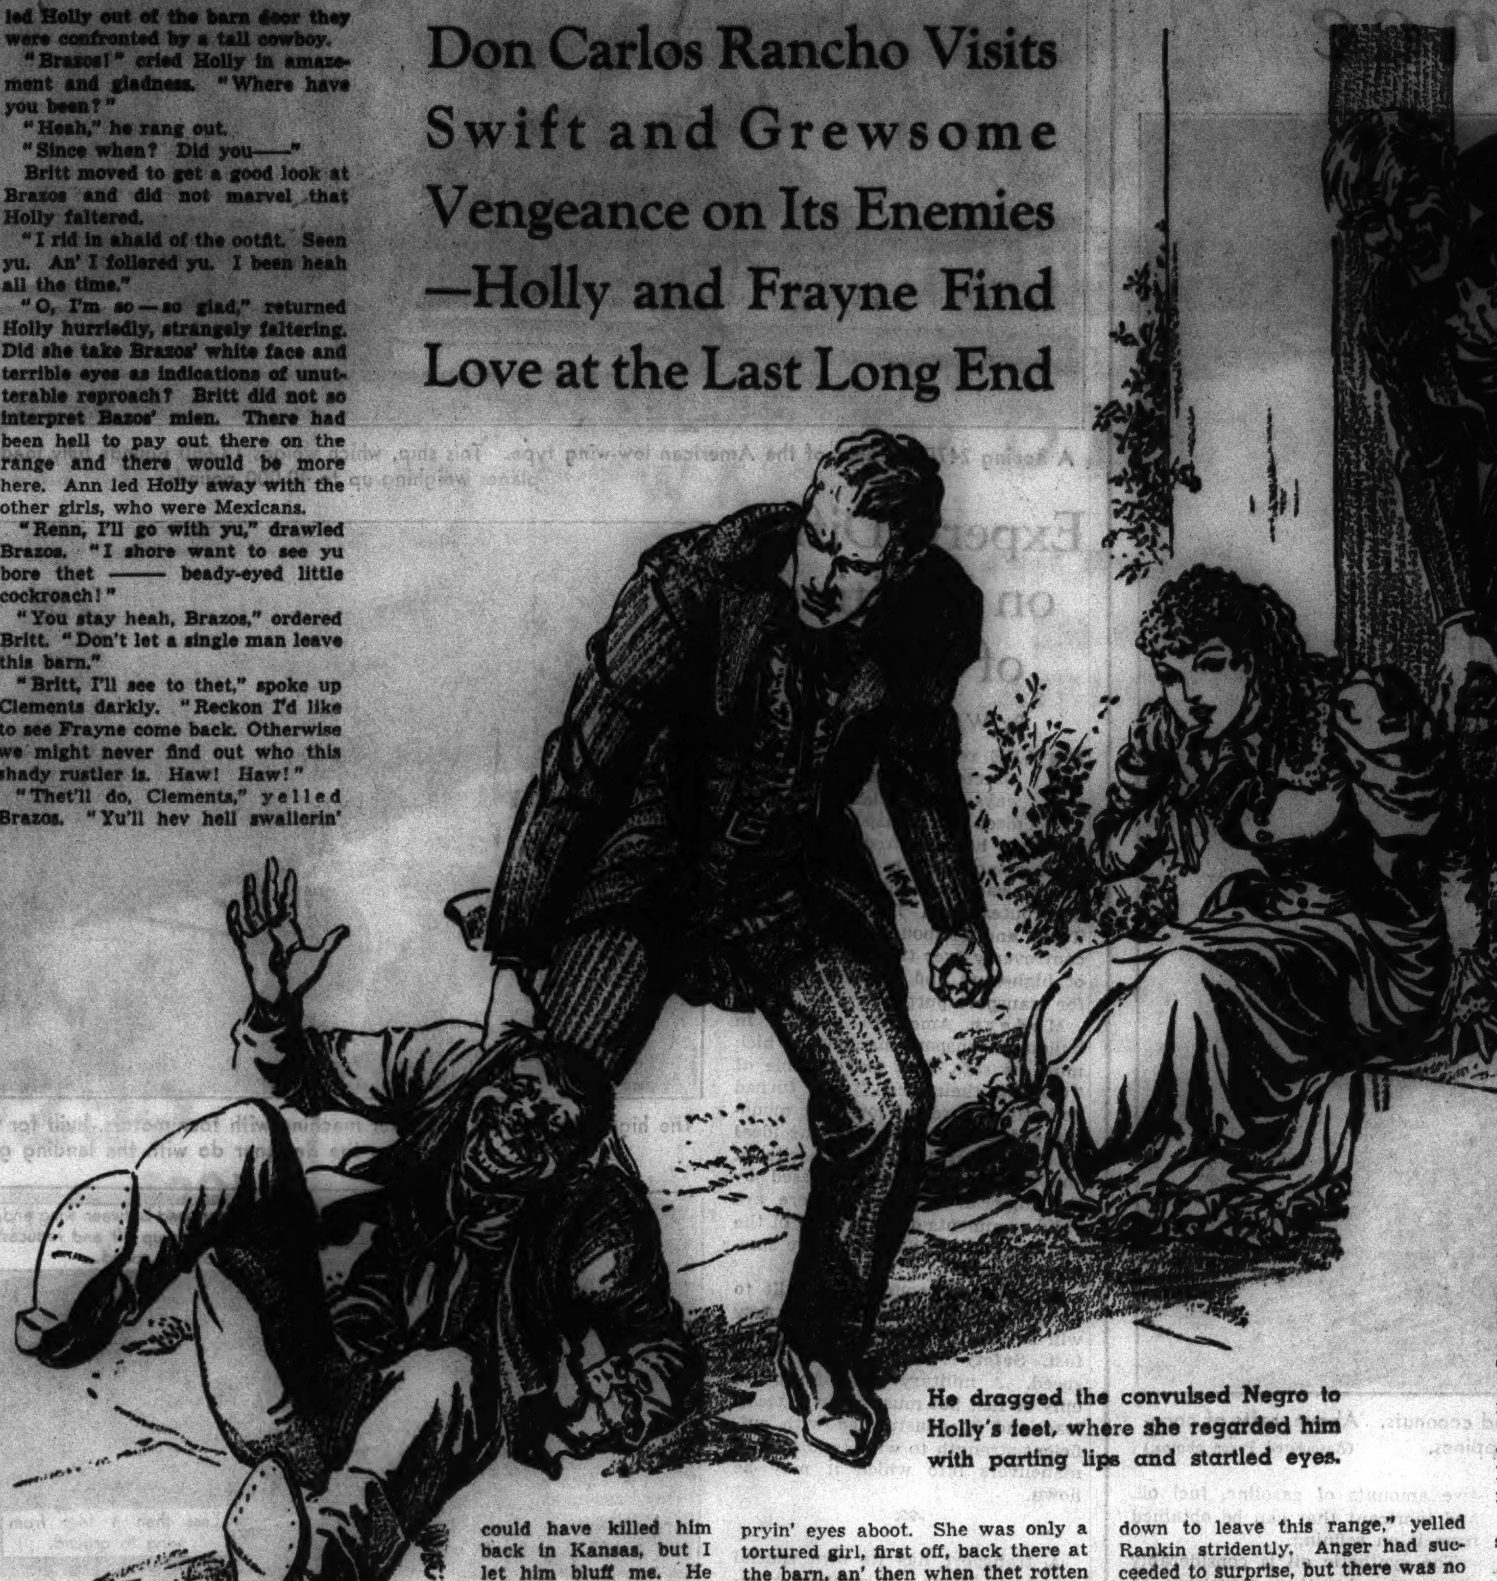
KNIGHTS of the RANGE

By ZANE GREY

Don Carlos Rancho Visits Swift and Grewsome Vengeance on Its Enemies —Holly and Frayne Find Love at the Last Long End



He dragged the convulsed Negro to Holly's feet, where she regarded him with parting lips and startled eyes.

CONCLUSION

BRITT broke out of his stupefaction to approach them. What indeed had Holly done? Saved or wrecked Frayne? But, like the truly wonderful girl of generous heart she was, she had showed the range what Renn Frayne meant to her.

"Holly, this heah is a man's deal," spoke up Britt huskily as he reached her. "You leave it to——"

She silenced him with a flash of her hand.

"Forgive me, Renn," she implored, gazing up at him entreatingly. "I was beside myself. I understand now. I beg of you, don't let me—or my love—hamper you in the least. I trust you. I know you. . . . Meet these men—as if you had never seen me."

"Holly," he choked as the slackness, the softness passed out of him. For this girl he would have foresworn the hard manhood of the west and have accepted a stigma without shame and without bitterness. But he could not speak a word of the passion that consumed him.

Holly, still clinging to Frayne's hand, turned to the gaping cattlemen. Britt stared spellbound. Her loveliness, her race had never shone as then. Out of her proud white face blazed eyes so great, so black, so magnificent that they appeared more than human, flames of a spirit stronger than terror or death.

"Hayward, and all of you, listen. . . . Renn Frayne has been hounded for years by such men as this Rankin. It made him an outlaw. I doubt if he has ever been really bad. But that would not matter to me, since now he is honest. I love him and I am going to marry him. Weigh well your antagonism in this hour. We will never forgive more of your biased opinions. Don Carlos rancho stands or falls by this man. . . . Sewall McCoy is a contemptible dog. He wanted to marry me. He threatened me with an alliance with Russ Slaughter if I refused him. This trumped-up charge against Frayne is not only prompted by jealousy and revenge but by fear! He is afraid of Frayne. Because, gentlemen, McCoy is the dark horse in this range mystery. He is the rustler baron."

"Silence!" yelled Britt, leaping out to crouch. "Another word an' I'll kill you! You dealt this deal. Now, by Gawd, you'll play oot yore hand!"

"Hold, Britt! Steady, now," shouted Clements, plainly alive to an unexpected development in the situation. "We'll all play out our hands in this game. . . . Miss Ripple, you use strong words. We can make allowance for your—your—for a most tryin' ordeal. But unless you are beside yourself with fury—you will be called on to prove——"

"Clements," interrupted Holly, "you are hopelessly in the toils of this rustler who hires poor cowboys to steal for him. . . . Do you think that I would lie? Mr. Clements, I have no doubt that in less than an hour you will be put to the painful ordeal of explaining your connection with Sewall McCoy."

"Thet'll do, Holly," spoke up Britt, on edge with the prolongation of this scene. "Go home. . . . Ann, take Holly home."

Ann came forward hastily while Holly turned to Frayne.

"Renn, I'll expect you up at the house soon," she said coolly, with dark, proud eyes upon him. Frayne could not answer. Then as Ann led Holly out of the barn door they were confronted by a tall cowboy.

"Brazos!" cried Holly in amazement and gladness. "Where have you been?"

"Heah," he rang out.

"Since when? Did you——"

Britt moved to get a good look at Brazos and did not marvel that Holly faltered.

"I rid in ahaid of the ootfit. Seen yu. An' I follered yu. I been heah all the time."

"O, I'm so—so glad," returned Holly hurriedly, strangely faltering. Did she take Brazos' white face and terrible eyes as indications of unutterable reproach? Britt did not so interpret Bazos' mien. There had been hell to pay out there on the range and there would be more here. Ann led Holly away with the other girls, who were Mexicans.

"Renn, I'll go with yu," drawled Brazos. "I shore want to see yu bore thet —— beady-eyed little cockroach!"

"Britt, I'll see to thet," spoke up Clements darkly. "Reckon I'd like to see Frayne come back. Otherwise we might never find out who this shady rustler is. Haw! Haw!"

"Thet'll do, Clements," yelled Brazos. "Yu'll hev hell swallerin' what you've said already. Yu're on the wrong side, as yu'll larn damn pronto."

BRITT had to run to keep up with Frayne's swift strides, and as he kept pace with the outlaw he revolved in his mind a few pertinent things to say.

"Renn, put Holly oot of yore mind," was the first one.

"No, by God! Do you think any man could beat me to a gun when I remember how she looked—what she said?"

"Wal, I reckon not. . . . Loosen yore belt a little. . . . An' roll thet gun a few times. . . . Ah-huh. An' stick it back sorta light so it'll come oot quicker'n greased lightnin'. . . . Will this Rankin expect you?"

"Hardly. He's got me wrong. I could have killed him back in Kansas, but I let him bluff me. He was half drunk. McCoy, of course, has his ax to grind and has helped Rankin along in his figuring me. McCoy has reason to know me. But he thinks Holly has made me a four-flush!"

"Wal, I'm damn glad there's goin' to be some action. I'm shore seein' red. An' say, wasn't Holly jest grand? Did she lay it into Clements an' McCoy? Whew! . . . Renn, hev you been practicin' lately?"

"Day and night, old timer. I saw this coming."

"You'll hev to marry Holly now."

"Heavens, yes!" Frayne threw up his head in exultation. "She disgraced herself—ruined herself! Before them all! For me! Lord, if I could only have gone away!"

"Shore, if you could hev," agreed the wily Britt. "As it is, though, you've got to stay heah an' prove Holly wasn't lyin'. . . . An' think, Renn; pretty pronto, when this mess is over, you'll be goin' up to the house to see her. An' Holly will be waitin' . . . all alone. Without any pryin' eyes aboot. She was only a tortured girl, first off, back there at the barn, an' then when thet rotten ootfit made her mad she was a queen. But, cowboy, this next time you meet her! All thet beauty! All thet blazin' fire—thet sweet love which can never get enough of you—all in yore arms! Gawd, boy, do you know yore good fortune?"

"Yes, Cap, I know it. No man on earth could know so well!"

"Renn, is this Rankin the real thing?"

"Mean. A scaly rattlesnake. Dangerous if he gets the drop. That's all."

They reached the village. Frayne slowed his stride and kept to the middle of the road. A Mexican in a big straw sombrero passed carrying two pails of water suspended from a pole across his shoulders. Some Indians lounged in front of the post. Two dusty horses stood haltered to the hitching rail opposite the entrance to the saloon. For the rest the wide street appeared deserted. Britt saw the crudely painted Mexican designs upon the whitewashed adobe walls.

Frayne squared himself before the stained wooden doors, then with a powerful thrust opened them to leap inside. Britt popped in as quickly and sheered to one side. The big saloon smelled of stale rum. Britt's flashing eye gathered in four men before he came to the little man he knew was Rankin. Mean! A scaly rattlesnake! He stood with his back to the bar, his arms stretched along its edge, a position no great gunman would ever have risked while expecting a meeting with a foe.

BRITT saw him stiffen in that position. A sombrero shaded his eyes, and that was a circumstance against Frayne if he needed to read his adversary's intent. But Frayne did not require that. Britt knew that the instant either of Rankin's outstretched hands moved Frayne would be drawing.

The only movement in the saloon was a quick swerve of the bartender to dodge out of line and then run to the far end of the bar.

"Rankin!" called Frayne in cold expectation.

"Howdy? Who air you?" rejoined the other gruffly.

"You know me. Frayne."

"Aho. . . . Frayne, eh? Wal, I kind of give you up. Fact is, I didn't expect you much. . . . Wanta tip a bottle with me?"

"No."

"I see. Heerd you'd sworn off drinkin'. Air you thinkin' of ridin' away from Don Carlos rancho?"

"No."

"Stayin' on, huh?"

"Yes."

"Wal, didn't Hayward invite you to leave the country?"

"He did."

"An' didn't McCoy tell you thet I said fer you to get out?"

"Yes. That's why I'm here."

"Frayne, I'll give you till sundown to leave this range," yelled Rankin stridently. Anger had succeeded to surprise, but there was no sign of fear in the man. He had grown cunningly conservant of action, increasingly taut of frame. His right hand began to quiver.

"Did I leave Dodge after I shot your sticky-fingered pard?" taunted Frayne.

Rankin was game, but he betrayed that he had gotten himself not only into a disadvantageous posture but into the certainty that he had to meet Frayne alone. Nevertheless he accepted it. He actually bristled. Britt saw his sombrero rise slightly above his opaque, formidable eyes. Swift as light then all his frame jerked in downward action.

Frayne's draw was too quick for Britt's sight. But he saw the red spurt—the black burst—then heard the boom.

Rankin's terrific violence sustained a sudden check. He sagged inward against the bar. His head dropped so that the wide sombrero hid his face. And his hand fell away from his half-drawn gun. A groan rumbled out of him. He lodged there, a shrunken figure, strangely bereft of his sinister menace.

Britt was not loquacious on the march back to the barn. Nor did he allow either the raw gust of passion or the strong feeling of elation and relief to clog his thinking machine. The situation required more than he believed any one man could give it. Moreover, he was not in a conciliatory mood. Brazos would run amuck. McCoy did not stand the slightest chance of getting away with his life. Obviously the thing to do was to establish proofs of Frayne's innocence and McCoy's guilt in front of these obsessed cattlemen and then avoid a general pitched battle. This seemed unlikely. McCoy had a number of cowboys with him, and there were half a dozen with the cattlemen. As Britt remembered it, Holly's four remaining cowboys were Jim, Skylark, Stinger, and Gaines. What had become of Joe Doane and Rebel?

"Frayne, do yu reckon it'll ever get as far as McCoy's charge against you?"

"Brazos!"

"Yes. He's got something up his sleeve."

"Look! Down the lane! Frayne, there's the ootfit. Shore, thet must be what makes Brazos so cocky."

"It's likely. Let's rustle along. They're coming at a trot, pack horses an' all. They might start a fight pronto."

Britt jogged along behind Frayne. They cut short across the field to the barn, coming through the fence near the door. The relative positions of the several groups had not altered much. McCoy sat sullenly aside from his cowboys. The cattlemen ceased a colloquy at Frayne's sudden appearance on the runway. Britt whispered to Jim, "Get back an' be ready for anythin'."

"Heah yu air, pard!" rang out Brazos in his lusty, piercing tenor. "These heah conscientious cowmen never expected yu back a-tall. But I knowed yu'd come."

McCoy rose to his feet, livid of face, beginning to manifest a subtle change of front. Brazos would have been disconcerting even to an honest man.

"Frayne, you backed out of meetin' him?" he queried harshly.

The answer he got from Frayne was a piercing, deadly stare. But Britt thought it well to launch a retort.

"McCoy, is yore beady-eyed gun slinger the best you can trot oot?"

"Dead?" gasped McCoy.

BRAZOS reacted to that with a ringing laugh. He dominated the several groups, even Britt and Frayne backing from his restless front. His gun swung low in its sheath. He had a second weapon stuck into the hip pocket of his jeans. Britt smelled gunpowder on him, then made the observation that his belt was half emptied of shells. All the characteristic red had faded from his face and his pallor enhanced the smear of blood just under his clustering hair.

Clements coughed nervously and advanced a step.

"McCoy, press your charge now against Frayne an' produce your proofs. This deal will begin to look queer if you don't."

"Queer, eh?" sneered McCoy. "Look out how queer you make it. I told you Slaughter has the proofs."

"But you told us you knew them," protested Clements dubiously.

"Will you stop raggin' me an' wait till Slaughter gets here?" yelled McCoy.

"Wal, heah comes Slaughter. . . . Don't nobody move a finger. . . . Yu McCoy hombres, I got eyes in the back of my haid. Somebody is gonna get bored."

Britt saw Brazos' outfit turning from the lane into the barnyard. Jackson was on foot leading a pack animal with what looked like a man hanging face and feet downward from the saddle. Santone, Cherokee, Tex and Mex Southard rode behind the little Negro; and if ever Britt saw a quartet that had been in a fight he saw it then. Black, ragged, dusty, bloody-scarfed, they resembled a crew of pirates. Behind rode Bluegrass, his face like a white splotch, reeling in his saddle.

When this procession neared the runway leading up to the barn door Britt's startled gaze confirmed his first glances at that object over Jackson's saddle. It was a dead man whose blood dripped down upon the flopping hands that dragged in the dirt.

"Pile off, fellars," called Brazos, "an' come heah. . . . Jack, lead that cayuse up."

The Negro complied. Britt stared in sickening excitement. He could not see the head of the dead man, for that hung on the other side of the horse. But he knew who it was.

"Dump him off, Jack," ordered Brazos.

The Negro laid hold of the man's hips and boosted him up so that he slid out of the saddle, to flop soddenly on the barn floor, scattering blood in all directions. When the horse got out of line Britt confirmed his suspicion as to the dead man. Russ Slaughter presented a hideous spectacle.

"Look, all of yu!" pealed the ruthless showman. "But keep back. Take a good look, yu cowboys an' cowmen, so yu'll see what can happen to a cattle thief. . . . See! He's stretched hemp! This rustlin' gentleman was shot fust, an' hanged alive, then pumped full of lead!"

In the horrified silence that transfixed the onlookers Brazos leaped over the dead man to align the ghastly McCoy with his several wooden-faced cowboys.

"Heah, McCoy, heah's yore Russ Slaughter," went on Brazos, his voice gaining the high-tensioned ring of cold steel. "He had proofs. Aw, he shore hed. But of yore rotten deals with him! Russ must hev been a hombre who didn't trust yu or his memory. He jotted down every steer, every calf, every dollar. All in a little book. An' I got thet book!"

Brazos grew terrible in his cold-blooded fury. His young, clear-cut face had the look of an avenging god.

"Thet'll be aboot all fer yu, McCoy!" he hissed. "Heah's one fer yore insult to Holly Ripple!" One gun crashed; McCoy, with an awful scream, spasmodically clapped his hands to his abdomen. "An' heah's fer yore old grudge an' dirty deal to my pard, Renn Frayne!" The second gun crashed. McCoy sank behind the cloud of smoke. Brazos leaped through that to present his smoking guns at McCoy's men. "Get a move on. Pronto! If yu ever meet a Ripple cowhand again, go fer yore guns!"

He drove them out of the barn.

"Watch 'em, boys. If they look back—shoot!"

Brazos wheeled to confront the cattlemen, of whom Clements was the one most obviously shaken. He quailed before the fire-eyed cowboy.

"Clements, —— —— yore yellow soul! I cain't be certain aboot how crooked yu air. But yore name is in Slaughter's book. Yu bought cattle of him. . . . How yu explain thet?"

"Unbranded stock—I swear to Gawd!" gasped out the cattleman, ashen hued behind his beard.

"Aw, yu lie! I can see it in yore eyes. An honest man has nothin' to fear. But yu ain't honest. Yu knowed McCoy was crooked!"

"No—I swear—I didn't!"

"Wal, yu knowed Slaughter was. . . . Oot with thet before I bore yu."

"Yes—yes . . . I knew it."

"An' yu bought Ripple stock from him?"

"I shet my eyes. . . . All unbranded calves—yearlings."

"Ah-huh. Wal, I'll bore yu just fer luck. . . . But if yu hadn't been mean in yore talk to Miss Ripple I might hev let yu off."

"O, my Gawd! Keene! Keene!"

Brazos' gun crash cut short that impassioned and desperate appeal.

"Rustle, yu conscientious cowmen, before I cut loose. We got McCoy comin' an' goin'. We have written proofs. We hev Saunders' confession. Mill over thet, yu wise range galoots. . . . An' pack these daid hombres away on their hawses, onless yu want them throwed to the hawgs."

Half an hour later Brazos stepped to the side of a fresh, mettlesome horse that Santone had fetched to the bunkhouse. A light pack and a canteen were significantly bound upon the saddle. Brazos mounted with his slow, inimitable grace.

"Whoa, Bounce, or I'll rake yu," he called as he pulled the big bay down with an iron arm. "So long, Jim, Rebel—all yu sons of guns!"

They muttered a farewell that they neither sanctioned nor approved of. Their acquiescence had in it something of Brazos' detachment. Cowboys had to ride away. They bowed to the fate and the greatness of their comrade.

Britt and Frayne crowded close. Britt was silent because he could not speak, while Frayne stared up with mute sorrow and a gathering dark understanding in his gaze.

"Pard, do me a favor," went on Brazos, his lean hand going to Frayne's shoulder. "If yu—an' Holly ever hev a boy—call him Brazos."

Then with a clink of spurs and a clatter of hoofs he was off, swift as the wind. They watched him cross the road and stretch out upon the gray range, headed for the pass and the long, lonely trail to Texas.

DAYS passed. June warmed into July. Far and wide spread the fame of Holly Ripple's cowboys. Both factions in the Lincoln county war sought to win them to their side. A month of peace had lulled the riders back into their old lazy ways. They rode, they bet, they played tricks, they watched the cattle, they reveled in their dearly won independence and the respect and aloofness of the range.

Holly's birthday rolled around, and the event this year was to celebrate her wedding. Only the cowboys and her few neighbor friends were invited.

Britt, who felt himself responsible for this great and happy event, left the restless, primping, whispering cowboys to go up to the ranchhouse. There he found Holly radiant at the close of preparations, ready almost to consign herself to Ann and Conchita.

"O, Cappy, the girls are going to dress me now!" she cried. "Will Renn like me?"

At that juncture Ride 'Em Jackson came puffing to the living room door, where he pounded.

"What you want, Jack?" queried Britt.

"Who is it? O, Jackson! You poor fellow! What are you panting about?" exclaimed Holly.

"Missy Ripple—I's done—powerful—sorry. I sho' is," panted Jackson, solemnly rolling his eyes.

"Sorry! What for?"

"I's the bearer of turrible sad news."

"Jack, get out; this is no time to worry Miss Ripple," protested Britt angrily. The Negro was serious and probably had some dismaying news that might just as well be left until some other time.

"Dis message comes from Massa Renn."

"Renn! For goodness sake!" cried Holly excitedly. "What is it, Jackson?"

"He say to tell yo' dat he's turrible sorry dat he cain't marry yo' today."

"O, mercy! Britt—Ann, did you hear Jackson? Heavens, what is it now? O, I never felt sure of Renn! He'll ride away—leave me——"

"Nonsense, Holly," interposed Britt. "Don't take on so. It cain't be anythin' serious. Why, less than an hour ago I saw Renn so locoed he couldn't heah the boys. Mad aboot you, Holly. I never saw a man so happy."

"Mad? Happy? Then why on earth . . . Jackson, you staring ebony lunkhead! Why can't Frayne marry me today?"

"'Cause, missy, dere's a raid on de cattle. Santone jest rode in. He tole us. Oot by Gray hill. Gosh! I nebber seen Massa Renn so mad. He cuss turrible. 'Hell's fire! Cain't dey gib me a day to be married?'"

"But Jack—he didn't ride off?" wailed Holly.

"Yessum, he sho' did. Wif de whole ootfit all dressed up. An' I'll sho' hev to rustle to ketch them."

"Did he say—when he'd come back?" asked Holly faintly.

"He say to tell yu he cain't be sho'. Mebbe tomorrow. Mebbe not."

Holly fell into a magnificent rage—the first Britt had ever seen her exhibit. At first she was so speechless she could only throw things. But soon she burst out: "O, damn the cattle! What do I care for cattle? . . . On my wedding day! He leaves me to chase rustlers! O, to hell with my cattle! I want to be married. I want my husband!"

"Missy, I sho' forget," said the Negro. "He say fer yu to wave yo' scarf—like yo' always do. But yo' mus' hurry befo' dey's oot of sight."

"No! I won't. Wave to him—when he deserts me for some miserable cows? I see myself. . . . O, Britt, it must be very bad! A big raid! Renn would not leave me otherwise. . . . Where's my scarf? Ann—Conchita—my scarf, you ninnies!"

HOLLY ran to and fro, weeping, wringing her hands, wild with mingled emotions. Presently she snatched the scarf from Ann and fled precipitately out on the porch. Britt ran after her. Off the porch she leaped, into the open path, her arms aloft, her beautiful eyes strained.

The range was empty. But in the path, not twenty rods down the gentle slope, Holly espied a procession of marching cowboys, with Renn Frayne at their head, looking handsome, foolish, and unutterably happy.

Holly backed with a scream until she reached the porch steps, where she sat down suddenly. The scarf fell to the ground. A flash of joy quickly left her face. Britt was transfixed by the black, dilated eyes. She was a tragic, savage child.

"Hello, Holly!" cried out Frayne as he neared her. "How do I—we look? We're early. But couldn't wait."

"It's—a trick," panted Holly.

"Trick? Indeed not. This wedding is the most serious, the most beautiful, the most glorious——"

"Devil!" shrieked Holly.

"What?" gasped Renn blankly.

"Perfidious wretch!"

At that he could only stare down at her. The smile left his face.

"Villain!"

"Holly, whatever it is—I am innocent," declared Frayne.

"Innocent! When you sent that grinning demon of a nigger up here to tell me you couldn't marry me today? Rustlers! You had to ride off. You couldn't get back—maybe not tomorrow! O, how could you? Such a horrible trick! Can't you cowboys tell what is fun—and what is cruel? . . . It broke my heart. I—I'll never marry you now."

Frayne jumped up to give the rolling Jackson a resounding kick. "You black rascal! Come here! . . . Tell her, on your knees, or I'll beat you half to death!"

He dragged the convulsed Negro to Holly's feet, where she regarded him with parting lips and startled eyes.

"Good Lud—Missy Holly . . . I done knowed—dis would fall on my haid. But Brazos made me do it."

"Brazos?" cried Holly.

"Yassum. Brazos. Dat tow-haided debbil. He done it all before he left, Missy Holly. He planned de trick—swored us all in—an' made me t'ink nobody but me could fool yo'. . . . I's sorry. I is."

"Jackson, get up off your knees," returned Holly. "I forgive you. But only because Brazos trapped you in one of his infernal tricks."

"Holly," said Frayne, "I'd feel better if you substituted some nice names for those you called me."

"Renn!" she whispered.

"That's fair."

"Darling!"

"Better. But try again."

"Sweetheart!"

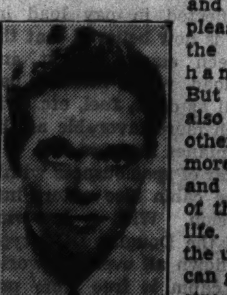
An Open Letter to James Melton



JAMES MELTON

Dear James: Money is good stuff when you belong to it legitimately; and it is always pleasant to have the price of a ham sandwich. But there are also times when other items are more important, and this is one of them in your life. You are on the up grade and can go far if you stress what you give and keep improving the output regardless of the income. Your pay days will come and you'll like them—if you continue to roll up the percentage in your favor. With best wishes, WYNN.

Cousin Eve Finds Society Gay in Nation's Capital

Meets Many Interesting Foreign and American Personalities There.

By Cousin Eve.

There is a saying here, "Nobody is missed in Washington, but nobody is forgotten." WASHINGTON, D. C. Even the atmosphere of Washington is friendly. The telephone purrs with unusual softness in one's ear, and a never ceasing stream of hospitality flows in.

There is material galore for a gay society. As a basis for the social structure of Washington, are the old aristocratic families living in their great houses, the Mrs. Lawrence Townsends, Mrs. Henry Dimocks, the Misses Patton, Miss Mabel Boardman, and the many wealthy, fascinating widows of Washington. Then there are the embassies and legations with their army of agreeable, good looking attachés, and their never ending circle of entertainments. The White House is there always, and governments come and governments go. Nowadays there's hardly a hilltop that has not its New Dealer of the cabinet or the senate, or its plutocrat who lives close by to watch the wheels go round.

There is an extra large group of young marrieds who go and come in all circles, and a great number of single men, which makes dinner giving easy. And lately there have been many titled Europeans wintering in Washington hotels. Lady Lister Kaye has just returned to England, and so has the duchess of Sutherland. Mrs. Joseph Leiter has opened the great Leiter house this year for Nancy's debut, and will keep it open until she marries. Then they may sell the enormous, yellow brick house on New Hampshire avenue.

Visits Senate with Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis.

One day I went over to the senate with Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, wife of the senior senator from Illinois. Gipsy is not only immensely popular with the darlingest laugh in the world, like a high tinkling bell, but wishes to be a great matchmaker. She has a yen to see all her unmarried friends blossom forth as brides. So in the senate chamber, senators were identified not by their names but this way: "That man in gray over there is a bachelor. He is senator so and so. And the large man with the bald head is a widower—and so is the one with the red hair."

I was telling all this to the German ambassador, Dr. Luther, one day when I was having a cup of tea with him at the embassy, and he was highly amused. "I will tell Mrs. Lewis," said he, "next time she wants me for an extra man at her dinner table to try the senate instead." Dr. Luther laughed a great deal over what he was going to say to Mrs. Lewis. He, too, is in great demand in Washington society, and cards to his dinners are out five weeks in advance.

As he walked with me to the door, I saw a framed photograph of many men seated about a huge square table, splendid looking men. Indeed, they were probably the pick of Europe. The picture was taken ten years ago at Locarno, and Dr. Luther who was then German Reich's chancellor was in the act of addressing the conference. At his right was Stresemann, and in a corner sat Winston Churchill; near him M. Poincare and the French delegation.

England Has the Newest Embassy in Washington.

Dr. Luther was also president of the Reich's bank, and is reputed to be one of Germany's wealthiest men. His embassy is a plain, old fashioned brick house in lower Massachusetts avenue. Not so old, however, as several young German school boys thought it was. A group of them, coming to Washington and calling at the embassy, saw number 1435 carved above the door, figured it was the corner stone, and that the embassy was five hundred years old. That would be prior to Columbus. This also struck him as funny, and the ambassador was full of gayety over it.

England has the newest embassy, built after a curious early colonial model, the brick palace of the governor at Williamsburg. I saw only the exterior as Sir Ronald and Lady Lindsay are in mourning for the late king, and there is no entertaining. Personally, I thought it was rather grand, intriguing, and quaint.

Monday I lunched on Italian soil. This was a thrill indeed, for it is the most charming of all the embassies, the house of the ambassador of Italy, Augusto Rosso, far out on 16th street.

Countess Roberti Is a Former N. Y. Girl.

Pale April sunshine flooded this luxurious place, decked with lovely, fresh, many colored stocks, and magnificently furnished. Here our charming host was waiting with some of his young embassy people. Signor Rosso is a unique type of ambassador. Utterly lacking in pomposity, or the heavy qualities often associated with diplomats, he is florid and handsome, not tall, with rather a boyish figure. His perfect simplicity is his high charm, and one never knows what he will say next. In spite of his natural manner one feels that he is a man fully aware, and quick of action. The ambassador is a bachelor.

Two charming, silky spaniels ran into luncheon with us, two spoiled darlings, one from Italy, and a black and white one from Virginia. They were rogues. Viola slid her little black nose almost away with my sweets.

Count and Countess Roberti from Rome are a new and handsome young couple in Washington. The count is second secretary of embassy, and the countess a tall, slim, stunning girl. I was amazed when she told me her maiden name was Hammond, that she came from New York, and her mother was a Stevens of Castle Point. I thought from her appearance and fluent Italian that she was a native.

Wayne Chatfield-Taylor's Home a Brick Castle.

Wayne Chatfield-Taylor of Chicago is undersecretary of the treasury, and with his family occupies a newly built house almost but not quite out of Washington. To arrive, one drives way out Massachusetts avenue and makes a left turn. Then one sees a brick castle way off on a high hill. That is the Taylor domicile, but they did not build it. Some man with plenty of audacity put up the house for his wife during her absence in Europe, and on her return she absolutely refused to live in it.

One day, I drove out to lunch informally with Augusta Goodwin, and found Adele Taylor the same exquisite and unique personality. Unchanged by her official Washington experience, she was looking pretty and rather tanned. For they virtually live in the country, with dogs and horses and woods all about. The Chatfield-Taylors have three children, Rose, Adelaide, and Hobart. And 14 year old Rose, a blonde, has all the beauty and dash of her beautiful grandmother for whom she was named.

I did not find the house so negligible. Its present occupants have put lots of color and life into it. They expect to open their lovely Lake Forest house this summer for the sake of the children who want to come home.

Driving back to town, we cut in past Mrs. Borden Harriman's house, also on a high hill. Daisy Harriman they call her in Washington. Then past the many windowed house where Dwight Davis will bring Pauline Sabin when they marry in May. This, they marry in May. This, too, is out of town. It is a sort of gray Georgian house built by Ray Baker. We came in through Georgetown where the Winston Eltings and Mrs. Granger Blair have tiny houses which lean lovingly together. The Curtis Munsons [Edith Cummings] have Wendell Kuhn's pretty house, taken when he married Mary Coolidge of Boston. Now the Kuhns have settled in Chicago in East Division street. Mr. Munson has an important Republican post.

The Laurance Armours stayed with the Chatfield-Taylors this week during the parties that made up the wedding celebrations of Marianne Dunn and Count Guy de Baillet Latour. And Charles and Suzette Dewey were staying with old friends, the Lammot Belins, in a charmingly remote house. Mr. Belin was appointed ambassador to Poland during Hoover's term. He remained in Warsaw a year enjoying himself mightily, and he and his attractive wife were immensely popular in Polish society, without, however, ever having received the blessing on their appointment of our senate. Which never seemed to bother any one a bit.

With Mrs. Hamilton Lewis, wife of our senior senator, I looked over a famous Washington house, that of the Gist Blairs. Being historic, it was opened as a benefit, and many important southerners came to see it. In the small front book room, Gen. Robert E. Lee had refused command of the Union army, tendered him by Francis Preston Blair. The sums raised are to go to benefit the Robert E. Lee Memorial house in Virginia.

Blair House Has Objects of Historical Interest.

Mrs. Lewis had often lunched and dined in the Blair house, and found a cabinet filled with cups and plates which had been used by foreign visitors of renown, beginning with Lafayette. Fashionable girls stood in various rooms explaining this and that. One set of occasional chairs had been painted in odd scenic panels by Thomas Fulton, inventor of the steamboat.

Going in, we met a dashing and quite divine blonde, Mrs. McCook Knox, who is one of the toasts of Washington, and one whom women admire greatly. Another divorced belle is Mrs. Campbell Pritchett. A niece of Mrs. Sidney Cloman, she lives with her popular aunt, and her engagement is rumored daily to this and that ambassador or captain of industry. Mrs. Pritchett is pretty, vivacious, and a vivid hostess. I went to her Tuesday cocktail party for the young marrieds, and met over a hundred of these frisky, alluring creatures.

Mrs. Alvin Hert receives of a Sunday afternoon in a magnificent apartment on 16th street, where one meets the great world of Republicans. She lives perhaps more handsomely than any other political hostess, and has a tall, distinguished beauty, and a graciousness that appeals to all ages and sets. At a luxuriously appointed table in the dining room, tea is served by the wife of a well known Vienna conductor, Mrs. Kurt Hetzell. There are tall sheafs of callas and white stocks, big, opulent layer cakes, a gleaming service of silver, and guests seated informally at table.

Cuban Ambassador Gives Outstanding Party of Week.

One of the men present is Clarence Hewes, slim, blond, and bland, a great beau of Washington. He has a bachelor house far out on 16th street, gives perfect dinners, and invites us at once for a large cocktail party in mid-week. "Buzzy" Hewes is a close friend of Edward VIII., and spent August as his guest at Biarritz, where the then prince of Wales had an entire floor for the royal party of guests and equerries. This friendship with the king of England gives a certain added luster to Mr. Hewes' already lustrous personality.

The largest and most gorgeous party of the week was given by the Cuban ambassador, Guillermo Patterson, a charming Latin, in honor of the president-elect of Cuba, Dr. Miguel Gomez, and his wife, Señora de Gomez. The Cuban embassy, far out on 16th street, near embassies of Italy, Poland, and Belgium, is really a vast palace. On the lower floor are offices and cloakrooms from which central marble stairs lead to the state apartments above.

A gay crowd was coming and going when we arrived from the reception Mrs. Hamilton Lewis was holding at the Sulgrave club for the D. A. R.-lings from Illinois. This, too, was a pretty party. Mrs. Lewis had a quota of diplomats to meet the patriotic women, and Mrs. George Burnham, formerly Florence Kennett of Chicago; Mrs. William Baum, and Mrs. Alfred Sze, Chinese ambassadress, were among those present. Mrs. Sze, who had run us across town in her car, looked perfectly charming in black with sables.

Superb Buffet Served in a Gorgeous Dining Room.

As we climbed the stairs at Cuba dancing was on in the ballroom on the garden side, and all the great apartments that circle the embassy were crowded. The ambassador was receiving with his presidential guests, an attractive couple. Señora de Gomez wore sheer black with white orchids. Almost the first person I met was Courtney de Espil, wife of the ambassador from Argentina. She was looking lovely and dressed in black. I was sorry I was not to stay over for the large afternoon gathering the Espils were having on Wednesday for the wedding party of Marianna Dunn and Guy de Baillet.

Up dashed Edward Kulikowski, now second secretary of the Polish embassy. He was in marvelous form. So was his sister, Mme. Joanna de Hiegersberger. The secretary of state, Mrs. Hull, and the entire corps diplomatique were, I think, milling in the gorgeous dining room.

The buffet was superb—long fishes in aspic, salads, ices, champagne, hot dishes, gateaux, bonbons, magnificent flowers.

Astonishing how soon one acquires a circle of acquaintances in Washington! I met the Louis Owsleys who have one of the great houses and beautiful gardens; Demarest Lloyd, the entire Italian embassy group, and the glorious Buzzy Hewes, glossily perfect as if just out of Bond street. And so urbanely nice! The girl standing with me, hearing the orchestra play, "I Got Plenty o' Nothing," invited him to dance. "You believe in direct action," said he. "This is Leap Year," said she.

HAS PART IN BALLET

Joan Husted, lovely sub-deb daughter of the John C. Husteds of Glencoe, was one of the girls taking part in a ballet, "Tales from the Vienna Woods," given recently by the Alicia Pratt dancers for the benefit of the Infant Welfare society. The benefit, held in the Central school auditorium on a Sunday afternoon, attracted an audience that filled the theater. Every one was enthusiastic about the dancing of the dozens of north shore girls who took part, and about the beauty and charm of the costumes.

Paris Pattern Offers Smart Frock for "Fair Weather"

No. 5135—The Paris pattern for this frock is available in sizes 14 and 16, and in 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measurement.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—This Paris pattern, No. 5135, brings you a dress that many persons traveled thousands of miles, and paid a-plenty to get. It is a fair weather frock to wear on any occasion during the warm days that are to come.

The original French model was made of dark blue silk, and the bell shaped sleeves were lined with white, and turned back at the top, as shown, to play up the clear, fresh lining. The small fitted collar also was made of white piqué.

I suggest that you make the pattern up in one of the fresh and charming printed materials that are so plentiful in the stores just now, if you want a dress that will be especially summery, and line the sleeves and make the collar of white silk or piqué. Use bone or pearl buttons, as they launder well, if you make the dress of washable material.

This model will be charming for tennis or other outdoor games, and it may be worn on the street or in the home. It is an all around dress for warm weather.

Society Awaits Frank J. Gould's Return to N. Y.

Has Been a Resident of France for the Last Twenty-Seven Years.

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK

The annual rumor that Frank Jay Gould is about to end his self-imposed exile in France and return to the land of his fathers has cropped up again. But no one seems to know just when the youngest son of old Jay Gould and his svelte, blonde wife will arrive in America, or whether they'll ever occupy the Hudson river country home they purchased two years ago.

Mrs. Gould, the former Florence Lacaze [who is his third wife], has been here twice since the estate at Ardsley-on-Hudson was purchased by Gould agents.

It's been twenty-seven years since Mr. Gould whisked off to France to live, following his divorce from his first wife, the one time Helen Kelly. Since then he has weathered two subsequent marriages, another divorce, and the collapse of his luxurious gaming casinos abroad.

New York Society Library Is Moving.

Just how much of his $10,000,000 inheritance from his father is still intact is a matter for speculation. There are two schools of thought. One declares he's never touched his capital but only his income during all these years, and a second maintains his $5,000,000 losses through the failure of his casino at Nice have seriously nicked the Gould bank roll.

River house, the most luxurious apartment dwelling in the city, is about to lose its richest tenants, Marshall Field and his bride, the former Ruth Pruyn Phipps, and thereby hangs a tale.

It appears that Mrs. Field doesn't care for the home which Marshall provided for his second wife, the former Audrey James Coats of London, and which she furnished so lavishly and strikingly.

So the Fields soon will desert the towering apartment house at 52d street and the East river, and move into a duplex apartment at 740 Park avenue.

The New York Society library, one of New York's hoariest social institutions, is moving. For years it has stood on University place, grimly ignoring the onslaught of lofty buildings and second-hand shops. Now the library can no longer take it, and its officials have purchased the residence of Mrs. John S. Rogers on East 79th street.

Mrs. James Corrigan Visits Palm Beach.

Attaining membership in this library is no mean feat. For generations only the highest and mightiest were privileged to draw books. When society itself moved uptown, the library compromised only enough to purchase a truck that carried books to its subscribers north of 14th street.

Laura Corrigan, when she visited Palm Beach this season, stayed on the gold coast only about seventy-two hours. Mrs. Corrigan had entertained lavishly on her 1935 visit. When she returned in 1936, and the invitations didn't pour in sufficiently fast, she shook the sand out of her sandals and departed.

There's all kinds of speculation in Tuxedo Park as to whether and when Mrs. Rogers will remarry. The prevailing opinion is that after her period of mourning is over she will become Mrs. E. Victor Loew. Mr. Loew is, of course, the perennial beau of Tuxedo Park. Girls have tried to snare him for years without success. He's always been a dear friend of the Rogers family, and no one would be a bit surprised to hear that wedding invitations had been ordered.

E. Victor Loew is the brother of William Goadby Loew, who always makes the best-ten lists of the well dressed.

If you want to see a prime example of the tailor's art, take a peek at E. Victor in November as he drives in his tallyho around Madison Square Garden at the National Horse show. His coaching clothes are worth going miles to see.

Talented Glass Designer Makes Rare Products

"Learn About China Before You Buy," a booklet by Claire Winslow, serves as guide to the woman who wants to know the difference between porcelain and earthenware, and something about the world famous chinawares. Price, 5 cents by mail, 3 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby.

By Claire Winslow.

ONE of the greatest living glass engravers is Emil Krall, whose exquisite, lacelike tracery on crystal goblets, vases and tableware was used in the households of Emperor Franz Josef of Austria, the former Kaiser Wilhelm, the royal family of Siam, and on practically every imperial table in Europe. Members of his family have been craftsmen in this industry since 1648.

Mr. Krall now lives in this country, and is employed by one of our largest manufacturing companies as designer and engraver. This firm is the only American house making and marketing genuine copper wheel engraving. Much of the work done by Emil Krall is performed with a copper wheel the size of a pin head, the rest being accomplished with wheels of average size of 1 to 2 inches in diameter, and so intricate and exacting is the task that he spends from twelve to fourteen days on every goblet of a certain 17th century design. These sell for $1,200 a dozen.

In answer to a demand for copper wheel engraving that can be retailed at a moderate price, Mr. Krall has created a beautiful pattern for a goblet, called Florentine, which is available in a Chicago store, as well as doing a vase, 6 inches wide at the top, to match.

The craftsman tells an interesting story about a commission he once filled for the father of the now ex-king of Siam. This royal personage ordered four goblets to bear the seal or crest of his country engraved on the bowl. The size, however, of this work was not to exceed that of a silver dollar, and yet was to show two mountains with the sun coming up between them, three elephants, and a tiger!

Mr. Krall, who was a young man then, was forced to use copper wheels back of magnifying glasses which caused these tiny disks to appear 4 inches in diameter. He completed the four goblets in a little less than a year, and they were proclaimed his masterpieces.

His work here has been recognized by the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. Mr. Von Nessen was chosen to interpret the modern trend of styling in glassware, and Mr. Krall to execute his design.

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

By Eleanor Nangle

Permanent Wave Is Lovely and Thoughtful Present to Give on Mother's Day.

"GIVE her a permanent for Mother's day!"

How's that for a brain wave? We wish we'd thought of it first, but we must confess that a smarter woman than we are gave us the idea. The more we walk around it and inspect it from all points of view the better it seems to us.

Mother's point of view is the most important one, and certainly you can see the advantages for her. A permanent wave right now will set her up for the summer, make her look and feel a good many years young, which, psychologically, makes it just about perfect for the woman who is as tired and worn as most mothers are.

Most Beauty Shops Make Out Gift Certificates.

We think it's this feature that appeals to us most of all. We're firmly convinced that the gift which bolsters up glamor and the feeling of well being always is the gift dearest to the feminine heart. The woman who denies herself all beauty luxuries is the one who'll get the biggest bang out of such a gift, and if we know anything about most nice mothers, they're notoriously inclined to pass up such peaches and plums as permanents and perfumes if there is a shortage of money and a sufficiency of children around the house. If any women deserves to be given the lift to the spirits and the added physical charm which improved appearance inevitably carries in its wake,

"Give her a permanent for Mother's day!" It will make her look and feel years younger, and its charms will be retained for months to come.

the hard working mother of a household does.

At most beauty shops now you can get a gift certificate, made out either for a certain amount or for a special service. Follow through on this permanent idea if you want to make next Sunday a memorable Mother's day for your own mother. There's subtle flattery in your choice of a gift of beauty, "sweets to the sweet" motif, if you get what we mean.

We can positively guarantee that she will be thrilled at the choice. And the success of the permanent can be guaranteed if you will follow our oft-repeated and loudly screamed warning: patronize a good shop. See that the gift certificate or the permanent itself is purchased at a shop of good reputation and at a reasonable, not a low price.

Cheap Permanent Especially Hazardous for White Hair.

The cheap permanent is too expensive to play with on a great many counts. And for white hair this great beauty truth goes double.

The shop where the permanent is obtained should be one well managed and well established, where equipment is of the best and the operators completely competent. A lot more than electricity goes into the successful permanent. Patience, experience, skill, time, and professional honesty play the greatest part in the modern miracle of putting waves in mother's hair.

Eleanor Nangle, "through her looking glass," sees everything that is new in the fascinating realm of beauty aids, and tells you about them daily in the Chicago Tribune.

When Chicago Was Young

The Elegant Eighties

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, March 8, 1887.

DEAR JULIA: How sad the death of Henry Ward Beecher is! So sudden! He was, of course, an old man . . . . seventy-four . . . but he had been so active and energetic, I had not thought of him as nearing the end of life. It was beautiful that he could go so quickly, without much suffering. But America has lost one of her great men.

We have been talking of him today . . . of his boldness and independence of thought, defying tradition, and blazing fresh paths through our political and economic problems. It was an extraordinary power he exerted over the minds and consciences of his fellow men. Wasn't his very presence stimulating? Sitting behind him at a lecture here in Chicago, not long ago, I was conscious that an unusual person was before me, though I could not see him well because of the people in the row in front. Then suddenly some one came to ask him to sit on the platform, and as he stood to follow the messenger I saw his fine head. People applauded as he made his way to the platform.

I'm glad now to remember that enthusiastic welcome. The scandal which brought criticism on him in the '70s . . . unjust criticism, I am sure . . . cast a cloud over his life. I was indignant when I read in the morning paper that a group of clergymen refused to send a telegram of sympathy to his family. Another body of clergymen . . . the Methodists, and may their tribe increase! . . . did send such a telegram. So did President Cleveland. Of course, he should have done so, for Mr. Beecher, as you remember, repudiated the Republican party in 1884 and spoke on behalf of Cleveland.

I hear that his famous sister, Harriet Beecher Stowe, is so ill she hasn't been told of his death. They were much attached to one another. What a family that was! All of them were liberals. All contributed much to their country.

We had apple pie for luncheon today, and Will said he remembered something Mr. Beecher had written in praise of that typically New England dish. He hunted until he found it . . . in "Eyes and Ears." I had to laugh as we read, thinking that it would have been more seemly, perhaps, to have recalled some noble passage in his sermons, or one of his impassioned addresses on the abolition of slavery. But this is delicious. See if you don't think so.

"Some people think anything will do for pies. But the best for eating is the best for cooking. . . . Who would put into a pie any apple but the spitzenburgh, that had that? Off with their jackets! Fill the great wooden bowl with the sound rogues!"

After enumerating the various forms of apple pie, he proceeds: "It will accept almost every flavor of every spice. And yet nothing is so fatal to the rare and higher graces of apple pie as inconsiderate and vulgar spicing. It is not meant to be a mere vehicle for the exhibition of these spices in their own natures. It is a glorious unity in which sugar gives up its nature as sugar, and butter ceases to be butter, and each flavorsome spice gladly evanishes from its own full nature, that all of them, by a common death, may rise into the new life of an apple pie. Not that apple is longer apple! It, too, is transformed and the final pie, though born of apple, sugar, butter, nutmeg, cinnamon, and lemon, is like none of these, but the compound ideal of them all, refined, purified, and by fire, fixed in blissful perfection."

Isn't that good? Will calls it a perfect description of our great American dessert.

The writer goes on to say that the life of an apple pie is brief. Its span is but twelve hours. "It reaches its highest state about one hour after it comes from the oven, and just before its natural heat has departed," says he, in conclusion, "and after it is one day old it is thenceforward but the ghastly corpse of apple pie." All of which is gospel truth. Much love, dear Julia,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

FOOTNOTES.

Henry Ward Beecher [1813-'87], reckoned as America's most influential minister, was one of the famous children of Lyman Beecher. A graduate of Amherst college and of Lane seminary, he became pastor of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, where he remained for almost forty years. In 1863 he delivered a series of speeches in behalf of abolition of slavery, and though mobs tried to shout him down, his tremendous vitality enabled him to tire them out. He edited the Independent and the Christian Union, religious papers, which exercised much influence on American thought.

Relations of A. D. Fitsworth, recently mentioned in this column, have written us about this pioneer. Owner of a tailoring establishment, he is said to have made Lincoln's inaugural suit.

A number of readers have sent us concluding lines for the British Sovereign's rime. The best, because of its brevity, as well as its conformity to the original, seems to us to be the following:

Seventh Edward, Fifth George, he whose praises we sing;
And now the Eighth Edward . . . the debonair king. R. L. H.

We are always glad to hear from readers. Address Herma Clark, care of CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Makers Claim New Cleaner Is Easy on Hands

TO the average housewife the most enticing of the various inducements offered by the maker of a new cleaning powder is the promise of gentle treatment of hands and arms. Many cleaning powders, while excellent for scouring and scraping, are almost too effective in their cleaning action unless the hands of the user are protected by rubber gloves. The manufacturer of this particular product explains the nonabrasive virtue of his powder as due to its lack of lye, sal soda, ammonia, oxalic acid, grit, or other irritating elements.

Most grocers are now carrying this powdered cleanser, which is said to clean everything from the baby's bottle to the garage floor, and do it quickly and efficiently without roughening or reddening the skin of the user.

It may be utilized for washing dishes and kitchen utensils, washing clothes by hand or machine, and cleaning refrigerators, gas stoves, and sinks. One tablespoon of the powder in hot water will clean floors and walls of marble, tile, linoleum, or rubber without discoloring them, and will leave a nonslippery surface. It freshens and brightens painted surfaces without discoloration or streaking, and, if properly used, does not injure either paint or varnish. Windows, mirrors, and other glassware may be cleaned without cloudy, telltale marks, leaving a clear and brilliant surface. In short, this product may be used for almost all ordinary cleaning purposes, and boasts particularly of the fact that small portions of the powder are necessary for effective results.

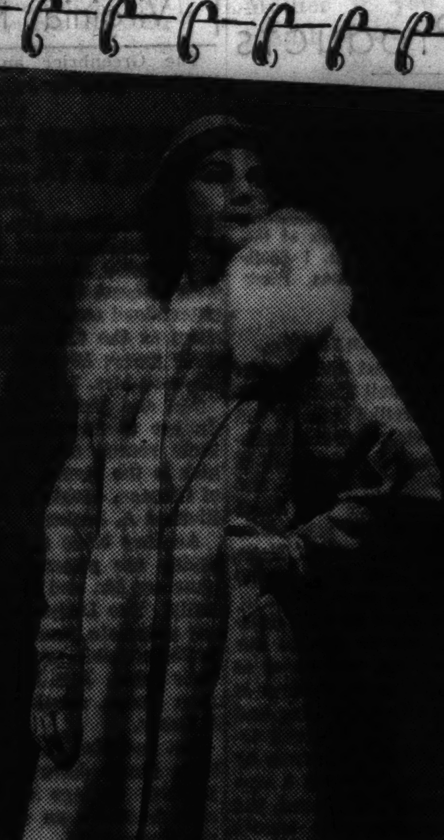
THIS is the season to look at your flower pots and see if they are properly freshened up for the months ahead. Ledges, porch rails, and balconies are all inviting spots for rows of pretty flower pots.

No matter how ordinary looking such a pot may be, it can be converted into something quite dashing and gay by a coat or two of colorful enamel. Give it a good scrubbing first, before the paint process starts. Then finish pot and saucer inside and out, except on the bottom. This should be left porous on both sides!



For pure, unadulterated Summer elegance! The fur is none but the finest fox in all foxdom. The coat is only the richest, softest and fleeciest of woolens. In turquoise, maize, egg-shell and white. $79.50.

Color Fashion Highlight for Spring Bride

Paris Introduces Bouquet of Floral Shades Into the Procession Picture.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Lucien Lelong's lilac bride's dress, with a variegated bouquet of accompanying bridesmaids' dresses, has influenced spring weddings to imitate the old-fashioned flower garden. Brides in flower shades, and their attendants wearing bouquet colors like blue, pink, red, and yellow—the whole range in one procession—give bridal fashions a new color palette. Weddings are gay along with the rest of the styles.

Bridal bouquets this season dip into variety also and come in mixed flowers. Sheafs of white lilacs and calla lilies carried loosely have been used by two smart brides in Paris. Old fashioned bouquets crowding orange blossoms, lilies, and roses together inside a ruffle of paper lace, and carried by a silver wand, are 1936 floral accompaniments to the wedding march. The bride-to-be gets together with the florist and mixes her own bouquet—any flowers she prefers.

White Satin Still First Choice of Many Brides.

Wedding gowns follow the styles in silhouette, but they are made of many different materials. A glorified shirtwaist frock of brocaded satin with a long skirt as Vionnet does them was worn by one of the most glamorous brides this year. Another bride wore heavy, chalk white cloky lace with a tulle veil for her day of days. White satin is still the first choice of many brides, and white crêpe a favorite. Lace wedding veils are worn by many of the new brides of 1936, and tulle veils no less. White chiffon, finely plaited, with the high empire waistline, is a new style wedding gown idea, with a flowing veil of the chiffon. Silk organdy also makes chic bridal dresses this spring. The bride chooses a pale, flower color for her dress and veil, or she wears white in the good old fashioned way.

Feet along the bridal path step forward to the altar in slippers that belong to this season. They are high on the insteps and minus at the sides. Satin slippers and slippers made of the stuff of the wedding dress are the smartest, worn with sheer, pale stockings.

Flower Headdress Popular This Season.

The headdress that holds the veil is of A-1 importance to the bride this summer. Flower headdresses are very much in vogue. Lanvin's silver headdresses, made of heavy silver lotus leaves, are tops for the smartest brides. Juliet caps, made of pearl filet and studded with orange blossoms, have been worn by brides in Paris this spring.

The bride who doesn't wear a formal, trained wedding dress may wear a hat of the exciting new chiffon straw, and have both hat and veil in one, for the brim drops to the shoulders as a veil, or is thrown back as a hat. A garland of silver grapes from Reboux, with a short veil hanging from the back, is another of the new bride's headdresses that Paris has designed for June weddings. Schiaparelli's tiara of wax tube roses, with matching bracelets of the same flowers, was worn by one of the aristocratic brides of April.

The bridal gown, when the wedding is in a church, has a train, or one may wear a queenly trailing cape of silver over a floor length gown. Molyneux's bride's dress with a pointed train, which he made for Mlle. Madeleine de Tinan, set a fashion in trains for brides this season.

It is made of white, lusterless silk crêpe with a severely simple bodice, draped high around the neckline, and having sleeves that fall over the hands. The skirt is accordion plaited from the hipline, being cut circular, and has a very long pointed train. A chaplet of leaves, made of the material of the gown, holds the tulle veil. The bride carries an ivory prayer book, and wears a long crêpe silk sash at her waistline.

Lanvin's stunning silver headdress, made of lotus leaves welded together, is used to hold a bridal veil of lace. This, with a simple bride's dress, is stunning.

Bridge Problem

The bidding (both sides vulnerable):

South	West	North	East

(1) The profusion of tens and nines makes this bid the best available.

West opens the seven of hearts. How can South make his contract, inasmuch as the diamond suit is blocked?

ANSWER: South wins first lead with the heart king and returns the jack of hearts. If West runs heart suit, declarer discards his blocking nine of diamonds. If West cashes only two heart tricks, South can then afford to pass a diamond into East's hand.

By Ely Culbertson

EVEN very good players have difficulty in grasping the salient truth that both offensive and defensive technique must vary according to the objective: i. e., the number of tricks needed to fulfill or defeat a contract.

At contracts for only one and two odd the usual trump conversation and suit establishment tactics must often be abandoned by the declarer in favor of deliberate self-ruffing-down process. High-card tricks should be cashed as quickly as possible and low trumps utilized to the fullest extent.

Since this is declarer's proper plan, it follows that the defenders should adopt one diametrically opposite. Their objective will not allow them to "weaken" declarer by forcing him to ruff; too often this scheme is consummated only after seven or eight tricks have been conceded.

I am well aware of the apparent inconsistency of prescribing different measures of play for the same hand. Obviously it is logical to say that declarer and defenders should amass all the tricks they respectively can. The inconsistency results from the fact that bridge is not played double dummy; the number of winning and losing tricks cannot always be predetermined, and therefore lines of play must be aimed not so much at a theoretical maximum as at the practical goal of contract.

Let us examine a perfectly ordinary hand from two different viewpoints:

♥ 6 5 3 2
♦ A K J 2
♣ A 8 4

WEST — EAST

Opening lead. ♥ K

SOUTH
♠ A K J 7 5

First we will assume that South is playing a four-spade contract. A count of possible losing tricks leads us to the conclusion that aggressive measures—and considerable luck—are imperative. There are two hearts, two diamonds, and an indeterminate number of trumps that may be lost; our problem is to reduce these to three tricks if possible. Pressing this line of inquiry, we see that successful trump and club finesses offer the best opportunity, and we proceed to play the hand on that plan. Its success, of course, depends entirely on the adverse lie of cards.

Now let us suppose that because of a part score we have contracted for only two spades—eight tricks. With this radical change of objective there must be an equally radical change of technique. Now, instead of counting losers and trying to reduce them to three, we will find the more direct method of counting winners effective. We see that in top cards we have two trumps, one heart, two diamonds, and one club—a total of six. Our only concern should be to win two additional tricks, and our only problem where to find them. In this connection we recognize the fact that a finesse is at best a fifty-fifty chance, and therefore we cast our eyes about for a surer plan. So we come to the proper line of play: the cashing of dummy's ace and king of diamonds, the ruffing of a third round, entering dummy with the club ace, and leading the fourth diamond in the hope that East will not follow and that we can safely ruff with a low trump. If East does follow, which means that West will not, to avoid the danger of an overruff we discard a club and maneuver for a trump lead up to our tenace. At the worst we can always finesse against the trump queen if the lead comes through us.

To sum up, it is apt to point out that, as in a foot race, the pace must be gauged by the distance!

One of the most remarkable and most amusing hands that I have ever seen came up in the grand national tournament of the United States Bridge association last month. The fantastic distribution of cards acted as a scythe, cutting down every player that sat in the South position. The hand is strongly reminiscent of one that, as legend has it, used to be dealt on trains by nimble-fingered gentlemen who had picked up strangers for "a sociable game to while away the time."

Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding varied at the different tables, with the final contracts ranging from a conservative four spades to an overoptimistic six spades redoubled. In the latter cases the carnage was terrible!

West, at every table, opened the heart king. Dummy's ace was played and East ruffed. When the club return was ruffed by West, all the South declarers let out a loud gasp. West cashed the heart queen and East discarded the diamond king. And on the next lead South had his singleton ace of diamonds ruffed away! Another club ruff and the loss of the trump ace left the declarers speechless. They had made exactly seven tricks on a hand that looked cold for five odd! Those teams that had bid six and redoubled were down 2,800 points. Very likely they offered up thanks that they were not playing rubber bridge!

Today's Question

Question: Please give the correct bidding on the following North and South hand. Both sides vulnerable. East dealt and passed. As may be imagined, East and West never entered the bidding.

SOUTH
♠ K Q J 6 5
♥ A K 7
♦ 7 3 2
♣ A 6

NORTH
♥ Q
♦ A K Q 5
♣ K J 9 7 3

Answer: The bidding should go as follows:

South	North
1 spade	3 clubs
3 spades	4 diamonds
4 no trump	5 no trump
7 spades

Having located the other two aces, and on the knowledge that North has two good suits, South correctly figures that his 4½ honor tricks should make a grand slam "cold."

May Is Month of Important Art Exhibits

Scholarship Awards to Close the Season at Art Institute School.

By Eleanor Jewett.

THE three most imposing exhibitions to be held in May, judging from the standpoint of number of entries, are the third spring salon of the All Illinois of Fine Arts, the Chicago No-Jury Society of Artists, and the annual school exhibit of the Art institute. The first of these open on May 16, the All-Illinois at the Stevens hotel, and the No-Jury at the Fair store. The Art institute school exhibition opens May 21.

The jury for the All-Illinois show has been announced as consisting of Adam Emory Albright, Florence Wilkins Furst, Axel Linus, Charles H. Kinghan, and this writer. The No-Jury obviously has no such list of defensive names limiting the output of its contributing artists. However, some annoyance has been caused by artists sending in work for this exhibit without accompanying their entry with the dues of $2.50, which is an inescapable obligation. Membership dues of $2.50 must be mailed to the Chicago No-Jury Society of Artists, fifth floor, picture department, the Fair, State and Adams streets, Chicago, before May 5, by artists intending to exhibit in the show opening May 16 on the eighth floor of the Fair. Robert C. Zuppke, famous football coach, is exhibiting this year.

News of Interest to Lovers of Art.

The high light of the final weeks of the Art institute school year is the interest and anticipation in and for those students who shall win the several splendid scholarships offered each spring. This year there are four traveling fellowships to be awarded. Thirteen students have been selected to enter the finals. The fellowships are the Edward L. Ryerson Traveling fellowship of $1,500, the James Nelson Raymond Foreign Traveling fellowship of not less than $2,000, the Anna Louise Raymond Foreign Traveling fellowship of $1,500, and the John Quincy Adams fellowship of $1,500.

Another May exhibition which may be looked forward to with delight is that of recent paintings by Frank Vining Smith, opening Wednesday, May 6, in the Anderson galleries, South Michigan avenue.

The Palette and Chisel Academy of Fine Arts, 1012 North Dearborn street, has an excellent show of black and white prints and drawings in its gallery. The finest is a portrait of Mrs. Bertha E. Jaques by N. P. Steinberg. Mr. Steinberg's "Solo" is a clever sketch. Frank Beatty gives several well handled landscapes with buildings—"Scout Camp," "Camp Supper," and "The Corner Store." Karl C. Brandner exercises his customery sensitive touch in "The Well House." "A Prayer," by Sam Buyer, is little less than lovely, and "Here's to You," by Maurice Greenberg, also deserves praise. Fred T. Larson offers "Barnyard in Winter," one of the exhibit's nicest color sketches.

The Cordon club, Fine Arts building, is showing to May 9 a fascinating diversified exhibit of paintings by member artists. Frances Badger has a jolly, modern sketch with an entrancing child in bright pink in the foreground. It is called "The Green House." Flora Schofield shows "Reclining Nude," a gracefully and delicately drawn figure. May H. Gilruth pictures an intriguing family in "Study." Katherine Wolcott offers a number of travel notes charmingly sketched in warm, low colors. "Still Life," by Julia T. Turner, is an interesting study of animal life. Mary R. Greene invests her "Old London Houses" with charm.

Anna Lynch makes one think of fretted jewels in the beautiful "Spanish Church" interior. Susan W. Peabody takes us to the seashore, and an informal romp with children in "Moated Castle." Carolyn Tyler interests us in "Alaskan Village," and Marie Blanke dazzles us with her white "Datura." Lucie Hartrath shows "The Parsonage," charmingly painted as are all her pictures. Matilda Vanderpoel offers several portraits of which No. 26 remains longest in memory.

The Swedish American Art association is holding its 18th exhibit in the Marshall Field galleries to May 9. The exhibit is a little flat—it almost seems these artists were resting on past laurels. The best painting is the "Little Back Yard," by Mary C. Peterson, a fluent and graceful composition of flowers, river, figures, and building. Miss Peterson invariably may be counted upon to raise the standard of any show she enriches with a picture.

E. L. Bloomster apparently is trying a new type of marine and gives us "Bathers and Surf," a stretch of water marked at the margin by the introduction of two nudes. The breaking crest of wave is a little granite-like, and the composition seems a trifle forced. It may be that the wrench from a ship to flesh is what troubles us, or again the fault may lie not so much in association as in present performance.

Frederick Remahl shows "Chicago River Scene," a neat, formal, and amusingly prim picture—one type of modern painting. Another type is discovered in "Rural Fantasy," by Karl Gasslander. Pattern and color are attractive, barring the artichoke field to the left in the foreground. That unbalances the swift flight of imaginative work which carries the center block of geometric shapes disguised as houses.

The most modern picture, a jerky, blue-green bit of violence, "Washington Square," by Grace Spongberg, was awarded the $100 prize, and will be sent to the Vaxsjo Memorial collection in Sweden. Those who know the collection phophesy that "Washington Square" will be as conspicuous there as would a tin whistle blown across the melody of violins. Robert Carlson shows a decorative "Hibiscus" and Carl Olsen a smoothly handled "Composition." The "Mary Decasteron," by Agnes V. Froman, ranks with Miss Peterson's "Little Back Yard" in being one of the finest contributions to the show.

Water colors by Vaughn R. Shoemaker were placed on view yesterday in the O'Brien gallery, 673 North Michigan avenue, to continue to May 16. Morris Henry Hobbs, whose etchings are shown in this gallery, has just been awarded the $100 prize for the most meritorious work in the Toledo Print exhibition.

An exhibit of modern water colors, crayon drawings, and etchings are on view in the d'Arlier gallery, 639 North Michigan avenue.

Petras Rimsa, noted Lithuanian sculptor, is exhibiting his work in the Sherman hotel to May 6.

An exhibition of paintings by Frank C. Peyraud and Elizabeth K. Peyraud opens tomorrow at the Edgewater Beach hotel to continue to May 18.

Aaron Bohrod, who recently was awarded a Guggenheim fellowship of $2,000 for a year of travel and painting, is leaving Chicago soon. He is holding an exhibit of his water colors and oils in his studio, 2406 North Clark street, rear, before he goes. The exhibit will run for possibly two weeks, and affords a splendid opportunity for picking up some delightful things. Mr. Bohrod is noted for his charming water colors. His lapses into harsh realities, which have been shown in the Art institute and other galleries, do not prevent him from having and exercising a sensitive color sense on many occasions.

Miniatures by Emma Hess Ingersoll of the Pennsylvania Society of Miniature Painters may be seen in the studio of Mrs. Robert S. Larimer, 2019 Sherman avenue, Evanston, into June. Mrs. Ingersoll will be in Chicago in June to fulfill a numb^r of commissions. Her work is fascinating and delightfully true.

FOREST SCENE

"Virgin Timber, Wisconsin," by Florence White Williams, to be found in the current exhibition at the Chicago galleries, 220 North Michigan avenue. John Spelman, Eugenie Glamen, and Julius Moessel are the other artists represented. The exhibition closes May 9.

Oak Planting Is New Vogue Among English

Gradual Disappearance of British Symbol Stirs Wave of Reforestation.

By Ann Whittingham.

LONDON—The oak, that beloved symbol of British solidity, slowly is disappearing from the English countryside. Many forests have become mere groups of lone trees, and most of the few remaining real forests are being handed over to the national trust for preservation.

The gradual disappearance of that stalwart symbol has started a vogue for planting oaks, and many an Englishman now fills his pockets with acorns and as he goes for a walk he plants them in the hedgerows. This in the patriotic hope that the British navy never shall want for British Oak.

It is the 20th century expression of the same idea that led all the churches in the time of Queen Elizabeth to plant yew trees in the churchyards. Many tourists have noticed it. The trees now seem typical and decorative.

At one time the supply of yews became so depleted that a tax of yews was put on Spanish wine. Just so many "yew staves" were required to accompany each cask of Spanish wine. The history of yeomanry shows, however, that the Spanish yews were so superior to English yews that the importation became permanent and the English yew was allowed to serve its decorative purpose.

The amateur planting of oaks in hedgerows follows a more organized plan tried in the south of France a few years ago. Following a series of fires which had ravaged the forest regions of Cote Varoise, the Syndicat d'Initiative de Toulon hit on the idea of presenting to visitors and tourists a packet of pine seeds, with the request that they would sow them on their forest rambles with the hope of restoring for future years the vanished beauty of the countryside.

Bangkok Taxes Powers of Pen to Describe It

"Tourists' Paradise" Is Hackneyed Expression, but Fits Siamese City.

By Mason Warner.

BANGKOK, Siam.—The distance from Singapore to Bangkok is approximately 1,200 miles. Half the distance is covered by the Federated Malay States railways. From Padang Besar, on the Siamese southern frontier, you travel on the smooth running trains of the Royal State railways of Siam. Miles and miles of rubber plantations are passed, punctuated by tin mines.

Street scenes in Siam are more than interesting. They present a mixture of Chinese and Malayan costumes and background that compose a continuous panoramic series of intriguing pictures. The women have a clever way of wrapping their sarongs so as to form trousers instead of skirts. The Siamese are a courteous and gracious people, kindly and helpful to the stranger in their midst.

There's Only One Phrase to Describe It.

I hate to use that hackneyed expression, "tourists' paradise," but—I ask those who have been there—what other descriptive phrase applies to Bangkok? Here you encounter a blending of all that is most fascinating in the old and new of the far east.

In Bangkok are places and temples of surpassing loveliness, sacred white elephants, a canal and river market unlike anything else in the world, sacred monkeys, inordinate wealth, and depressing poverty, and a colossal reclining Buddha, the largest in the world, 162 feet long and 39 feet high, made of bricks covered with cement. The soles of the feet are adorned with inlaid pearl designs. The statue was formerly overlaid with gold. But, alas, the sleeping Buddha has gone off the gold standard and the display of lavish opulence has given way to modern conditions and reduced income. Large, bare patches of cement make the huge and imposing statue decidedly commonplace. It is big, yes—but——

Fantastic Capital of Picturesque Country.

If one is allowed only a single adjective to describe Bangkok, all he can say is that city is "different!" and ask special permission to use the exclamation point. In this fantastic city, capital of a picturesque nation, past ages are blended with the present, although Bangkok is of quite recent origin, only 150 years old. Ayuthia was the capital of Siam from 1350 A. D. to 1782, but the Burmese smashed Ayuthia to smithereens and King Rama I. fled to the spot where Bangkok now stands and established his court here.

Siam has a population of less than 12,000,000 and let us hope that American tax leviers never will learn the methods by which the Siamese revenue collectors gathered the enormous funds that were expended in the magnificent royal palaces and gorgeous temples that adorn Bangkok. But old Rama I., Rama II., Rama III., and Rama IV. found ways to assess the rice growers, the tin miners, the teakwood lumbermen, the coconut planters, and the fishermen in ways that proved practical, if not painless, and so Bangkok stands today a moving picture director's ideal, an unbelievable dream of theatrical extravaganza and of spectacular, yet elegant, architectural and color effects.

Japan Worries Great Britain.

The last of the Rama kings of Siam [VI.] died Nov. 26, 1925, and was succeeded by King Prajadhipok, not unknown in the United States, and now in retirement in England, having abdicated his throne. His renouncing of the throne brought about another delicate situation in international politics.

Prajadhipok was friendly to Great Britain. The present regent and dictator favors Japan. There is talk even of cutting a canal through the Malayan peninsula so that Japanese shipping will not have to pass through Singapore. But Burma [British] splits with Siam the Malayan peninsula 300 miles to the south, and the canal would have to be dug beyond the southern tip of Burma and so close to Singapore that it would result in no great economic saving. It would be worth about as much commercially as the proposed canal across Florida.

The Emerald Buddha Is Not Emerald.

Rama I. [1782-1809] built the imposing and gorgeous royal palace and the Temple of the Emerald Buddha [Wat Phra Keo]. To say that these two architectural achievements are surpassingly brilliant and radiant is praise that falls short of their due. The outer walls and the prangs [spires] are embellished with small glazed tiles tessellated in checkered mosaics that gleam and sparkle in the bright sunshine like precious stones and gems of purest rays. The whole exterior effect is one of dazzling splendor.

The "emerald Buddha" is really cut from clear green jasper and is about 26 inches high. There is little doubt that the statue was carved in Ceylon in the fourteenth century. Its history from 1436 is well authenticated, and the sacred image played an important rôle in many wars for its possession.

Rama I. brought the emerald Buddha to Bangkok, built the temple, and surrounded it with solid gold images of Buddhas, elephants, and sacred idols in such number that it seems as if Siam can go back to the gold standard any time the ruling power cares to order the melting of the precious statues and the coining of ticuls and bahts.

Another Marvel to Behold.

Siam was an absolute monarchy until Prajadhipok changed the form of government to its present more liberal and democratic form. The revered, if not sainted, King Chulalongkorn [Rama V.] ruled from 1868 to 1910, and it was in this period that Siamese architecture, art, poetry, and drama reached their highest development.

It was Chulalongkorn who built Wat Benchamabopitr, that beautiful temple of choicest white marble from Carrara in Italy. It is rightly called "a jewel among glorious temples." The grounds are adorned with graceful bronze figures and stone images of strange mien and extraordinary physiognomy, and yet they do not appear unnatural.

Siam is the livest center of Buddhism in all Asia, and in this temple is a corridor containing more than fifty bronze statues of Buddha, in sitting and standing postures, representing Asian art from Persia to Japan.

Finally, while wandering about the spacious landscaped precincts of the marble temple, the visitor meanwhile lost in wonder and amazement, he encounters a whimsical anti-climax. There are the sacred white elephants and the sacred monkeys—and a guard informs him he can feed the elephants sugar cane and the monkeys peanuts if he will invest about 5 cents [United States] in the necessary food. Well, would it be nice to refuse the offer?

White Bass Fete at Oshkosh Set to Start May 15

OSHKOSH, Wis. — Millions of white bass, soon to run up the Wolf river to their spawning grounds, will draw thousands of fishermen to this city for the first annual white bass festival, opening May 15.

A natural phenomenon peculiar to this region and comparable in many ways to the spawning run of salmon in west coast streams, the white bass run has for years attracted fishermen from Wisconsin as well as from neighboring states. For all except a few weeks of the year the bass live in Lake Winnebago, one of the largest fresh water lakes in the United States. Each year, as the old timers say, when the thorn apple trees are in blossom, the fish leave Lake Winnebago and move up the lower reaches of Wolf river, through a chain of lakes and rivers extending 15 miles or more west and north of this city. They travel just below the surface of the water, are so plentiful that at times the water seems literally alive with them, and are so easily caught that some fishermen even forego the use of bait and take them with bare hooks.

Some weeks later, when the bass run down the river and back into Winnebago, they swim close to the bottom and are very difficult to catch.

The great number caught year after year seems to have had no effect on the number of fish in the annual migration. B. O. Webster, chief of the division of fisheries of the state conservation department, explains this by pointing out that there are doubtless millions of white bass in Lake Winnebago and that they are prolific breeders. They grow to weigh about a pound.

DETOURS

By Frederic Babcock.

TULIP time has come once more to Holland. From Haarlem to Leiden the whole region is one vast flower garden, set in a network of canals. Great heaps of the blossoms are piled at the corners of each plot of land, for all the flowers must be picked if the bulbs are to mature properly. Thousands of them are sold, their owners taking them to market by boat, but they represent only a small part of the whole harvest.

One of Netherlands' fascinating sights at this time of the year is the market of a tulip town, such as Aalsmeer. There the market hall is so built that canals flow through the center, and boats loaded with blooms, vegetables, and fruit float directly into it. Everything is auctioned off early in the morning; then many of the flowers are loaded into trucks and rushed to the nearest airport, where they are put on planes for distribution throughout Europe.

● This spring would be an appropriate time to visit Holland and to look into the history of one of its leading industries. It was just 300 years ago that the "tulip mania," or rage in speculating in the bulbs, reached its height. Then, on April 27, 1636, the mania was suddenly stopped by a government proclamation which invalidated all contracts in connection with the trading.

Rare specimens, varieties which long before had passed out of vogue, were sought after so much at the time that they were dealt with on the stock exchanges of leading cities, and people sold homes and lands in order to invest in tulips. A single bulb of the most famous variety of the day, the Semper Augustus, a white flower with red markings, sold for 5,500 florins, which at the time were worth about $1,850. When the crash came, thousands of persons were left almost penniless, and the economic balance of the nation was upset for years. But the craze for tulips survived, so that eventually Holland became the great bulb growing center.

● The tulip country has other attractions, once the spring flowers are gone. One of the most interesting is a drive to the dunes along the North sea. At first one passes through flat, fertile country, but later into a region of villas, the country homes of Amsterdam business men. The Hollander is highly pleased with his rural estate, and he is not backward about saying so. Often as not his place is called the Dutch equivalent of "My Desire Is Satisfied," "Pleasure and Rest," "Rustic Enjoyment," "Not So Bad," or "Large Enough."

Up the coast from Haarlem is Alkmaar, home of one of the Netherlands' famous cheese markets. This market is held every Friday morning, but cheeses for it start coming in Thursday afternoon. Greased until they fairly shine, they are piled in orderly heaps in the square. When the bargaining is over the following morning, the guild of cheese porters—men dressed in white suits with lackered straw hats of green, blue, yellow, or red—cart the cheeses off to the weighhouse, and, almost before the visiting tourist realizes what is going on, the square is clear once more.

England Greets Summer's Dawn with Much Elan

MAY DAY, the dawn of summer, is celebrated in England by many picturesque ceremonies, some of them dating back to pagan times, and most of them quite as alien to the American mind as the mysticism of the Druids.

While an ancient Latin service, which is said to have originated as a requiem mass for the soul of King Henry VII., rolls from the top of Magdalen tower at Oxford, and from the Bargate at Southampton at 6 in the morning, the streets of the little Cornish town of Padstow know again the fearsome-looking hobby horse—part of a still more ancient May day celebration.

The Padstow celebration begins at midnight, April 30, and the following day the whole population joins in, many of them in strange and grotesque costumes with flowers in their hats. Throughout the day the frolic continues in the streets, the horse making wild rushes wherever the crowd is thickest, and bumping against the women "for luck."

Another famous celebration, the Furry dance, takes place at Helston May 8. Here the celebrants, the men in top hats and morning coats, the women in their best frocks and led by a brass band, traverse the town, jigging in through the front doors of the houses and out by the back.

Most of the May ceremonies are accompanied by songs proclaiming the coming of summer, and they all symbolize the resurrection of the life spirit in nature. The revelers, the streets and the houses are decorated with flowers, leaves and green boughs. In ancient times it was believed that the spirit of life in these was transferred to the celebrants. Hence the leaf and flower covered Jack-o'-the-Green and Queen of the May. The ceremonies were really rituals invoking the blessing of the god of growth and fertility.

Many English villages still have their Maypoles, and London still crowns its May queen, while at Knutsford, in Cheshire, a great procession contains all of the characters traditionally associated with May. Despite the invective of the Puritans against the Maypole, which they called a "stinkying ydol," the "Merrie Englande" of pagan and early Saxon times lives again in May.

The oldest botanic garden in the new world is the principal attraction. It was established in 1763, and it was to obtain breadfruit tree specimens for it in 1787 that the British naval vessel, the Bounty, sailed to the South seas, where the famous mutiny took place. Eventually Capt. Bligh of the Bounty returned to St. Vincent with 530 choice specimens for the garden.

Travel Fancies Turn to Europe in Springtime

Many Chicagoans Leave for Lengthy Tours Among Old World Scenes.

IN the merry month of May the traveler's fancy turns to Europe. The beginning of the month saw a number of Chicagoans leaving for extended tours of the continent and the British Isles.

Miss Anne Whitmack and Mrs. ollo Gullickson sailed Friday on the American Banker for London. After visiting there Miss Whitmack will tour the Scandinavian countries, while Mrs. Gullickson will travel through England, France, Italy, Switzerland, Germany and Austria. The Misses Caroline and Elizabeth McTavish left on the same ship, to stay in Scotland until November. Also aboard were John Merryweather and Miss nger Petrie. Miss Mary Sheahan sailed Thursday on the Newport News.

Miss Bertha French, who embarked yesterday on the Vulcania, will start her European vacation at Naples, and then travel through Italy, Switzerland, Germany, France, Belgium, Holland, England, and Ireland. Mrs. Agnes Hooper and her daughters, Agnes and Mariam, will stay aboard the ship until it reaches Venice. From there they will make an extensive tour of the continent. Mr. and Mrs. Karl Krowther will also debark at Venice, to spend the summer in the Dolomites and the Austrian Tyrol. Fellow pasengers on the Vulcania are Miss Bessie Breyer, who will travel through Italy and France; Miss Agnes Schuette, F. P. Mueller, and Mrs. G. B. McCarthy, who will tour Sicily, Italy, and the Balkans.

Bound for the Mediterranean.

Dr. A. J. Falletti, Mrs. Faye K. aberman, Miss Daisy Driss, and Miss Olive Harestad, all of Chicago, and Mrs. Emily R. Hoffman of Fort Wayne, Ind., sailed for Mediterranean ports Tuesday on the Exeter.

Sailing on the New York Thursday night were Mrs. Henrietta Loefler, Mrs. Henrietta Rogers, and Dr. Franz Pfister, the latter a professor at Marquette university. On the Columbus, leaving New York at the same time, were Frederick J. Bincks of Chicago and Walter J. Ball and Dr. Richard B. Wetherill of Lafayette, Ind. On the Europa when it sails tonight will be Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Wesoat and Mrs. Rachel L. Johnstone of Chicago and Albert H. Noyes of Winnetka.

A trip through France and Germany has been planned by Dr. and Mrs. E. L. Chainski, who took passage on the Champlain yesterday with their son Edward. Debarking from the same ship, Frank Newhouse and his son Franklin will motor through France, Spain, Switzerland, and Italy. The Misses Gertrude and Grace Voight will visit Paris and then continue northward through the Netherlands to Denmark, Norway and Sweden. Also crossing on the Champlain are Miss Vera English, who plans to spend the summer at Fontainebleau; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Stein, Miss Georgette Bizollier, and Mrs. Frank W. Jones.

Mrs. Thomas E. Wells of Lake Forest and Mrs. May Wells Noyes of Winnetka sailed yesterday on the Britannic for Worcester, England, where they will stay this summer. Mrs. S. M. Bloss is taking the same ship for France, where she plans to remain for two months. Others aboard the Britannic are Dr. and Mrs. Dewet Vorster and their sons, Dewet and Paul, bound for South Africa, and Mrs. Wilfred Sykes.

Taking Their Sons to English School.

Mrs. Fred Conne and Mrs. Leslie Cobleigh left Friday on the Carinthia with their sons, Frederick Conne and Teddy Cobleigh, whom they will enter in an English school. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mawson, who will remain abroad until the end of September, also left on the Carinthia, as did Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Alsdorf and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Kendzin.

The Statendam, which has been in the West Indies cruise service since last December, started Friday on her first 1936 crossing in the trans-Atlantic service. Among those aboard from Chicago are Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Bretall, Mr. and Mrs. Mathew Keck, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Kenerson, Miss G. Van Tuin, Miss Siva Silbara, Stephen Mousel, Mrs. C. J. Lanting, Miss K. Van Dam, Paul Gourguechon, A. Wories, Mrs. Henry Tap, and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Kollen.

W. A. Trubeck will spend a month's vacation almost entirely aboard ship. He sailed yesterday on the California for a round trip from New York to San Francisco and back via the Panama canal. Also aboard are Miss Grace Alexander and Miss Rose Hug.

On the Monarch of Bermuda when it left for Bermuda were Mr. and Mrs. James Rodgers of Chicago.

William J. Quigley and his daughter Patricia, returned from Europe Thursday on the Champlain. Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Zundalek and Kind Schrager of Chicago and Mrs. Hazel Chase West of Evanston returned the same day on the Vulcania.

GOING SOMEWHERE?

ABOUT to be placed in service as the world's fastest long distance train, the City of Los Angeles was on exhibition at the North Western station Wednesday and Thursday, when it was previewed by thousands of Chicagoans. The 11 car streamliner will make its maiden "voyage" over the Chicago and North Western-Union Pacific lines starting May 18, and thereafter will make five "sailings" a month. The plan is to have it maintain a 39¾ hour schedule for the 2,299 miles between this city and Los Angeles; this will give it an average speed of a little more than 57½ miles an hour. Meanwhile, another new streamliner, the Santa Fe railroad's Super-Chief, will go into service May 12 and, like its rival, will reach Los Angeles in 39¾ hours. The distance over the Santa Fe lines is only 2,225 miles, so that the Super-Chief will be required to maintain a speed of approximately 56 miles an hour in order to keep within the 40 hour limit.

The second annual Chicago Church federation pilgrimage to the Holy land was announced last week. The tour to numerous points of historical and religious interest in the old world has been arranged particularly for Chicago ministers, church officials, and laymen and women. It will leave New York June 19, last 78 days, and visit 14 countries.

Manager Fred Semb of the German railroads information office in Chicago received word the other day that in 1935 a total of 1,500,000,000 passengers rode 24,544,000 passenger miles in that country. This was approximately 30 per cent more than on all class one railroads in the United States, and was higher by 9.5 per cent than the figure for 1934. With 33,957 miles of track, the German Railroad company is said to be the world's largest single enterprise of its kind.

Chicagoans who have spent irritating week-ends throughout the winter in bewailing the fact that they couldn't get out into the open will have the open brought to them this week. The National Boat and Sports show opens at Navy pier today and closes next Sunday evening. Thousands of square feet will be devoted to exhibits of outdoor sports and activities, and actual scenes in woods and forests will be shown. Native wild animals, native vegetation, and naturalistic settings are to be featured.

Nine months in advance of the sailing date the next cruise of the North German Lloyd liner Columbus around South America was announced yesterday. The cruise will start from New York Feb. 6 and, in the course of 47 days, take in the Panama canal, the West Indies, the Straits of Magellan, and the entire east and west coasts of the southern continent. For this occasion the Columbus has been chartered by Raymond-Whitcomb, Inc. Last winter's cruise over the same route, and with the same agency in charge, was sold out several months before the time for departure.

A large group of boys from the New Trier Township High school at Winnetka will tour Europe this summer, with F. D. Frisbie as faculty sponsor. The party will embark on the Pilsudski of the Gdynia American line July 7 and will visit Scotland, England, France, Germany, and Denmark. The students will be entertained by Field Marshal Viscount Allenby at his estate near London, and will go down the Rhine to Trier.

One of the main appeals of cruises to Norway and the Baltic countries lies in the fact that they take their passengers into cool northern waters at a time when temperatures are reaching the peak in the United States. Among the ships scheduled for such a cruise this summer is the Gripsholm of the Swedish-American line. Sailing from New York July 25, it will thread its way through the Norwegian fjords before visiting Bergen, Oslo, Gothenburg, Copenhagen, Visby, Stockholm, Helsingfors, and Leningrad.

Inexpensive holiday cruises aboard an Atlantic liner from New York to Canadian ports will be taken again this season. The Canadian Pacific has arranged to have the Duchess of Atholl, a 30,000 ton oil burner, leave at midnight on July 22, Aug. 1, Aug. 11, and Aug. 21 for Quebec and Montreal. This will be the company's sixth year of such trips to French Canada.

The eyes of many Chicagoans will be turned this week toward Benton Harbor and St. Joseph, where the Southwestern Michigan Blossom festival begins today. The program includes an auto caravan through the orchards tomorrow afternoon, a spring choral ensemble Tuesday evening, the blossom queen's reception, banquet, coronation, and ball Wednesday evening, a juvenile ball and crowning of the bud queen Thursday evening, an illuminated Mardi Gras parade Friday evening, a floral parade Saturday afternoon, the Knights of the Blossoms' ball Saturday night, and an air circus next Sunday afternoon.

Stavanger Asks for Terminus in Air-Sea Service

Norwegian Port of 45,000 People Enjoys an 'All Year Ice Free Harbor.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—In the scramble of European countries for establishment of a terminus for a proposed trans-Atlantic air route Stavanger, Norway, recently has been mentioned. If that city should be chosen the Norwegian government, it is reported, would provide necessary land and seaplane facilities there.

"Stavanger, a port city of 45,000 inhabitants, faces an all year ice free harbor near the southern extremity of Norway," says the National Geographic society.

"It's name is not new to international shipping men for it is one of the leading ports on the Scandinavian peninsula. Neither should it be new to American housewives, especially among those who prepare summer snacks and picnic lunches, for many millions of sardines, brought from North sea fisheries, annually are canned and shipped from this port.

A Busy Dorway to All Norway.

"Not only is Stavanger's geographical location an important factor in connection with the proposed air route, the port already is a busy doorway to all Norway. A railway now links it with Flekkefjord to the south, crossing Jaeren, a wide, fertile coastal plain which ranks with the richest agricultural regions in the kingdom. Another line, now under construction, will bring Oslo, the Norwegian capital, within a few hours' train ride. Regular steamship service now handles most of the trafic between Stavanger and the capital.

"When America was a wilderness and Europeans were just getting a foothold on the Atlantic seaboard, Stavanger was a city of importance. It was, as it is now, the port for an enormous fishing fleet. Go down to the docks today and you will discover the part that fish play in the city's economic life. Many craft simply dump their catch into transports for delivery to canneries. Others line a portion of the harbor where they are visited by Stavanger housewives, who buy the finny creatures while they are still flopping.

"Old Stavanger, a little cramped, still exists with its narrow streets. In it is one of the most beautiful Gothic cathedrals in northern Europe, a product of builders of the middle ages. Surrounding the old town is modern Stavanger with its broader streets, fine residences, and up to date shops. There is also a large city park encircling a mirrorlike lake.

Residents Turn to Modern Fashions.

"On the streets and in the park, the traveler may be disappointed when he fails to find colorful Norwegian costumes, for residents of the city wear modern European fashions. To see the native costumes, one must visit the market place on market days, where men, women and children from the outlying rural districts congregate to sell their merchandise, and talk. Over piles of vegetables, buxom blonde women in rainbow colors preside while their sturdy husbands, also in native costumes, wander here and there tidying their 'stands' passing the time of day with neighbors, or making purchases at nearby stores. Wide flowing skirts of homespun are worn by the women while big legged trousers of the same material are donned by the men. Above the waistlines of both are handsomely embroidered waists and vests in gay tints.

"When business hours are over, Stavanger forgets sardines, fish and vegetables. In the summer, the inhabitants throng an excellent beach washed by the chilly but invigorating waters of the North sea. Scores of pleasure craft, from tiny skiffs to huge yachts, ride at anchor, or stir the harbor waters. Summertime in Stavanger, as in all southern Norway, is always pleasant. There is never excessive heat and the nights are always cool."

BEAUTY IS WHERE YOU FIND IT.

Chicago, April 19.—To the Travel Editor: I can't tell you how much I enjoy the Travel department of THE TRIBUNE, even though I cannot ever hope to see the many wonderful things described therein. I do wish, however, that you had a department about the ordinary trips a person in moderate circumstances—a business girl, preferably—who has only two weeks a year in which to take a very economical vacation, might enjoy.

Personally, I do not even own a car and have done my traveling entirely by bus, usually alone, and I have seen many wonderful things. I have seen the Grand canyon, the skyline of New York, and the Big Trees of California, but the moments which stand out poignantly in my memory, moments of ineffable beauty, are not those when my eyes rested upon the world famous sights. To me the ten most beautiful things I have ever beheld are as follows [and no one ever told me about them, either]:

1. The Sangre de Cristo mountains in late afternoon, seen from the Puye ruins—pearly, translucent, unbelievable, crimson shadows dripping down from the peaks. I knew why the Spaniards had named them, reverently, "Blood of Christ."
2. Late evening in a boat on Yellowstone lake; soft purples and rose tints creeping down the mountainsides, the lake a turquoise blue.
3. Sunset on Salton sea—gold of desert, utter loneliness, a soft raspberry, aquamarine, and gold sky, greenish gold waters.
4. A picnic luncheon on a large flat rock in the middle of a frothy little mountain stream in the Great Smokies; water trickling over the rocks, rhododendrons in bloom all along the edges of the stream.
5. Riding above banks of clouds in the Great Smokies.
6. The first sight of Old Faithful in the moonlight.
7. From a seat under the Campanile at Berkeley, Cal., looking straight out through Golden Gate as the sun set; gold pathway on the water. That is why it was called "Golden Gate." I knew it then, though I have never read or heard so.
8. A three mile fence of roses at least six feet high, surrounding an orange grove in full bloom, brilliant sunlight over all; up in the mountains to our right a violent thunderstorm in full view.
9. Coming through the pass at Banning, Cal., from the desert, a panorama of orange groves with their white blossoms and golden fruit—they DO come at the same time—golden tinted sycamores by a small stream, snow-capped peaks over all.
10. About 2 o'clock one September night in the desert in the extreme northwest corner of Arizona. The bus stopped for a rest just after crossing through the flooded Virgin river hitched to a team of horses—the bus, not the river. Stars like diamonds in the clearest, bluest, most gorgeous sky in the world, and such air! Arizona nights!

This letter is too long, and I know you cannot publish such a screed. But I cannot resist going on. I want to get it all down. There are the ten great thrills—things not necessarily beautiful, but certainly intensely interesting:

1. A dense cotton-wool fog on the St. Lawrence.
2. A dirty, travel worn tramp steamer slinking into Mobile harbor. Probably all the things I thought of her were sheer imagination.
3. Finding TEN of the very rare and exquisite crimson snow plants under the leaves at the foot of one of the sequoias in Grant National park.
4. The row of jacaranda trees in full bloom in some little town in California. The blue, blue, BLUE of their blossoms! I had never heard of jacarandas, and I have never met anyone since in the east who has.
5. The first sight of Quebec and its ancient citadel from a river boat about 5 in the morning.
6. Darkey stevedores singing and swinging up and down the gangplank of a Tennessee river packet as they loaded ties.
7. The smell of the White House gardens one night near midnight while walking around moonlit Washington. The sights are forgotten, but the yucca, magnolia, linden fragrance of that June night linger on.
8. Sitting on the porch at the Lee home in Arlington, magnolia blossoms all around, looking off over the Potomac toward Washington, the spirits of the heroic dead perhaps hovering near in the one moment of quiet. The tomb of L'Enfant in sight.
9. A golden eagle hanging over the bus, giant wings full spread.
10. The first sight of a certain young man met at Tusuque, N. M., where I had gone to see one of the Indian dances.

Tell me, do your world travelers get any MORE out of their gadding? M. E. B.

HE VOTES FOR CHILE.

Ottumwa, Ia., April 22.—To the Travel Editor: I enjoyed very much reading your list of travel high spots in The Sunday Tribune of April 12. Also, I enjoyed the various lists in the issue of the 19th. I have seen most of the places mentioned in all the lists, but there is one outstanding scenic region that, as I remember, none of the lists has mentioned.

Chile is, I believe, the world's longest, narrowest country, and in southern Chile is a small area that is commonly referred to as the lake and mountain region. In my opinion, for magnificent scenery, sheer beauty, and loveliness, it is not surpassed—to say the least—by any similar region in the world.

There is Mount Osorno, a great volcanic mountain, sleeping now for some hundred years, a perfect cone shaped peak in pure white, perhaps more lovely than Fujiyama, the sacred mountain of Japan. At the base of Osorno is Lago Llanquihue, round and blue, a dream of color.

Then there is Lago Todos los Santos—meaning "Lake of All Saints"—sea green, long and narrow, with many arms, a lake of wondrous beauty, surrounded by mountains.

Nearby is Puntiagudo, a steep mountain, like a great white marble monument, which shoots up a pointed head to pierce the clouds—a mountain unclimbed by man.

Then there is El Tronador—"The Thunderer"—rugged and mighty, named from the booming sound of its great glaciers. Also Lago Nahuel Haupi, very large and very blue, with a border of snow capped mountains.

Though it is in the temperate zone, owing to the great rainfall the plant and tree life of this region grows with tropical luxuriance, and is beautiful beyond words. Great trees in bloom, a blaze of color, tree ferns, wild fuschias, loaded with bloom, graceful bamboo, age-old trees, and a wealth of flowers, ground ferns, and vines—all beyond description. FRED H. HALL.

HELL AND HEAVEN IN CHICAGO.

Chicago, April 25.—To the Travel Editor: I have been reading all the "ten best scenic wonders of the world," written by "the voices of travelers," but I was vastly disappointed by the lack of loyalty of so-called Chicagoans, who mention every place under the sun and moon, but nary a mention of Chicago. Is it because nearness lends disenchantment? I think not.

I have traveled all over these United States and Canada and Mexico, yet I consider the following the greatest scenic spectacles of the world:

1—The view of the Chicago skyline while floating on your back on the ever-emerald waters of beautiful Lake Michigan, with one eye on the bathing beauties basking on the sandy beaches and tanned by the gloriously golden sun.
2—The stockyards at sunrise, with the radiant sun streaming through the ebony clouds of mal-fragrant smoke.
3—The Maxwell street Ghetto at 3 o'clock in the mellow morning, with the translucent sapphire moonlight vying with the eloquent absence of talking hands, hirsute beards, and innocuous aromas.
4—Watching a snowstorm on Boul Mich from the top of the Tribune Tower on a wintry night with the sparkling iridescent electric signs lending an effect of evanescent charm.
5—The South Chicago steel mills on a midsummer midnight, as viewed from the Navy pier, the brilliantly blazing red, white, and yellow flames creating a havoc of hell in the high heavens.
6—The view of the Chicago panorama from the Goodyear blimp, with a beautiful blonde cuddling close to you, her fear a darn good excuse for getting that close.
7—The night prayers of the Eucharistic congress at Soldiers' field, with 100,000 candles flickering tremulously while a quarter of a million voices sing: "Holy God, We Praise Thy Name."
8—The dazzling pyrotechnic display at A Century of Progress, playing a medley of beautiful colors, with the illuminated sky ride, the streamlined lighting system, et al.
9—Lincoln park at sunset, with a governess perambulating a baby and accompanied by one of Chicago's finest and Jackson park at moonlight in a canoe on a lagoon.
10—Any Chicago street being torn up by a picturesque gang of WPA workers—an etching by Millet.

STAN LEE KAPUTSKA.

THE STORY OF MANKIND.

Chicago, April 26.—To the Travel Editor: In traveling I have never been interested in sheer natural beauty alone. Always in the achievements of man. From such one derives both beauty and an additional feeling of fellowship with the continuity of humanity. Thus:

1—Athens and its ruins, the site of man's finest thinking.
2—Rome, with its thought-provoking relics.
3—The forts of Verdun.
4—Stockholm—modern man at his best.
5—The fields of Gettysburg.
6—Bavarian Alps—nature dwarfing man.
7—The temples of Thebes—same effect as Rome.
8—Cathedral of Durham—man in the middle ages.
9—Stratford-on-Avon—genius comes anywhere.
10—The fields of Waterloo—"the paths of glory."

P. C.

WONDERS OF AMERICA.

Chicago, April 27.—To the Travel Editor: The ten wonders I have seen on the North American continent are:

1—The Canadian Rockies.
2—Glacier National park.
3—Floating Gardens of Xochimilco.
4—Grand canyon and geysers in Yellowstone National park.
5—Carlsbad caverns.
7—Mount Rainier from Paradise inn.
8—North and south rims of the Grand Canyon of the Colorado.
9—Yosemite National park.
10—Bryce canyon.

ARDELL WESTERBERG.

AFTER CAREFUL CULLING.

Chicago, April 26.—To the Travel Editor: Your little game of "ten greatest sights," I note, takes some careful concentration and culling. Highly interesting! Here are my selections:

1—Any of a score of assorted views over Canandaigua lake [Finger lakes, New York state], by moonlight, sunlight, noon, midnight, dawn, sunset, fog, or storm.
3—Heidelberg, seen in its valley, from the castle gardens.
4—The Rhine valley at Liechtenstein, viewed from Samina.
5—Pink dawn striking Notre Dame de Montmartre, seen up an alley from the boulevards.
6—The Scottish bagpipes playing retreat in the Citadel at Cairo.
7—The Belfry of Bruges by sunset, seen from across the market place.
8—First view of the sun flooded valley of Poschiavo, after coming over the Bernina pass.
9—Cardinals in the cottonwoods of Cherokee park, Louisville.

W. M. LAUMAN.

MEMORIES.

Chicago, April 28.—To the Travel Editor: The following scenes stand out in my "Memory lane":

1—Rustic Vermont from atop Mount Mansfield.
2—Donner pass, California, in the throes of a blizzard.
3—The English countryside between Newark and Retford.
4—The Dalmatian coast, with its varying landscapes.
5—Picturesque Old Town, Lisbon, Portugal.
6—The valley of the Rhine.
7—The Austrian Tyrol.
8—Castle of Miramar at sunrise, Trieste, Italy.
9—The winding Seine from the terrace of the Pavillon Henri-Quatre, Saint-Germain.
10—The cathedral at Durham, England, mirrored in the River Wear below.

I would like to add the Loire country.

CLAUDE BARBER.

ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

Arlington Heights, Ill., April 29.—To the Travel Editor: These are my favorites among the scenic wonders I have seen in my travels:

4—Crossing to Great Salt lake.
5—Sunrise on Pike's peak.
6—Crater lake.
7—The painted desert and petrified forest.
8—The Golden Gate at San Francisco.
9—Glacier National park.
10—The Black hills of South Dakota.
11—The Buchart gardens in Victoria, B. C.

ELIZABETH M. LAMBERT.

FROM THE UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN.

Madison, Wis., April 28.—To the Travel Editor: May I add my list of the ten greatest sights in those parts of the world which I have seen?

1—Taj Mahal.
2—Funeral dance in Bali.
3—Grand canyon of the Colorado.
4—Grand Teton from Jenny lake.
5—Mount Kanchenjunga from Darjeeling, India.
6—Florence, Italy, by moonlight.
7—Khyber pass from Jamrud to Landi Kotal.
8—The Colosseum.
9—San Francisco bay at night from hills back of Berkeley.
10—Times square, New York, with its electrical displays in the evening.

Add honorable mention to:

11—"Aloha" as the ship pulls out from Honolulu.
12—Shwe Dagon pagoda, Rangoon.
13—Whitsunday passage, Great Barrier reef, Australia.
14—Syrian desert by starlight.

Singapore Hindus Do Penance with Spears in Bodies

SINGAPORE.—This is the story of the Feast of Thipusum, a Hindu ceremonial which takes place every year in this city.

White clad Hindus go slowly down the street, stopping every few yards to voice a weird chant. In their midst is one of their countrymen, carrying on a form of pennance. He is clad only in short white trousers, but wears a string of huge wooden beads with a fantastic charm at the end of it. Over the upper part of his body and his head is an ungainly wooden structure dangling with other charms and partially supporting dozens of spears. The business ends of these spears are thrust into his body from the waist up. He fairly radiates them.

Small silver needles are stuck into his arms up to his shoulders. A peculiar contrivance holds his tongue half way out of his mouth, while instruments somewhat like hatpins are stuck in each side of his face at the root of the tongue. Drawn behind him is a small cart, harnessed to his body by fishhooklike arrangement thrust into his hips. The strangest part of it is that there is never sign of any kind of bodily or mental distress.

There may be a dozen such groups on the streets of Singapore each day during the feast period, which lasts a week. When the pennance is done the groups return to the temple, where the curious paraphernalia are removed. In each case the worshipper is given a mouthful of lime juice. He then proceeds happily on his way, apparently much better for his experience.

During the feast the temples are open to the public. The idol of the god Vishna, half man and half peacock, is studded with jewels of every description. It is drawn about the streets constantly by two white bullocks. At the end of the week the god and his goddess are brought out to view the huge fireworks display.

Two Huge Bridges Attract Tourists at San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—In and around San Francisco this year tourists will find themselves in the midst of a herculean effort at empire building. The unusual enterprise of building the world's two greatest bridges simultaneously at a total cost of $110,700,000 has reached the stage of climaxes in spectacular construction. The San Francisco-Oakland bay bridge, a structure more than eight miles long, is now taking on the appearance of completion, and it will be ready for trafic early next November. The Golden Gate bridge, which boasts the longest single span in the world—4,200 feet—will be completed next year.

In as much as both are hailed as unprecedented engineering feats and the methods of building them are distinctly novel, sightseers will find them at their height of interest this spring and summer.

Beggars Issue Paper.

BUDAPEST.—(AP)—"BBB," which stands for the Budapest Beggars' Bulletin, is the name of a newspaper which has made its appearance here to "serve the interests of the beggars of the city." It carries ads of crutches, glass eyes, and hand organs and quotes prices for hiring babies to stimulate generosity.

'No Admittance' Poster Relic of Jewish Temple

JERUSALEM.—(AP)—The Greek inscribed fragment of a plaque believed part of a series once posted in the Jewish temple area, warning Christians not to enter, was uncovered by excavations for a new road near Saint Stephens gate in the old city.

Inscribed in both Hebrew and Latin, the fragment is believed to date back to the early part of the first Christian century.

oland Emerges s Beauty Spot on Travel Maps

ncient Land, Thoroughly Rejuvenated, Shows the Vitality of Second Youth.

By Theodore Irwin.

A NATION old as the hills and yet new enough to demonstrate the vitality of a second youth, Poland today presents a ab bag of surprises to the visitor. anding in the forefront of interest nong the nations of Europe, it is a scinating land, eminently worthy of leisurely tour.

Occupying an area of 150,000 square iles, Poland is the fifth largest couny in Europe and, with more than ,000,000 inhabitants, ranks sixth in pulation. It lies in a strategic posin for the globe trotter, for Warw, the capital, is at the geographl center of the continent and therere easily and quickly accessible to ery other important city.

The magnificence of Poland's sceny is matched by its variety. In the uth are snowy peaks and swift flowg streams among the Tetra mounins. In the north the country flatns into fertile plains where famous lesie, with its lakes, wild marshes, d broad meadows, sleeps peacefully. the east is the national park at ialowieza—largest virgin forest exnse in Europe—with its rare herd buffalo. Picturesque hills and valys, gorges, and azure lakes dotting e country everywhere make a trip rough the country a rare experince.

urope's Seventh argest City.

Warsaw, on the Vistula, is the sevnth largest city in Europe. Here the odern mingles with the medieval to roduce a city of contrasts. A landark is the Old Market place, which oks today exactly as it did four cenuries ago. It stands in the old part the town, the Stare Miasto, interoven by picturesque back streets nd gaily painted sixteenth century ouses. The Lazienki, built by the ast Polish king; the renowned Fuier wine cellars which boast of vinages as far back as 1606; the world's ost powerful broadcasting station earby at Raszyn; the National and rt museums—these are some of the hings which shouldn't be missed. Vith its night clubs, opera, concert alls, theaters, and cafés, Warsaw is continental city at its best.

Cracow, in the southwest, is Pond's most characteristic city, unitng and representing the nation's old world culture and architecture. Craow's chief pride is the Wawel, the ncient fortress-castle where for more han 600 years Polish kings and heroes ere buried. At the Wawel there is collection of Dutch tapestries valued t a million dollars each. In the ourtyard knights of old held their ournaments. Museums offer not only he art of Polish genius, but masterpieces by Leonardo da Vinci, Titian, nd Rembrandt. A few miles to the south of Cracow are the old salt mines of Wieliczka which contain an underground city, 1,000 feet beneath the surface, and carved from the salt rock. Here are two large chapels, long corridors, streets, a ballroom, postoffice—all carved out of salt crystals—a subterranean lake, and a "population" of 1,700 miners. Year after year, in their spare time, the miners have worked at their salt sculpture.

From Fishing Village to Leading Port.

On the outskirts of Lwow, "City of Lions," is the Pantheon, which houses the panorama of the Battle of Raclawice, part of which depicts Kosciuszko leading his army, made up of peasants armed with scythes, against the Russians. In northeastern Poland, Wilno is the cultural, political, and economic center, a short distance away in the forest of Bialowieza. Poznan, capital of Poland in the 10th and 11th centuries, has a wealth of relics attesting to its ancient glory. Here, too, was held the first national exposition of independent Poland, affirming Poznan's leadership in commerce and industry. Torun, surrounded by gates and walls preserved since the middle ages, with its unique Sloping tower; Czestochowa, with its shrine of St. Mary; Dobno, with its beautiful 15th century wooden church; Zolkiew, with its old stone walls—in all parts of the country these cities will make the traveler pause.

The first place the visitor sees, Gdynia, will sound the right keynote for rejuvenated, colorful, and hospitable Poland. Symbol of the rebirth of the nation, the new miracle made-to-order port on the Baltic is the country's bay window to the world. It represents everything that is new and modern in Poland. A little more than a decade ago it was a lonely fishing village on a stretch of sand dunes; today it is the leading port on the Baltic, and the fourth busiest in Europe. Here may be seen wide promenades, excellent hotels, banks, miles of wide, well lighted, paved streets, a yacht club, bathing beach, theaters, and cafés. Europe's youngest port, it is the most up to date, with its forest of traveling portal cranes, the second largest refrigerating plant in the world, rice mill, oil mill, and giant warehouses. Through Gdynia passes almost half of Poland's commerce.

Rainbow Colored Costumes the Rule.

As a people the Poles everywhere will be found to be gay and hospitable, particularly to Americans, whom they admire. Every rural sector has a different peasant type. Not far from Warsaw is Lowicz, chiefly famed for its natives, who wear rainbow colored handwoven costumes. They are seen at their best on Sundays after church, at festivals, and on market days. In the Eastern Beskidy the Huculs are a handsome and artistic race. Most picturesque are the Gorale, in the Tatras, a high spirited, happy hearted mountaineer folk who dress in costumes so medieval that visitors rub their eyes to see if it is real. They wear short, tight fitting jackets, embroidered, homespun trousers, and helmets, and the fame of their skill at wood sculpture has spread even to America. Among the peasants a brilliant affair to witness is the ceremony attending a wedding; it is considered one of the most fascinating to be seen anywhere on the globe.

Unusual sights greet the traveler in all parts of the country. One trip particularly should not be missed. Americans like to take the voyage down the Dunajec river, which flows through the Goral country. Skilled boatmen pole these quaint boats, built from tree trunks hollowed out by hand and firmly bound together by fibers and sticks. Each bend of the river reveals new wonders; to each peak is attached a legend, and each wooded slope is a living picture. Over whirling rapids the boat is poled and as it glides along, native music—the vivid melodies of the Gorals, the exciting Oberstrases—is heard in the distance.

Whole Country Seen at a Glance.

On the Pomeranian shores lovers of the sea find excellent resorts. The hamlets of Hel, Bor, Jasterine, and Kusnica, with their white sandy beaches, as well as the more sophisticated resorts at Jastrzobia Goral, Kamieniec, and Gdynia, yearly attract thousands.

The visitor is fortunate if he happens to be there during those periods when national festivities are taking place. Late in June the Festivity of Wreaths is celebrated on St. John's eve throughout rural Poland. The great religious pageant of the year is the procession of Corpus Christi, which takes place at Easter; for impressive pageantry, color, devotion, and form the Polish ritual surpasses those of Italy, Spain, and Canada. In the middle of August the Dozynki, equivalent of the American Thanksgiving, is celebrated at the end of the harvest season. Then there are the brilliant Festival of the Spring, the Lakjonik, the "pageant of the little wooden horse," carnival time in Warsaw early in February, and the great pilgrimage to Czestochowa on Sept. 8.

BLOSSOM TIME IN THE FAR EAST

A cherry tree in the deer park at Nara, Japan. Many of the world tourists plan to reach Japan in the spring, when the blossoming is, of course, at its height.

LILAC TIME

COLORPHOTOS
BY GODFREY LUNDBERG
OF THE TRIBUNE STAF

The lilac, favorite flower of Chicagoland, again will be in bloom within a few days, and fragrant blossoms gathered throughout the metropolitan area will be distributed to hospitals, social settlements, and other institutions of the city caring for the sick, crippled, and infirm. City and suburban garden clubs, schools, parks, country clubs, and estate owners will co-operate in the eighth annual "Share Your Lilacs" campaign, sponsored by the Chicago Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild and The Chicago Tribune. The lilacs pictured here were photographed during last year's campaign.

The True Simplicity of Greatness in these English Complexion Aids

Crowds gather always to watch their entrance—these fair young women of England and America bidden to one of the world's most important social gatherings. . . . Almost never can you detect the slightest imperfection in their radiance—or in the scarcely less youthful complexions of their distinguished sponsors.

All of them share the same international code of beauty. And for years, famous Yardley of London has been making their exquisitely simple—but perfect—beauty aids. If you've an urge for crystal-clear, fine-textured beauty like theirs, here is their method for you!

First, an exquisite facial bath, with a lather that's like a fragrant, gentle cloud of purity. Only Yardley's English Lavender Soap can make it.

Then, snowy English Complexion Cream used once a day or oftener for recleansing, softening and refining. (You may add Night Cream if your skin is especially dry. Foundation if you prefer a special powder base.)

And afterward, a mist of Yardley's delicate English Lavender Powder. So fresh and full of vitality it adds a lovely bloom to your skin that lasts for hours.

Find these ingredients for your English Complexion wherever you look for fine cosmetics. With Yardley's luxurious things for bath and make-up also. And send for our new book CT-3, "Beauty Secrets from Bond Street," to tell you more about them. Yardley & Co., Ltd., 620 Fifth Avenue (Rockefeller Center), New York; 33, Old Bond Street, London; and in Paris, Toronto, Sydney.

YARDLEY'S ENGLISH LAVENDER

Yardley's English Lavender—the refreshing fragrance that's like no other—in smart containers, priced from 45c to $35. Yardley's English Lavender Powder, in seven glorious shades including delicate English Peach and radiant Gipsy, $1.10. English Lavender Soap, 35c a tablet, large size, and English Complexion Cream, $1.10 ($2.50 for a triple quantity). For skins aged or dried by climate, Yardley's rich, retexturing Night Cream, $1.10, and Yardley's Foundation, in the pale-rose container, at 85c. Yardley's Cream Rouge, 85c, and Indelible Lipstick, $1.10, will complete the picture with unusual subtlety.

INSTALL WILLIAMS

OIL-O-MATIC HEAT

THERE'S mutiny in the basements of America! Mutiny against the dirt and drudgery, the unevenness and unhealthfulness of old-fashioned, inefficient coal heat. Thousands are changing to clean, automatic, economical Williams Oil-O-Matic heat.

And here's why. Mass production (Williams Oil-O-Matic is the world's largest selling oil burner) has reduced Oil-O-Matic prices 50% in the last five years! Yet today's Oil-O-Matic is the finest ever built. It wrings the last drop of heat from every ounce of oil. Burns the low priced fuel oils that save you hundreds of dollars. Add to this what Oil-O-Matic saves in janitor service, ash hauling, cleaning and decorating, and doctor bills due to uneven heat. No wonder owners say, "Oil-O-Matic costs no more than coal!"

Don't shovel coal another season —nor another day! A Williams Oil-O-Matic oil burner can be quickly installed in your present heating plant. For new homes Oil-O-Matic is provided in complete boiler-burner and furnace-burner units.

Act now! Generously easy terms under FHA plan . . . nothing to pay until October, low interest charges, 12 to 36 months to pay.

DRAW OUT THE WHOLE CORN ROOT AND ALL—THIS EASY WAY

CUTTING or paring a corn gives temporary relief. But it's dangerous! Even a tiny nick may cause serious infection. And paring merely trims off the "head" of a corn—leaves the rest of it, the root of it, stuck in the toe. That's why the corn soon grows back again, worse than ever.

But Blue-Jay draws out the entire corn—root and all—as though it were a tack! Gently, safely. The corn is gone for good. Easy to use—gives instant relief—try it! A box of Blue-Jay is only 25¢ at all druggists.

IN wrong!

YOU can't help feeling sorry for her—the girl who seems to be "in wrong" with everyone.

She's pretty—but men avoid her. She's good company—but girls let her alone. She's simply out of things. And why?

Well, bluntly, because underarm perspiration odor makes her unpleasant to be near.

And the pity of it is, she has nobody to blame but herself. For it's so easy, these days, to keep the underarms fresh, free from odor all day long. With Mum!

It takes just half a minute to use Mum. And you can use it any time—before dressing or afterwards. Mum is harmless to clothing, you know.

It's soothing to the skin, too. You can use it right after shaving the underarms.

The daily Mum habit will prevent every trace of underarm odor without preventing perspiration itself. Get this helpful habit—it pays socially! Bristol-Myers, Inc., 630 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Exercise and strengthen the intestinal muscles

This is the story of a young lady who was determined to be healthy. Every morning, she did her setting-up exercises. Over the week-end—tennis and swimming. Yet, in spite of it all, she still suffered from constipation.

Then she heard of a new kind of exercise—a laxative with "exercising action."

Safe—Pleasant to take

After breakfast and dinner, she takes a teaspoonful of Saráka*—tiny granules which are easily swallowed with a glass of water. During the next two hours, these granules undergo an amazing change. Gradually they e-x-p-a-n-d. And turn into soft BULK.

"Get busy and exercise," this extra bulk signals to lazy intestinal muscles. "This is what you've been waiting for during all these sluggish months—something to exercise on—something to make you stronger."

Bulk Plus Motility*

In addition—to make sure that the extra bulk keeps in motion—Saráka contains a specially prepared frangula, which mildly stimulates the intestines to healthy activity. So you have Bulk Plus Motility—a combination not found in ordinary laxatives.

In fact, laxative is the wrong word for Saráka. Its results are so natural yet thorough that most users have no sensation of having taken a laxative. They are reminded of healthy childhood when constipation was unknown.

Ask your doctor about Saráka. We are confident he will tell you that it is absolutely safe and non-habit forming. It takes advantage of the most recent discoveries in intestinal hygiene. You will find this modern laxative at your druggist's. Or mail the coupon today.

When Performance Is As Modern As Appearance

People everywhere notice, and admire, the appearance of the Lincoln-Zephyr. Every graceful flowing streamline stamps it the modern car. But use, rather than observation, reveals the Lincoln-Zephyr's true virtues. . . . Performance is as modern as appearance!

The smooth, luxurious performance of twelve cylinders makes driving the Lincoln-Zephyr a delight—through traffic, on the open road, or in the hill country. And, often to an owner's amazement, he discovers that the V-12 motor runs from 14 to 18 miles on a gallon!

Owners, too, are impressed with a new rhythm of riding—on bad roads or good, a comfort they have never known before. The long generous body is cradled on soft transverse springs. The weight of all six passengers is balanced skilfully "amidships." Seats are like divans. Head room and leg room and visibility are generous.

In this new kind of car are many forward-reaching ideas in design and engineering. Streamlines, for instance, mean much more than "style." They result from the new construction. Underneath them are light, strong trusses of steel, as in the bridge. Body and frame are one, welded together—a rigid structure, and a safe one. The man or woman used to expensive cars is the first to realize that within the last few years great progress has been made in the automotive art. In the Lincoln-Zephyr the owner finds, today, the car of the years to come! The Lincoln-Zephyr is the only twelve-cylinder car priced under $3000.

V-12 cylinder motor developing 110 horsepower. Wheelbase 122 inches. Springbase 133 inches. Room for six passengers and luggage. Choice of seven colors. Safety Glass throughout. Owners report from 14 to 18 miles per gallon of gasoline.
